HIM that is weak in the faith receive ye, but not to doubtful disputations.

2 For one believeth that he may eat all things: another, who is weak, eateth herbs.

3 Let not him that eateth despise him that eateth not; and let not him which eateth not judge him that eateth: for God hath received him.

4 Who art thou that judgest another man's servant? to his own master he standeth or falleth. Yea, he shall be holden up: for God is able to make him stand.

5 One man esteemeth one day above that which is indifferent: another, who is weak, esteemeth it as a day of abstinence.

6 He that eateth, eat to the Lord, as if he were to God; and he that drinketh, drink to the Lord, as if he were to God.

another: another esteemeth every day like. Let every man be fully persuaded of his own mind.

He that regardeth the day, regardeth it unto the Lord; and he that regardeth not the day, to the Lord he doth not regard it. He that eateth, eateth to the Lord, for he giveth God thanks; and he that eateth not, to the Lord he eateth not, and giveth God thanks.

For none of us liveth to himself, and man dieth to himself.

For whether we live, we live unto the Lord; and whether we die, we die unto the Lord: whether we live therefore, or we are the Lord's.

For to this end Christ both died, and rose, and revived, that he might bring both of the dead and living.

But why dost thou judge thy brother? or why dost thou set at nought thy brother? for we shall all stand before the judgment seat of Christ.

For it is written, As I live, saith the Lord, every knee shall bow to me, and every tongue shall confess to me.

So then every one of us shall give account of himself to God.

Let us not therefore judge one another any more: but judge this rather, no man put a stumblingblock or occasion to fall in his brother's way.

I know, and am persuaded by the Lord Jesus, that there is nothing unclean of itself: but to him that eateth any thing to be unclean, to it is unclean.

But if thy brother be grieved with meat, now walkest thou not charitably. Destroy not him with thy meat, whom Christ died.

Let not then your good be evil in of:

For the kingdom of God is not in drink; but righteousness, peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost. For he that in these things serves Christ, is acceptable to God, and reed of men.

Let us therefore follow after the things which make for peace, and things with which one may edify another.

For meat destroy not the work of God. All things indeed are pure; but evil for that man who eateth with conscience.

It is good neither to eat flesh, nor drink wine, nor any thing whereby thou stumblest, nor is offendeth made weak.

But thou faith? have it to thyself. Happy is he that sinneth not himself in that thing which is allowable.

CHAPTER 15.

1 The strong must bear with the weak. 2 We may not please ourselves, 3 for Christ did not so, 7 but receive one the other, as Christ did us all, 8 both Jews and Gentiles. 15 Paul accuseth his writing, 28 and promiseth to see them, 30 and requesteth their prayers.

1 WE then¹ that are strong ought to bear the² infirmities of the weak, and not to please ourselves.

2 Let every one of us please his neighbour for his good³ to³ edification³.

3 For³ even Christ³ pleased not himself; but, as it is written, The reproaches of them that reproached thee fell on me.

4 For⁴ whatsoever things were written aforetime were written for our learning, that we through⁴ patience⁴ and comfort of⁴ the scriptures might have⁴ hope⁴.

5 Now the God of patience⁵ and consolation⁵ grant you to be likeminded one toward another according to Christ Jesus:

6 That ye may⁶ with one mind and one mouth glorify⁶ God, even the Father⁶ of our Lord Jesus Christ.

7 Wherefore⁷ receive ye one another, as Christ also received⁷ us to the glory of God.

8 Now⁸ I say that⁸ Jesus Christ was a minister of the circumcision for the truth of God, to confirm the promises made unto the fathers:

9 And⁹ that the Gentiles⁹ might glorify⁹ God for his mercy; as it is written, For this cause I will confess¹⁰ to thee among the Gentiles, and sing unto thy name.

10 And again¹⁰ he¹⁰ saith, Rejoice, ye Gentiles, with his people.

11 And again, Praise the Lord, all ye Gentiles; and laud him, all ye people.

12 And again, Esaias saith, There shall be¹² a root of Jesse, and he shall shall rise to reign over the Gentiles; in him shall the Gentiles trust.

13 Now the God of hope fill you with all joy and peace in believing, that ye may abound in hope, through the power of the Holy Ghost.

14 And I myself also am persuaded of you, my brethren, that ye also¹⁴ are full of goodness, filled with all knowledge, able also to admonish one another.

15 Nevertheless, brethren, I have written the more boldly unto you in some sort, as putting you in mind, because of the grace that is given to me of God,

16 That I should be¹⁶ the minister of Jesus Christ to the Gentiles, ministering the gospel¹⁶ of God, that the

1^a offering up of the Gentiles might be acceptable, being sanctified by the Holy Ghost.

17 I have therefore ¹⁷ whereof I may glory through ¹⁷ Jesus Christ ¹⁸ in ¹⁸ those things which pertain to God.

18 For I will not dare to speak of any of those things ^a which Christ hath not wrought by me, ^a to make the Gentiles obedient, by word and deed, 19 ^a Through mighty ¹⁹ signs and wonders, by the power of the ^a Spirit of God ^a; so that from Jerusalem, and ^a round ^a about ^a unto ^a Illyricum, I have ^a fully preached ^a the gospel of Christ.

20 ^a Yea, so have I strived to preach the gospel ^a, not where Christ was named, ^a lest I should build upon another man's foundation:

21 But as it is written, / To whom he was not spoken of, they shall see: and they that have not heard shall understand.

22 For which cause also ^a I have been ^a much ^a hindered from coming to you.

23 But now having no more ^a place ^a in these parts, and ^a having a great desire these many years to come unto you;

24 Whosoever I take my journey into Spain, ^a I will come to you ^a; for I trust to see you in my journey, ^a and to be brought on my way thitherward by you, if first I be somewhat filled ^a with your company.

25 But now ^a I go unto Jerusalem ^a to minister ^a unto the saints.

26 For ^a it hath pleased them of Macedonia and Achaia to make a certain contribution for ^a the poor saints which are at Jerusalem ^a.

27 It hath pleased them verily; and their debtors they are. For ^a if the Gentiles have been made ^a partakers of their spiritual things, ^a their duty is also to minister unto them in carnal things.

28 When therefore I have performed this, and have ^a sealed ^a to them ^a this fruit, I will come ^a by ^a you into Spain.

29 ^a And I am sure that, when I come unto you, I shall come in the fulness of the blessing of ^a the gospel of ^a Christ.

30 Now I beseech you, brethren, for the Lord Jesus Christ's sake, and ^a for the love of the Spirit, ^a that ye strive together with me in your prayers to God for me;

31 ^a That I may be delivered from them that ^a do not believe ^a in Judea; and that ^a my ^a service which I owe ^a for Jerusalem may be accepted of the saints;

32 ^a That I may come unto you with joy ^a by the will of ^a God ^a, and may with you be ^a refreshed.

33 Now ^a the God of peace be with you all. Amen.

CHAPTER 16.

3 Paul willeth the brethren to greet many, ^a and exhorteth them to take heed of them which cause division and offence, ^a and after many salutations endeth with praise and thanks to God.

I COMMENT unto you Phoebe our sister, which is a ^a servant ^a of the church which is at ^a Cenchrea:

2 ^a That ye receive her in the Lord, as becometh saints, and that ye assist her in whatsoever business she hath need of you: for ^a she ^a hath been a ^a succour ^a of many, and of myself also.

3 Greet ^a Priscilla ^a and Aquila my helpers in Christ Jesus:

4 Who have for my life laid down their own necks: unto whom not only I give thanks, but also all the churches of the Gentiles.

5 Likewise greet ^a the church that is in their house. ^a Salute ^a my wellbeloved Epenetus, who is ^a the firstfruits of Achaia ^a unto Christ.

6 Greet Mary, who bestowed much labour on ^a us ^a.

7 ^a Salute ^a Andronicus and Junia ^a, my kinsmen, and my fellowprisoners, who are ^a of note among the apostles ^a, who also ^a were in Christ before me.

8 Greet ^a Amplias ^a my beloved in the Lord.

9 ^a Salute ^a Urbane ^a, our helper in Christ, and Stachys my beloved.

10 ^a Salute ^a Apelles approved in Christ. ^a Salute ^a them which are of Aristobulus household.

11 ^a Salute ^a Herodion my kinsman. ^a Greet them that be of the household of Narcissus, which are in the Lord.

12 ^a Salute ^a Tryphena and Tryphosa, who labour in the Lord. ^a Salute ^a the beloved Persis, which laboured much in the Lord.

13 ^a Salute ^a Rufus ^a, chosen ^a in the Lord, and his mother ^a and mine ^a.

14 ^a Salute ^a Asyncritus, Philegon, ^a Hermas, Patrobas, Hermes ^a, and the brethren which are with them.

15 ^a Salute ^a Philologus, and Julia, Nereus, and his sister, and Olympus, and all the saints which are with them.

16 ^a Salute ^a one another with an holy kiss. The churches of Christ ^a salute ^a you.

17 Now I beseech you, brethren, mark them ^a which cause ^a divisions ^a, and offences contrary to the doctrine which ye have learned; and ^a avoid them.

18 For they that are such serve not our

7 So then neither is he that planteth any thing, neither he that watereth; but God that giveth the increase.

8 Now he that planteth and he that watereth are one: ² and every man shall receive his own reward according to his own labour.

9 For we are labourers together with God: ye are God's husbandry, ye are God's building.

10 According to the grace of God which is given unto us, as a wise master-builder, I have laid ³ the foundation, and another buildeth thereon. But let every man take heed how he buildeth thereupon.

11 For other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ.

12 Now if any man build upon this foundation gold, silver, precious stones, wood, hay, stubble;

13 Every man's work shall be made manifest: for the day ⁴ shall declare it, because it shall be revealed ⁵ by fire; and the fire shall try every man's work of what sort it is.

14 If any man's work abide which he hath built thereupon, he shall receive a reward.

15 If any man's work shall be burned, he shall suffer loss: but he himself shall be saved; yet so as by fire.

16 Know ye not that ye are the temple of God, and that the Spirit of God dwelleth in you?

17 If any man defile ⁶ the temple of God, him shall God destroy: for the temple of God is holy, which temple ye are.

18 Let no man deceive himself. If any man among you seemeth ⁷ to be wise in this world, let him become a fool, that he may be wise.

19 For the wisdom of this world is foolishness with God. For it is written, He taketh the wise in their own craftiness.

20 And again, The Lord knoweth the thoughts of the wise, that they are vain.

21 Therefore let no man glory in men. For all things are your's;

22 Whether Paul, or Apollos, or Cephas, or the world, or life, or death, or things present, or things to come; all are yours;

23 And ye are Christ's; and Christ is God's.

CHAPTER 4.

1 In what account the ministers ought to be had.
2 We have nothing which we have not received.

3 The apostles spectacles to the world, angels, and men, 12 the filth and obscuring of the world: 15 yet our fathers in Christ, 16 whom we ought to follow.

1 Let a man so account of us, as of the ministers of Christ, and stewards of the mysteries of God.

2 Moreover y it is required y in stewards, that a man be found faithful.

3 But with me it is a very small thing that I should be judged ² of you, or of man's judgment: yea, I judge ³ not mine own self.

4 For I know nothing ⁴ by myself ⁵; yet am I not hereby justified: but he that judgeth ⁶ me is the Lord.

5 Therefore judge nothing before the time, until the Lord come, who both will bring to light the hidden things of darkness, and will make manifest the counsels of the hearts: and I then shall every man have praise ⁷ of God.

6 And these things, brethren, I have in a figure transferred to myself and to Apollos for your sakes; ⁸ that ye might learn in us not to think of men above that which is written, that no one of you be puffed up for one against another ⁹.

7 For who maketh thee to differ ¹⁰ from another? and what hast thou that thou didst not receive? now if thou didst receive it, why dost thou glory, as if thou hadst not received it?

8 Now ye are full, now ye are rich, ye have reigned as kings without us; and I would to God ye did reign, that we also might reign with you.

9 For I think that God hath set forth us the apostles last, as it were appointed to death: for we are made a spectacle unto the world, and to angels, and to men.

10 We are fools for Christ's sake, but ye are wise in Christ; we are weak, but ye are strong; ye are honourable, but we are despised.

11 Even unto this present hour we both hunger, and thirst, and are naked, and are buffeted, and have no certain dwelling-place.

12 And labour, working with our own hands: being reviled, we bless; being persecuted, we suffer it:

13 Being defamed, we intreat: we are made as the filth of the world, and are the offscouring of all things unto this day.

14 I write not these things to shame you, but as my beloved sons I warn you.

15 For though ye have ten thousand instructors in Christ, yet have ye not many fathers: for in Christ Jesus I have begotten you through the gospel.

16 Wherefore I beseech you, be ye followers of me.

17 For this cause have I sent unto you Timothy, who is my beloved son, and faithful in the Lord, who shall bring you into remembrance of my ways which he in Christ, so as I teach every where in every church.

18 Now some are puffed up, as though I would not come to you.

19 But I will come to you shortly, if the Lord will, and will know, not the speech ¹¹ of them which are puffed up, but the power.

20 For the kingdom of God is not in word ¹², but in power.

"Thou shalt not muzzle the mouth of the ox that treadeth out the corn. Doth God take care for oxen?"

10 Or saith he it altogether for our sakes? For our sakes, no doubt, this is written: "that" he that ploweth should plow in hope; and that he that thresheth in hope should be partaker of his hope.

11 If we have sown unto you spiritual things, is it a great thing if we shall reap your carnal things?

12 If others be partakers of this power over you, are not we rather? Nevertheless we have not used this power; but suffer all things, lest we should hinder the gospel of Christ.

13 Do ye not know that they which minister about holy things live of the things of the temple? and they which wait at the altar are partakers with the altar?

14 Even so "hath the Lord ordained" that they which preach the gospel should live of the gospel.

15 But I have used none of these things: neither have I written these things: for it seems better for me to die, than that any man should make my glorying void.

16 For though I preach the gospel, I have nothing to glory of: for necessity is laid upon me; yea, woe is unto me, if I preach not the gospel!

17 For if I do this thing willingly, I have a reward: but if against my will, it is a dispensation of the gospel is committed unto me.

18 What is my reward then? Verily that, when I preach the gospel, I may make the gospel of Christ without charge, that I "abuse" not my power in the gospel.

19 For though I be "free from all men," yet have I made myself servant unto all, that I might gain the more.

20 And unto the Jews I became as a Jew, that I might gain the Jews; to them that are under the law, as under the law, that I might gain them that are under the law;

21 To them that are without law, as without law, (being not without law to God, but under the law to Christ,) that I might gain them that are without law.

22 To the weak became I as weak, that I might gain the weak: "I" am made all things to all men, "that I might by all means save some."

23 And this I do for the gospel's sake, that I might be partaker thereof with you.

24 Know ye not that they which run in a race run all, but one receiveth the prize? So run, that ye may obtain.

25 And every man that "striveth for the mastery is temperate in all things. Now they do it to obtain a corruptible crown; but we an incorruptible."

26 I therefore so run, "not as uncertainly; so I fight," I, not as one that beateth the air:

27 But I keep under "my body, and bring it into subjection: lest that by any means, when I have "preached" to others, I myself should be "cast away."

CHAPTER 10.

1 The sacraments of the Jews are types of our's. 2 And their punishments, 11 examples for us. 14 We must fly from idolatry. 21 We must not make the Lord's table the table of devils: 24 and in things indifferent we must have regard of our brethren.

MOREOVER, brethren, I would not that ye should be ignorant, how that all our fathers were under "the cloud, and all passed through" the sea; 2 And all were baptized unto Moses in the cloud and in the sea; 3 And did all eat the same "spiritual" meat;

4 And did all drink the same "spiritual" drink: for they drank of "that" "spiritual" Rock that I followed them: and that Rock was Christ.

5 But with "many" of them God was not well pleased: for they "were overthrown in the wilderness."

6 Now these things were "four examples," to the intent we should not lust after evil things, as they also lusted.

7 Neither be ye idolaters, as were some of them; as it is written, "The people sat down to eat and drink, and rose up to play."

8 Neither let us commit fornication, as some of them committed, and fell in one day three and twenty thousand.

9 Neither let us tempt "Christ," as some of them also tempted, and "were destroyed of serpents."

10 Neither murmur ye, as some of them also murmured, and "were destroyed of the destroyer."

11 Now all these things happened unto them for "examples;" and they are written for our admonition, upon whom the ends of the "world" are come.

12 Wherefore let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall.

13 There hath no temptation taken you but such as is "common to man;" but

'God is faithful, who will not suffer you to be tempted above that ye are able; but will with the temptation also make a way to escape, that ye may be able to bear it. 14 Wherefore, my dearly beloved, flee from idolatry.

15 I speak as to ye plainly; judge ye what I say.

16 'The cup of blessing? which we bless, is it not the communion of the blood of Christ? The bread which we break, is it not the communion of the body of Christ?

17 For we being many are one bread, and one body: for we are all partakers of that one bread.

18 Behold Israel after the flesh: are not they which eat of the sacrifices partakers of the altar?

19 What say I then? that the idol is any thing, or that which is offered in sacrifice to idols is any thing?

20 But I say, that the things which the Gentiles sacrifice, they sacrifice to devils, and not to God: and I would not that ye should have fellowship with idols.

21 Ye cannot drink the cup of the Lord, and the cup of devils: ye cannot be partakers of the Lord's table, and of the table of devils.

22 Do we provoke the Lord to jealousy? are we stronger than he?

23 All things are lawful for me, but all things are not expedient: all things are lawful for me, but all things edify not.

24 Let no man seek his own, but every man another's wealth.

25 Whatsoever is sold in the shambles, that eat, asking no question for conscience sake.

26 For the earth is the Lord's, and the fulness thereof.

27 If any of them that believe not bid you to a feast, and ye be disposed to go; whatsoever is set before you, eat, asking no question for conscience sake.

28 But if any man say unto you, This is offered in sacrifice unto idols, eat not for his sake that shewed it, and for conscience sake: for the earth is the Lord's, and the fulness thereof.

29 Conscience, I say, not thine own, but of the other: for why is my liberty judged of another man's conscience?

30 For if I by grace be a partaker, why am I evil spoken of for that? for which I give thanks?

31 Whether therefore ye eat, or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God.

32 Give none offence, neither to the Jews, nor to the Gentiles, nor to the church of God:

33 Even as I please all men in all things, not seeking mine own profit, but the profit of many, that they may be saved.

CHAPTER 11.

1 He reproacheth them, because in holy assemblies, 4 their men prayed with their hands covered, and 6 women with their heads uncovered, 17 and because generally their meetings were not for the better but for the worse, as 21 manifestly in professing with their own hearts the Lord's supper. 25 Lastly, he collecteth them to the first institution thereof.

BE ye followers of me, even as I also am of Christ.

2 Now I praise you, brethren, that ye remember me in all things, and keep the ordinances, as I delivered them to you.

3 But I would have you know, that the head of every man is Christ; and the head of the woman is the man; and the head of Christ is God.

4 Every man praying or prophesying, having his head covered, dishonoureth his head.

5 But every woman that prayeth or prophesieth with her head uncovered dishonoureth her head: for that is even all one as if she were shaven.

6 For if the woman be not covered, let her also be shorn: but if it be a shame for a woman to be shorn or shaven, let her be covered.

7 For a man indeed ought not to cover his head, forasmuch as he is the image and glory of God: but the woman is the glory of the man.

8 For the man is not of the woman; but the woman is of the man.

9 Neither was the man created for the woman; but the woman for the man.

10 For this cause ought the woman to have power as the church, because of the angels.

11 Nevertheless neither is the man without the woman, neither the woman without the man, in the Lord.

12 For as the church is of the man, even so is the man also by the woman; but all things of God.

13 Judge in yourselves: is it comely that a woman pray unto God uncovered?

14 Doth not even nature itself teach you, that, if a man have long hair, it is a shame unto him?

15 But if a woman have long hair, it is a glory to her: for her hair is given her for a covering.

16 But if any man seem to be contentious, we have no such custom, neither the churches of God.

17 Now in this that I declare unto you I praise you not, that ye come together not for the better, but for the worse.

18 For first of all, when ye come together in the church, I hear that there be divisions among you; and I partly believe it.

19 For there must be also heresies among you, that they which are approved may be made manifest among you.

20 When ye come together therefore into one place, |this is not to eat the Lord's supper.

21 For in eating every one taketh before of his own supper: and one is hungry, and another is drunken.

22 What? have ye not houses to eat and to drink in? or despise ye the church of God, and shame them that have not? What shall I say to you? shall I praise you in this? I praise you not.

23 For ye have received of the Lord that which also I delivered unto you, *That the Lord Jesus the same night in which he was betrayed took bread:

24 And when he had given thanks, he brake it, and said, Take, eat: this is my body, which is broken for you: this do ye in remembrance of me.

25 After the same manner also he took the cup, when he had supped, saying,

11 This cup is the new testament in my blood: this do ye, as oft as ye drink it, in remembrance of me.

26 For as often as ye eat this bread, and drink this cup, I ye do shew the Lord's death till he come.

27 Wherefore whosoever shall eat this bread, and drink this cup of the Lord, unworthily, shall be guilty of the body and blood of the Lord.

28 But let a man examine himself, and so let him eat of that bread, and drink of that cup.

29 For he that eateth and drinketh unworthily, eateth and drinketh damnation to himself, not discerning the Lord's body.

30 For this cause many are weak and sickly among you, and many sleep.

31 For if we would judge ourselves, we should not be judged.

32 But when we are judged, we are chastened of the Lord, that we should not be condemned with the world.

33 Wherefore, my brethren, when ye come together to eat, tarry one for another.

34 And if any man hunger, let him eat at home; that ye come not together unto condemnation. And the rest will I set in order when I come.

CHAPTER 12.

1 Spiritual gifts are divers, I put all to profit without. 5 And to that end are diversely bestowed: 13 that by the like proportion, as the members of a natural body tend all to the 16 mutual decency, 23 service, and 26 succour of the same body; 27 so we should do one for another, to make up the mystical body of Christ.

NOW concerning spiritual gifts, brethren, I would not have you ignorant.

2 Ye know that ye were Gentiles, carried away unto these dumb idols, even as ye were led.

3 Wherefore I give you to understand, that no man speaking by the Spirit of God calleth Jesus accursed: and that no man can say that Jesus is the Lord, but by the Holy Ghost.

4 Now there are diversities of gifts, but the same Spirit.

5 And there are differences of administrations, but the same Lord.

6 And there are diversities of operations, but it is the same God which worketh all in all.

7 But the manifestation of the Spirit is given to every man to profit withal:

8 For to one is given by the Spirit the word of wisdom; to another the word of knowledge by the same Spirit;

9 To another faith by the same Spirit; to another the gifts of healing by the same Spirit;

10 To another the working of miracles; to another prophecies; to another discerning of spirits; to another divers kinds of tongues; to another the interpretation of tongues:

11 But all these worketh that one and the selfsame Spirit, dividing to every man severally as he will.

12 For as the body is one, and hath many members, and all the members of that one body, being many, are one body: so also is Christ.

13 For by one Spirit are we all baptised into one body, whether we be Jews or Gentiles, whether we be bond or free; and have been all made to drink into one Spirit.

14 For the body is not one member, but many.

15 If the foot shall say, Because I am not the hand, I am not of the body; is it therefore not of the body?

16 And if the ear shall say, Because I am not the eye, I am not of the body; is it therefore not of the body?

17 If the whole body were an eye, where were the hearing? If the whole were hearing, where were the smelling?

18 But now hath God set the members every one of them in the body, as it hath pleased him.

19 And if they were all one member, where were the body?

20 But now are they many members, yet but one body.

21 And the eye cannot say unto the hand, I have no need of thee: nor again the head to the feet, I have no need of you.

22 Nay, much more those members of the body, which seem to be more feeble, are necessary:

23 And those members of the body, which we think to be less honourable, upon these we bestow more abundant honour; and our uncomely parts have more abundant comeliness.

24 For our comely parts have no need: but God hath tempered the body together, having given more abundant honour to that part which lacked:

25 That there should be no schism in the body; but that the members should have the same care one for another.

26 And whether one member suffer, all the members suffer with it; or one member be honoured, all the members rejoice with it.

27 Now ye are the body of Christ,⁷ and members in particular.⁸
28 And God hath set some in the church, first apostles, secondarily prophets, thirdly teachers, after that miracles, then gifts of healings, ⁹ helps, ¹⁰ governments, ¹⁰ diversities of tongues.
29 Are all apostles? are all prophets? are all teachers? are all workers of miracles? 30 Have all the gifts of healing? do all speak with tongues? do all interpret? 31 But covet earnestly the best gifts: and yet shew I unto you ¹² a more excellent way ¹³.

CHAPTER 13.

1 All gifts, 2, 3 how excellent soever, are nothing worth without charity. 4 The praises thereof, and 13 prelation before hope and faith.

THOUGH I speak with the tongues of men and of angels, and have not charity, I am become as sounding brass, or a tinkling cymbal.

2 And though I have the gift of prophecy, and understand all mysteries, and all knowledge; and though I have all faith, so that I could remove mountains, and have not charity, I am nothing.

3 And though I bestow all my goods to feed the poor, and though I give my body to be burned, and have not charity, it profiteth me nothing.

4 Charity suffereth long, and is kind; charity envieth not; charity vaunteth not itself, is not puffed up.

5 Doth not behave itself unseemly, seeketh not her own, is not easily provoked, thinketh no evil;

6 Rejoiceth not in iniquity, but rejoiceth in the truth;

7 Beareth all things, believeth all things, hopeth all things, endureth all things.

8 Charity never faileth: but whether there be prophecies, they shall fail; whether there be tongues, they shall cease; whether there be knowledge, it shall vanish away.

9 For we know in part, and we prophesy in part.

10 But when that which is perfect is come, then that which is in part shall be done away.

11 When I was a child, I spake as a child, I understood as a child, I thought as a child: but when I became a man, I put away childish things.

12 For now we see through a glass,

12 darkly; but then face to face: now I know in part; but then shall I know even as also I am known. 13 And now faith, hope, charity, these three; but the greatest of these is charity.

CHAPTER 14.

1 Prophecy is commended, 2, 3, 4 and preferred before speaking with tongues, 5 by a comparison drawn from musical instruments. 12 Such must be referred to edification, 21 as to their true and proper end. 26 The true use of each is taught, 27 and the abuse taught. 28 Women are forbidden to speak in the church.

FOLLOW after charity, and desire spiritual gifts, but rather that ye may prophesy.

2 For he that speaketh in an unknown tongue speaketh not unto men, but unto God: for no man understandeth him; howbeit in the spirit he speaketh mysteries.

3 But he that prophesieth speaketh unto men to edification, and exhortation, and comfort.

4 He that speaketh in an unknown tongue edifieth himself; but he that prophesieth edifieth the church.

5 I would that ye all spake with tongues, but rather that ye prophesied: for greater is he that prophesieth than he that speaketh with tongues, except he interpret, that the church may receive edifying.

6 Now, brethren, if I come unto you speaking with tongues, what shall I profit you, except I shall speak to you either by revelation, or by knowledge, or by prophesying, or by doctrine?

7 And even things without life giving sound, whether pipe or harp, except they give a distinction in the sounds, how shall it be known what is piped or harped?

8 For if the trumpet give an uncertain sound, who shall prepare himself to the battle?

9 So likewise ye, except ye utter by the tongue words easy to be understood, how shall it be known what is spoken? for ye shall speak into the air.

10 There are, it may be, so many kinds of voices in the world, and some of them are without signification.

11 Therefore if I know not the meaning of the voice, I shall be unto him that speaketh a barbarian, and he that speaketh shall be a barbarian unto me.

12 Even so ye, forasmuch as ye are zealous of spiritual gifts, seek that ye may excel to the edifying of the church.

13 Wherefore let him that speaketh in 8 And last of all he was seen of me also, as of one born out of due time.

9 For I am the least of the apostles, that am not meet to be called an apostle, because I persecuted the church of God.

10 But by the grace of God I am what I am; and his grace which was bestowed upon me was not in vain; but I laboured more abundantly than they all: yet not I, but the grace of God which was with me.

11 Therefore whether it were I or they, so we preach, and so ye believed.

12 Now if Christ be preached that he rose from the dead, how say some among you that there is no resurrection of the dead?

13 But if there be no resurrection of the dead, then is Christ not risen:

14 And if Christ be not risen, then is our preaching vain, and your faith is also vain.

15 Yea, and we are found false witnesses of God; because we have testified of God that he raised up Christ: whom he raised not up, if so be that the dead rise not.

16 For if the dead rise not, then is not Christ raised:

17 And if Christ be not raised, your faith is vain; ye are yet in your sins.

18 Then they also which are fallen asleep in Christ are perished.

19 If in this life only we have hope, we are of all men most miserable.

20 But now is Christ risen from the dead, and become the firstfruits of them that slept.

21 For since by man came death, by man came also the resurrection of the dead.

22 For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive.

23 But every man in his own order: Christ the firstfruits; afterward they that are Christ's at his coming.

24 Then cometh the end, when he shall have delivered up the kingdom to God, even the Father; when he shall have put down all rule and all authority and power.

25 For he must reign, till he hath put all enemies under his feet.

26 The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death.

27 For he hath put all things under his feet. But when he saith all things are put under him, it is manifest that he is excepted, which did put all things under him.

28 And when all things shall be subdued unto him, then shall the Son also himself be subject unto him that put all things under him, that God may be all in all.

29 Else what shall they do which are baptised for the dead, if the dead rise not at all? why are they then baptised for the dead?

30 And why stand we in jeopardy every hour?

31 I protest by your rejoicing which I have in Christ Jesus our Lord, I die daily.

32 If after the manner of men we have fought with beasts at Ephesus, what advantage it me, if the dead rise not? let us eat and drink; for to morrow we die.

33 Be not deceived: evil communications corrupt good manners.

34 Awake to righteousness, and sin not; for some have not the knowledge of God: I speak this to your shame.

35 But some men will say, How are the dead raised up? and with what body do they come?

36 Thou fool, that which thou sowest is not quickened, except it die:

37 And that which thou sowest, thou sowest not that body that shall be, but bare grain, it may chance of wheat, or of some other grain:

38 But God giveth it a body as it hath pleased him, and to every seed his own body.

39 As flesh is not the same flesh; but there is one kind of flesh of men, another flesh of beasts, another of fishes, and another of birds.

40 There are also celestial bodies, and bodies terrestrial: but the glory of the celestial is one, and the glory of the terrestrial is another.

41 There is one glory of the sun, and another glory of the moon, and another glory of the stars; for one star differeth from another star in glory.

42 So also is the resurrection of the dead. It is sown in corruption; it is raised in incorruption:

43 It is sown in dishonour; it is raised in glory: it is sown in weakness; it is raised in power:

44 It is sown a natural body; it is raised a spiritual body. There is a natural body, and there is a spiritual body.

45 And so it is written. The first man Adam was made a living soul:

46 The last Adam was made a quickening spirit.

47 Howbeit that which is spiritual, and afterward that which is spiritual.

48 The first man is of the earth, earthy: the second man is the Lord's

VAR. RECD.—19 V. 54. Lt. into, unto.—Chap. 16.

1 V. 2. Lt. whatever he may be (have been) A C. WH prospered (to gain): so Al. De W. Me.; what his messes allow him to give Be. Ol. Ed. = V. 2. So Wo.; them will I send by letters (i.e. with letters as credentials) Al. De. De W. Me. Ol. Ed. Sts.

1 V. 4. if it (the money collected) be worthy that I go Al. De W. Me. Ol. — 4 V. 5. have passed De W. Ol. — 4 i.e. mean to pass Al. De W. Me. Sts. Wo. (to travel without stopping Me.)

VAR. RECD.—V. 40. Be. Wo. WH Al.; let us also bear N A O D. Lt. Ti. Tr. — V. 51. Be. Wo. (as Al. Be. De. Ol. Wo. translate this reading, and so practically De W. Ed., and Be. perhaps, but Me. Wi. translate we all shall—not sleep—but be changed all) B D³ D⁴ Pr. and some other versions, Orig. Ti. Tr. Al. WH. Er.; We shall all sleep, but we shall not all be changed M C (perhaps A). La.; we shall all rise again, but we shall not all be changed D², and Vulgate. — V. 54. Be. Wo. WH Al.; death M² B C D, Kdd.

48 As is the earthy, such are they also that are earthy: / and as is the heavenly, such are they also that are heavenly.

49 And as we have borne the image of the earthy, Be we shall also bear the image of the heavenly.

50 Now this I say, brethren, that flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God; neither doth corruption inherit incorruption.

51 Behold, I shew you a mystery; Be We shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed Be, 52 In a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump: = for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed.

53 For this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality.

54 So when this corruptible shall have put on incorruption, and this mortal shall have put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, "Death is swallowed up in victory."

55 "O death, where is thy sting? O Be grave, where is thy victory?"

56 "The sting of death is sin; and the strength of sin is the law."

57 "But thanks be to God, which giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ."

58 "Therefore, my beloved brethren, be ye steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, forasmuch as ye know that your labour is not in vain in the Lord."

CHAPTER 16.

1 He exhorteth them to relieve the want of the brethren at Jerusalem. 10 Commendeth Timothy, 13 and after friendly admonitions, 16 shutteth up his epistle with divers salutations.

NOW concerning the collection for the saints, as I have given order to the churches of Galatia, even so do ye.

2 Upon the first day of the week let every one of you lay by him in store, as God hath prospered him¹, that there be no gatherings when I come.

3 And when I come, whomsoever ye shall approve by your letters, them will I send to bring your liberality unto Jerusalem.

4 And if it be to meet that I go² also, they shall go with me.

5 Now I will come unto you, when I shall pass through Macedonia: for I do pass through Macedonia.

6 And it may be that I will abide, yea, and winter with you, that ye may bring me on my journey whithersoever I go.

7 For I will not see you now by the way; but I trust to tarry a while with you, if the Lord permit.

8 But I will tarry at Ephesus until Pentecost.

9 For a great door and effectual is opened unto me, and there are many adversaries.

10 Now if Timotheus come, see that he may be with you without fear: for he worketh the work of the Lord, as I also do.

11 Let no man therefore despise him: but conduct him forth in peace, that he may come unto me: for I look for him with the brethren.

12 As touching our brother Apollo, I greatly desired him to come unto you with the brethren: but his will was not at all to come at this time; but he will come when he shall have convenient time.

13 Watch ye, stand fast in the faith, quit you like men, be strong.

14 Let all your things be done with charity.

15 I beseech you, brethren, ye know the house of Stephanas, that it is the firstfruits of Achaia, and that they have addicted themselves to the ministry of the saints, 16 That ye submit yourselves unto such, and to every one that helpeth with us, and laboureth.

17 I am glad of the coming of Stephanas and Fortunatus and Achaicus: for that which was lacking on your part¹⁰ they have supplied.

18 For they have refreshed my spirit and yours: therefore acknowledge ye them that are such.

19 The churches of Asia salute¹¹ you. Aquila and Be Priscilla salute you much in the Lord, with the church that is in their house.

20 All the brethren greet¹¹ you. Greet ye one another with an holy kiss.

21 The salutation of me Paul with mine own hand.

22 If any man love not the Lord Be Jesus Christ, let him be Be Anathema Be 13 Maranatha¹³.

23 The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you.

24 My love be with you all in Christ Jesus. Be Amen Be.

THE SECOND EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE

CORINTHIANS.

CHAPTER 1.

3 The apostle encourages them against troubles, by the comforts and deliverances which God had given him, as in all his afflictions, & so particularly in his late danger in Asia. 12 And calling both his own conscience and their's to witness of his sincere manner of preaching the immutable truth of the gospel, 15 he exhorteth his not coming to them, as proceeding not of lightness, but of his lenity towards them.

PAUL, an apostle of β Jesus Christ β by the will of God, and Timothy our brother, unto the church of God which is at Corinth, β with all the saints which are in all Achaia:

2 Grace be to you and peace from God our Father, and from the Lord Jesus Christ.

3 Blessed be God, even the Father of our Lord β Jesus Christ, the Father of mercies, and the God of all comfort;

4 Who comforteth us in all our tribulation, β that we may be able to comfort β them which are in any trouble, β by the comfort β wherewith we ourselves are comforted β of God.

5 For as the sufferings of Christ abound in us, so our consolation β also aboundeth by Christ.

6 And whether we be afflicted, β it is for your consolation β and salvation, β which is effectual β in the enduring of the same sufferings which we also suffer: or whether we be comforted, β it is for your consolation β and salvation.

7 And our hope of you is steadfast β , knowing, that β as ye are partakers of the sufferings, β so shall ye be also of the consolation.

8 For we would not, brethren, have you ignorant of β our trouble which came to us in Asia, that we were pressed out of measure, above strength, inasmuch that we despaired even of life.

9 But we had the sentence of death in ourselves, that we should not trust in ourselves, but in God which raiseth the dead:

10 Who delivered us from so great a death, and β doth deliver β in whom we trust, β that he will yet deliver β us;

11 Ye also β helping together by prayer for us, β that = for the gift bestowed upon us by the means of many persons thanks may be given by many on our behalf.

12 For our rejoicing β is this, the testimony of our conscience, that in β simplicity β and β godly sincerity, β not with fleshly wisdom, but by the grace of God, we have had our conversation β in the world, and more abundantly to you-ward.

13 For we write none other things unto you, than what ye read or acknowledge; and I trust ye shall acknowledge even to the end;

14 As also ye β have acknowledged β us in part, β that we are your rejoicing, even as β ye also β are ours in the day β of the Lord β Jesus.

15 And in this confidence I was minded β to come unto you before β , that ye might have β a second β benefit β ;

16 And to pass by you into Macedonia, and β to come again out of Macedonia unto you, and of you to be brought on my way toward Judea.

17 When I therefore was thus minded, did I use β lightness β ? or the things that I purpose, do I purpose β according to the flesh, that with me there should be yea yea, and nay nay?

18 But β as God is true β , our word β toward you β was not β yea, and nay.

19 For β the Son of God, β Jesus Christ β , who was preached among you by us, even by me and Silvanus and Timotheus, was not yea and nay, β but β in him was yea β .

20 For β all the promises of God in him are yea β , and in him Amen β , unto the glory of God by us.

21 Now he which stablisheth us with you in Christ, and β hath anointed us, is God;

CHAPTER 2.

1 Having showed his reason why he came not to them, he requireth them to forgive and to comfort that excommunicated person, 10 even as himself also upon his true repentance had forgiven him, 12 declaring whither he departed from Troas to Macedonia, 14 and the happy success which God gave to his preaching in all places.

BUT I determined this with myself, that I would not come again to you in heaviness.

2 For if I make you sorry, who is he then that maketh me glad, but the same which is made sorry by me?

3 And I wrote this same unto you, lest when I came, I should have sorrow from them of whom I ought to rejoice; having confidence in you all, that my joy is the joy of you all.

4 For out of much affliction and anguish of heart I wrote unto you with many tears; not that ye should be grieved, but that ye might know the love which I have more abundantly unto you.

5 But if any have caused grief, he hath not sorryed me, but in part: that I may not overcharge you all.

6 Sufficient to such a man is this punishment, which was inflicted on of many.

7 So that contrariwise ye ought rather to forgive him, and comfort him, lest perhaps such a one should be swallowed up with much sorrow.

8 Wherefore I beseech you that ye would confirm your love toward him.

9 For to this end also did I write, that I might know the proof of you, whether ye be obedient in all things.

10 To whom ye forgive any thing, I forgive also: for if I forgive any thing, ye to whom I forgive it, I forgive in the person of Christ.

11 Lest Satan should get an advantage of us: for we are not ignorant of his devices.

12 Furthermore, when I came to Troas to preach Christ's gospel, and a door was opened unto me of the Lord.

13 I had no rest in my spirit, because I found not Titus my brother: but taking my leave of them, I went from thence into Macedonia.

14 Now thanks be unto God, which always causeth us to triumph in Christ, and maketh manifest the savour of his knowledge by us in every place.

15 For we are unto God a sweet savour of Christ, in them that are saved, and in them that perish.

16 To the one we are savour of life unto life; and to the other savour of death unto death; and to the other savour of life unto life.

And who is sufficient for these things? 17 For we are not as many which corrupt the word of God: but as of sincerity, but as of God, in the sight of God speak we in Christ.

CHAPTER 3.

1 Lest their false teachers should charge him with singularity, he sheweth the faith and grace of the Corinthian to be a sufficient commendation of his ministry. 6 Whereupon entering a comparison between the ministers of the law and of the gospel, 12 he proveth that his ministry is so far the more excellent, as the gospel of life and liberty is more glorious than the law of condemnation.

DO we begin again to commend ourselves? or need we, as some others, epistles of commendation to you, or letters of commendation from you?

2 Ye are our epistle written in our hearts, known and read of all men:

3 Forasmuch as ye are manifestly declared to be the epistle of Christ ministered by us, written not with ink, but with the Spirit of the living God; not in tables of stone, but in fleshy tables of the heart.

4 And such trust have we through Christ to God-ward:

5 Not that we are sufficient of ourselves to think any thing as of ourselves; but our sufficiency is of God:

6 Who also hath made us able ministers of the new testament; not of the letter, but of the spirit: for the letter killeth, but the spirit giveth life.

7 But if the ministration of death, written and engraven in stones, was glorious; so that the children of Israel could not steadfastly behold the face of Moses for the glory of his countenance; which glory was to be done away:

8 How shall not the ministration of the spirit be rather glorious?

9 For if the ministration of condemnation be glory, much more doth the ministration of righteousness exceed in glory.

FOR we know that if ¹our earthly house of ²this tabernacle ³was dissolved, ⁴we have a building of God, an house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens.
 2 For in this ⁵we groan, earnestly desiring to be clothed upon with our house ⁶which is from heaven:
 3 ⁷So that ⁸being clothed we shall not be found naked.
 4 For we that are in this ⁹tabernacle do groan, being burdened: ¹⁰not for that we would be ¹¹unclothed, but ¹²clothed upon, that mortality might be swallowed up of life.
 5 Now ¹³he that hath wrought us for the selfsame thing ¹⁴is God, who ¹⁵also ¹⁶hath given unto us ¹⁷the earnest of the Spirit.
 6 Therefore ¹⁸we are always confident, knowing that, whilst we are at home in the body, we are ¹⁹absent ²⁰from the Lord:
 7 (For ²¹we walk by faith, not by sight:)
 8 We are confident, ²²I say, and ²³willing rather to be ²⁴absent ²⁵from the body, and to be ²⁶present ²⁷to the Lord.
 9 Wherefore ²⁸we labour, that, whether ²⁹present ³⁰or ³¹absent, we may be ³²accepted of him.
 10 For we must all ³³appear ³⁴before the judgment seat of Christ; ³⁵that every one may receive the things ³⁶done in his body, according to that he hath done, whether it be good or bad.
 11 Knowing therefore ³⁷the terror of the Lord, we persuade men; but ³⁸we are made manifest unto God; and ³⁹I trust also are made manifest in your consciences.
 12 For ⁴⁰by ⁴¹the commend not ourselves again unto you, but give you occasion ⁴²to glory on ⁴³our behalf, that ye may have somewhat to ⁴⁴answer them which glory ⁴⁵in appearance, and not in heart.
 13 For ⁴⁶whether we be beside ourselves, it is to God: or whether we be sober, it is for your cause.
 14 For the love of Christ constraineth us; because we thus judge, that ⁴⁷if one died for all, then ⁴⁸all were dead ⁴⁹in him:
 15 And that he died for all, ⁵⁰that they which live should henceforth live unto themselves, but unto him which died for them, and rose again.
 16 Wherefore, henceforth know we no man after the flesh: yea, though we have known Christ after the flesh, ⁵¹yet now henceforth know we him no more.
 17 Therefore if any man ⁵²be in Christ, he is ⁵³a new creature: ⁵⁴old things are passed away; behold, ⁵⁵all things are become new.

 18 And all things are of God, ⁵⁶who hath reconciled us to himself by ⁵⁷Jesus ⁵⁸Christ, and hath given to us the ministry of reconciliation;
 19 To wit, that ⁵⁹God was in Christ, reconciling the world unto himself, not imputing their trespasses unto them; and hath ⁶⁰committed unto us the word of reconciliation.
 20 Now then we are ⁶¹ambassadors for Christ, as ⁶²though God did beseech you by us, ⁶³we pray you ⁶⁴in Christ's stead, be ye reconciled to God.
 21 For ⁶⁵he hath made him to be sin for us, who knew no sin; that we might be made ⁶⁶the righteousness of God in him.

CHAPTER 6.

1 That he hath approved himself a faithful minister of Christ, both by his exhortations, 3 and by integrity of life, 4 and by patient enduring all kinds of affliction and distresses for the gospel, 10 of which he speaks the more boldly, amongst them, because his heart is open to them, 13 and he expecteth the like affliction from them again, 14 exhorting to flee the society and pollutions of idolaters, as being themselves temples of the living God.

WE then, as ⁶⁷workers together with him, beseech you also, that ye ⁶⁸receive not ⁶⁹the grace of God in vain.
 2 (For he saith, ⁷⁰I have heard thee in a time accepted, and in the day of salvation have I succoured thee: behold, now is the ⁷¹accepted ⁷²time; behold, now is the day of salvation.)
 3 Giving no ⁷³offence ⁷⁴in any thing, that the ministry be not blamed:
 4 But in all things ⁷⁵approving ourselves as the ministers of God's ⁷⁶in much patience, in afflictions, in necessities, in distresses,
 5 In stripes, in imprisonments, ⁷⁷in tumults, in labours, in watchings, in fastings;
 6 By ⁷⁸pureness, by ⁷⁹knowledge, by ⁸⁰longsuffering, by ⁸¹kindness, by ⁸²the Holy Ghost, by ⁸³love unfeigned,
 7 By the word of truth, by ⁸⁴the power of God, by the armour of righteousness on the right hand and on the left,
 8 By honour and dishonour, by evil report and good report: as deceivers, and yet true;
 9 As unknown, and yet well known; as chastened, and not killed;
 10 As sorrowful, yet always rejoicing; as poor, yet making many rich; as having nothing, and yet possessing all things.
 11 O ye Corinthians, our mouth is open unto you, ⁸⁵our heart is enlarged.
 12 Ye are not straitened in us, but ye are straitened in your own bowels.

13 Now ⁶ for a recompence in the same ⁶, (I speak as unto ⁶ my children,) be ye also once enlarged.

14 ⁶ Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers ⁶; for what fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousness ⁶; and what communion hath light with darkness ⁶?

15 And what concord hath Christ with Belial ⁶; or what part hath he that believeth with an infidel ⁶?

16 And what agreement hath the temple of God with idols ⁶; for ⁶ ye ⁶ are the temple of the living God; as God hath said, "I will dwell in them, and walk in them; and I will be their God, and they shall be my people."

17 ⁶ Wherefore come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing; and I will receive you, 18 ⁶ And will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty.

CHAPTER 7.

1 He proceedeth in exhorting them to purity of life, 2 and to bear him like affection as he doth to them. 3 Whereof last he might seem to doubt, he declarereth what comfort he took in his afflictions, by the report which Titus gave of their godly sorrow, which his former epistle had wrought in them, 13 and of their lovingkindness and obedience towards Titus, answerable to his former bounties of them.

HAVING ⁶ therefore these promises, dearly beloved, let us cleanse our selves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God.

2 ⁶ Receive us ⁶; we ⁶ have wronged no man, we have ⁶ corrupted ⁶ no man, ⁶ we have defrauded ⁶ no man.

3 I speak not ⁶ this to condemn you ⁶; for ⁶ I have said before, that ye are in our hearts to die and live ⁶ with you ⁶.

4 ⁶ Great is my ⁶ boldness of speech ⁶ toward you, ⁶ great is my glorying of you ⁶; / I am filled with comfort, I am exceeding joyful in all our tribulation.

5 For, ⁶ when we were come into Macedonia, our flesh had no rest, but ⁶ we were troubled on every side; ⁶ without were fightings, within were fears.

6 Nevertheless ⁶ God, that comforteth those that are cast down, comforted us by ⁶ the coming of Titus;

7 And not by his coming only, but by the consolation wherewith he was comforted in you, when he told us your earnest desire, your mourning, your fervent mind toward me; so that I rejoiced the more.

8 For though I made you sorry with ⁶ a letter ⁶, ⁶ I do not repent, ⁶ though I did repent: ⁶ for ⁶ I perceive that the same epistle hath made you sorry, though it were but for a season.

9 Now I rejoice ⁶, not that ye were made sorry, but that ye sorrowed to repentance: for ye were made sorry ⁶ after a godly manner, that ye might receive damage by us in nothing.

10 For ⁶ godly sorrow worketh repentance to salvation not to be repented of: ⁶ but the sorrow of the world worketh death.

11 For behold this selfsame thing, that ye sorrowed after a godly sort, what carefulness it wrought in you, yea, what clearing of yourselves, yea, what indignation, yea, what fear, yea, what vehement desire, yea, what zeal, yea, what revenge! In all things ye have approved yourselves to be clear in this matter.

12 Wherefore, though I wrote unto you, I did it not for his cause that had done the wrong, ⁶ nor ⁶ for his cause that suffered wrong, ⁶ but that ⁶ your care for you ⁶ in the sight of God might appear unto you.

13 Therefore we ⁶ were ⁶ comforted ⁶ in your comfort: yea, and exceedingly the more joyed we ⁶ for the joy of Titus, because his spirit ⁶ was ⁶ refreshed by you all.

14 For if I ⁶ have boasted any thing to him of you, I ⁶ am not ashamed ⁶; but as we spake all things to you in truth, even so ⁶ our ⁶ boasting, ⁶ which I made before Titus, is ⁶ found ⁶ to be a truth.

15 And his ⁶ inward affection is more abundant toward you, whilst he remembreth the obedience of you all, how with fear and trembling ye received him.

16 I rejoice therefore that ⁶ I ⁶ have confidence in you ⁶ in all things.

CHAPTER 8.

1 He stirrETH them up to a liberal contribution for the poor saints at Jerusalem, by the example of the Macedonians, 7 by commendation of their former forwardness, 9 by the example of Christ, 14 and by the spiritual profit that should redound to themselves thereby, 15 commending to them the integrity and willingness of Titus, and those other brethren, who upon his request, exhortation, and commendation, were purposely come to them for this business.

MOREOVER, brethren, we do you to the wit of the grace of God bestowed on the churches of Macedonia;

2 How that in a great trial of affliction the abundance of their joy and ⁶ their deep poverty abounded unto the riches of their ⁶ liberality ⁶.

3 For to their power, I bear record, yea, and beyond their power ⁶ they were willing of themselves ⁶;

4 ⁶ Praying us with much intreaty that we would receive the gift, and take upon us ⁶ the fellowship of the ministering ⁶ to the saints.

but ³ first gave their own selves to the Lord ⁴, and unto us by the will of God. ⁵ Inasmuch that we desired Titus, that as he had begun, so he would also finish in you the same ⁶ grace ⁷ also.

⁷ Therefore, as ye abound in every thing, in faith, and utterance, and knowledge, and in all diligence, and in your love to us ⁸, see that ye abound in this grace also.

⁸ I speak not by commandment, but by occasion of the forwardness of others, and to prove the sincerity of your love.

¹⁰ And herein I give my advice; for this is expedient for you, who have begun before, not only to do, but also to be forward a year ago.

¹¹ Now therefore perform the doing of it; that as there was a readiness to will, so there may be a performance also out of that which ye have.

may present you ^{as} a chaste virgin to Christ.

3 But I fear, lest by any means, as the serpent beguiled Eve through his subtilty, so your minds ^{should} be corrupted from the simplicity ^{that is} in Christ.

4 For if he that cometh preacheth another Jesus, whom we have not preached, or if ye receive another spirit, which ye have not received, or ^{another} gospel, which ye have not accepted, ye ^{might} well bear with him.

5 For I suppose ^{I was not} a whit behind ^{the very chiefest apostles}.

6 But though ^{I be rude in speech}, yet not ^{in knowledge}; but ^{we} have been ^{broughtly} made manifest ^{among you} in all things.

7 Have I committed ^{an offence} in basing myself that ye might be exalted, because ^{I have preached} to you the gospel of God ^{freely}?

I robbed other churches, taking wages ^{of them}, to do you service.

And when I was present with you, I wanted, ^{I was chargeable} to no man: for that which was lacking to me he brethren which came from Macedonia supplied: and in all ^{things} I ^{have} ^{not} myself ^{from being burdensome} to you, and so will I keep myself.

8 As the truth of Christ is in me, ^{so} man shall stop me of this boasting the regions of Achaia.

Wherefore? because I love you not? I knoweth.

But what I do, that I will do, ^{that may cut off} occasion ^{from them}: th desire occasion; that wherein they ^{they may be found} even as we.

For such ^{are} false apostles, ^{deceit} workers, transforming themselves into ^{apostles} of Christ.

And no marvel; for Satan himself ^{is} ^{transformed} into ^{an angel of light}.

Therefore ^{it is} no great thing if his sters also ^{be transformed} ^{as the sters of righteousness}; whose end ^{be according to their works}.

I say again, Let no man think me ^{al}; if otherwise, ^{ye} ^{is} as a fool ^{me}, that ^{ye} ^{may boast myself} le.

That which I speak, ^{I speak} if not the Lord, but as it were foolishly, ^{his} confidence of boasting.

Seeing that many ^{glory} ^{after the} I will ^{glory} also.

For ye suffer fools gladly, ^{seeing ye} ^{are} wise.

For ye suffer, ^{if a man bring you} ^{undage}, if a man devour you, ^{if a} ^{take of you}, if a man exalt ^{if a man smite you on the face}.

‘paradise, and heard unspeakable words, which it is not lawful for a man to utter.

5 Of such an one will I glory: yet of myself β I will not glory, but in mine infirmities.

6 For though I would desire to glory, I shall not be a fool; for I will say the truth: but now I forbear, lest any man should think of me above that which he seeth me to be, or that he hearth of me.

7 And lest I should be exalted above measure through the abundance of the revelations, there was given β to me a β thorn in the flesh, the messenger of Satan to buffet me, lest I should be exalted above measure.

8 For this thing I besought the Lord thrice, that it might depart from me.

9 And he said unto me, My grace is sufficient for thee: for my β strength is made perfect in weakness. Most gladly therefore will I rather glory in my infirmities, that the power of Christ may rest upon me.

10 Therefore I take pleasure in infirmities, in reproaches, in necessities, in persecutions, in distresses for Christ's sake: for when I am weak, then am I strong.

11 I am become a fool in glorying; ye have compelled me: for I ought to have been commended of you: for in nothing am I behind the very chiefest apostles, though I be nothing.

12 Truly the signs of an apostle were wrought among you in all patience, in signs, and wonders, and mighty deeds.

13 For what is it wherein ye are inferior to all other churches, except it be that I myself was not burdensome to you? forgive me this wrong.

14 Behold, the third time I am ready to come to you; and I will not be burdensome to you: for I seek not your's, but you: for the children ought not to lay up for the parents, but the parents for the children.

15 And I will very gladly spend and be spent for you; though the more abundantly I love you, the less I be loved.

16 But be it so, I did not burden you: nevertheless, being crafty, I caught you with guile.

17 Did I make a gain of you by any of them whom I sent unto you?

18 I desired Titus, and with him I sent β brother. Did Titus make a gain of you? walked we not in the same spirit? walked we not in the same steps?

19 Again, think ye that we excuse ourselves unto you? we speak before God in Christ: but we do all things, dearly beloved, for your edifying.

20 For I fear, lest, when I come, I shall not find you such as I would, and that I shall be found unto you such as ye would not: lest there be debates, envyings, wraths, strifes, backbitings, whisperings, swellings, tumults:

21 And lest, when I come again, my God will humble me among you, and that I shall bewail many which have sinned already, and have not repented of the uncleanness and fornication and lasciviousness which they have committed.

CHAPTER 13.

1 He threateneth severity, and the power of his apostleship against obstinate sinners. 2 And advising them to a trial of their faith, 7 and to a reformation of their sins before his coming, 11 he concludes his epistle with a general exhortation and a prayer.

THIS is the third time I am coming to you. In the mouth of two or three witnesses shall every word be established.

2 I told you before, and foretell you, as if I were present, the second time; and being absent now, I write β to them, which heretofore have sinned, and to all other, that, if I come again, I will not spare:

3 Since ye seek a proof of Christ speaking in me, which to you-ward is not weak, but is mighty in you.

4 For though he was crucified through weakness, yet he liveth by the power of God. For we also are weak in him, but we shall live with him by the power of God to-ward you.

5 Examine yourselves, whether ye be in the faith; prove your own selves. Know ye not your own selves, how that Jesus Christ is in you, except ye be reprobrates?

6 But I trust that ye shall know that we are not reprobrates.

7 Now β I pray to God that ye do no evil; but that we should appear approved, but that ye should do that which is honest, though we be as reprobrates.

For we can do nothing against the h, but for the truth.

or we are glad, when we are weak, ye are strong: and this also we renew your perfection.

Therefore I write these things being at, lest being present I should use meas, according to the power which Lord hath given me to edification, not to destruction.

Finally, brethren, farewell. Be cit, be of good comfort! = be of one mind, live in peace; and the God of love and peace shall be with you.

12 Greet one another with an holy kiss.

13 All the saints salute you.

14 The grace of the Lord Jesus Christ, and the love of God, and the communion of the Holy Ghost, be with you all. Amen.

gospel unto you than that ye have received, let him be accursed.

10 For do I now persuade men, or God? or do I seek to please men?
But if I yet pleased men, I should not be the servant of Christ.

11 But I certify you, brethren, that the gospel which was preached of me is not after man.

12 For I neither received it of man, neither was I taught it, but by the revelation of Jesus Christ.

13 For ye have heard of my conversation in time past in the Jews' religion, how that beyond measure I persecuted the church of God, and wasted it:

14 And profited in the Jews' religion above many my equals in mine own nation, being more exceedingly zealous of the traditions of my fathers.

15 But when it pleased God, who separated me from my mother's womb, and called me by his grace,

16 To reveal his Son in me, that I might preach him among the heathen; immediately I conferred not with flesh and blood:

17 Neither went I up to Jerusalem to them which were apostles before me; but I went into Arabia, and returned again unto Damascus.

18 Then after three years I went up to Jerusalem to see Peter, and abode with him fifteen days.

19 But of other of the apostles I saw none, save James the Lord's brother.

20 Now the things which I write unto you, behold, before God, I lie not.

21 Afterwards I came into the regions of Syria and Cilicia;

22 And was unknown by face unto the churches of Judaea which were in Christ:

23 But they have heard only, that he which persecuted us in times past now preacheth the faith which once he destroyed.

24 And they glorified God in me.

'paradise, and heard unspeakable words, which it is not lawful for a man to utter.

5 Of such an one will I glory: yet of myself β I will not glory, but in mine infirmities.

6 For though I would desire to glory, I shall not be a fool; for I will say the truth: but now I forbear, lest any man should think of me above that which he seeth me to be, or that he hearth of me.

7 And lest I should be exalted above measure through the abundance of the revelations, there was given to me a thorn in the flesh, the messenger of Satan to buffet me, lest I should be exalted above measure.

8 For this thing I besought the Lord thrice, that it might depart from me.

9 And he said unto me, My grace is sufficient for thee: for my strength is made perfect in weakness. Most gladly therefore will I rather glory in my infirmities, that the power of Christ may rest upon me.

10 Therefore I take pleasure in infirmities, in reproaches, in necessities, in persecutions, in distresses for Christ's sake: for when I am weak, then am I strong.

11 I am become a fool in glorying; ye have compelled me: for I ought to have been commended of you: for in nothing am I behind the very chiefest apostles, though I be nothing.

12 Truly the signs of an apostle were wrought among you in all patience, in signs, and wonders, and mighty deeds.

13 For what is it wherein ye were inferior to other churches, except that ye that I myself was not burdensome to you? forgive me this wrong.

14 Behold, the third time I am ready to come to you; and I will not be burdensome to you: for I seek not your's, but you: for the children ought not to lay up for the parents, but the parents for the children.

15 And I will very gladly spend and be spent for you; though the more abundantly I love you, the less I be loved.

16 But be it so, I did not burden you: nevertheless, being crafty, I caught you with guile.

17 But be it so, I did not burden you: nevertheless, being crafty, I caught you with guile.

18 But be it so, I did not burden you: nevertheless, being crafty, I caught you with guile.

19 But be it so, I did not burden you: nevertheless, being crafty, I caught you with guile.

20 But be it so, I did not burden you: nevertheless, being crafty, I caught you with guile.

21 But be it so, I did not burden you: nevertheless, being crafty, I caught you with guile.

22 But be it so, I did not burden you: nevertheless, being crafty, I caught you with guile.

23 But be it so, I did not burden you: nevertheless, being crafty, I caught you with guile.

24 But be it so, I did not burden you: nevertheless, being crafty, I caught you with guile.

25 But be it so, I did not burden you: nevertheless, being crafty, I caught you with guile.

26 But be it so, I did not burden you: nevertheless, being crafty, I caught you with guile.

27 But be it so, I did not burden you: nevertheless, being crafty, I caught you with guile.

28 But be it so, I did not burden you: nevertheless, being crafty, I caught you with guile.

29 But be it so, I did not burden you: nevertheless, being crafty, I caught you with guile.

30 But be it so, I did not burden you: nevertheless, being crafty, I caught you with guile.

17 Did I make a gain of you by any of them whom I sent unto you?

18 I desired Titus, and with him I sent β brother. Did Titus make a gain of you? walked we not in the same spirit? walked we not in the same steps?

19 Again, think ye that we excuse ourselves unto you? we speak before God in Christ: but we do all things dearly beloved, for your edifying.

20 For I fear, lest, when I come, I shall not find you such as I would, and that I shall be found unto you such as ye would not: lest there be debates, envyings, wraths, strifes, backbitings, whisperings, swellings, tumults:

21 And lest, when I come again, ye shall have to bewail many which have sinned already, and have not repented of the uncleanness and fornication and lasciviousness which they have committed.

CHAPTER 13.

1 He threateneth severity, and the power of his apostleship against obedi- 2 and adding them to a trial of their faith, 3 and to a reformation of their sin before he coming, 11 he concludeth his epistle with a general exhortation and a prayer.

THIS is the third time I am coming to you. In the mouth of two or three witnesses shall every word be established.

1 I told you before, and foretold you, as if I were present, the second time; and being absent now, I write to them, which heretofore have sinned, and to all other, that, if I come again, I will not spare:

3 Since ye seek a proof of Christ speaking in me, which to you-ward is not weak, but is mighty in you.

4 For though he was crucified through weakness, yet he liveth by the power of God. For we also are weak in him; but we shall live with him by the power of God toward you.

5 Examine yourselves, whether ye be in the faith; prove your own selves. Know ye not your own selves, how that Jesus Christ is in you, except ye be reprobrates?

6 But I trust that ye shall know that we are not reprobrates.

7 Now I pray to God that ye do no evil; not that we should appear approved, but that ye should do that which is honest, though we be as reprobrates.

8 For we can do nothing against the truth, but for the truth.

9 For we are glad, when we are weak, and ye are strong: and this also we wish, that ye may grow your perfection.

10 Therefore I write these things being absent, lest being present I should use sharpness, according to the power which the Lord hath given me, to edification, and not to destruction.

11 Finally, brethren, farewell. Be perfect, be of good comfort, be of one mind, live in peace; and the God of love and peace shall be with you.

12 Greet one another with an holy kiss.

13 All the saints salute you.

14 The grace of the Lord Jesus Christ, and the love of God, and the communion of the Holy Ghost, be with you all. Amen.

THE EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE

TO THE

GALATIANS.

CHAPTER 1.

8 He wonders that they have so soon left him and the gospel, 8 and accuseth these that preach any other gospel than he did. 11 He learned the gospel not of men, but of God: 14 and sheweth what he was before his calling, 17 and what he did presently after it.

PAUL, an apostle, (not of men, neither by man, but by Jesus Christ, and God the Father, who raised him from the dead);

2 And all the brethren which are with me, unto the churches of Galatia:

3 Grace be to you and peace from God the Father, and from our Lord Jesus Christ,

4 Who gave himself for our sins, that he might deliver us from this present evil world, according to the will of God and our Father:

5 To whom be glory for ever and ever. Amen.

6 I marvel that ye are so soon removed from him that called you unto the grace of Christ unto another gospel:

7 Which is not another; but there be some which trouble you, and would pervert the gospel of Christ.

8 But though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed.

9 As we said before, so say I now again. If any man preach any other gospel unto you than that ye have received, let him be accursed.

10 For do I now persuade men, or God? or do I seek to please men? for I if I yet pleased men, I should not be the servant of Christ.

11 But I certify you, brethren, that the gospel which was preached of me is not after man.

12 For I neither received it of man, neither was I taught it, but by the revelation of Jesus Christ.

13 For ye have heard of my conversation in time past in the Jews' religion, how that beyond measure I persecuted the church of God, and wasted it:

14 And profited in the Jews' religion above many of my equals in mine own nation, being more exceedingly zealous of the traditions of my fathers.

15 But when it pleased God, who separated me from my mother's womb, and called me by his grace,

16 To reveal his Son in me, that I might preach him among the heathen; immediately I conferred not with flesh and blood:

17 Neither went I up to Jerusalem to them which were apostles before me; but I went into Arabia, and returned again unto Damascus.

18 Then after three years I went up to Jerusalem to see Peter, and abode with him fifteen days.

19 But other of the apostles saw I none, save James the Lord's brother.

20 Now the things which I write unto you, behold, before God, I lie not.

21 Afterwards I came into the regions of Syria and Cilicia:

22 And was unknown by face unto the churches of Judaea which were in Christ:

23 But they had heard only, that he which persecuted us in times past now preacheth the faith which once he destroyed.

24 And they glorified God in me.

CHAPTER 2.

1 He sheweth when he went up again to Jerusalem, and for what purpose; 3 and that Titus was not circumcised; 11 and that he resisted Peter, and told him the reason, 14 why he and others being Jews, do believe in Christ to be justified by faith, and not by works; 20 and that they live not in sin, who are so justified.

THEN fourteen years after I went up again to Jerusalem with Barnabas, and took Titus with me also.

2 And I went up by revelation, and communicated unto them that gospel which I preach among the Gentiles, but privately to them which were of reputation, lest by any means I should run, or had run, in vain.

3 But neither Titus, who was with me, being a Greek, was compelled to be circumcised:

4 And that because of false brethren unawares brought in, who came in privily to spy out our liberty which we have in Christ Jesus, that they might bring us into bondage:

5 To whom we gave place by subjection, no, not for an hour; that the truth of the gospel might continue with you.

6 But of these who seemed to be somewhat, (whatsoever they were, it maketh no matter to me: God accepteth no man's person:) for they who seemed to be somewhat, in conference added nothing to me:

7 But contrariwise, when they saw that the gospel of the uncircumcision was committed unto me, as the gospel of the circumcision was unto Peter;

8 (For he that wrought effectually in Peter to the apostleship of the circumcision, the same was mighty in me toward the Gentiles:)

9 And when James, Cephas, and John, who seemed to be pillars, perceived the grace that was given unto me, they gave to me and Barnabas the right hands of fellowship; that we should go unto the heathen, and they unto the circumcision.

10 Only they would that we should remember the poor; the same which I also was forward to do.

11 But when β Peter β was come to Antioch, I withstood him to the face, because he was to be blamed.

12 For before that certain came from James, he did eat with the Gentiles: but when β they were come β , he withdrew and separated himself, fearing them which were of the circumcision.

13 And the other Jews dissembled likewise with him; insomuch that Barnabas also was carried away with their dissimulation.

14 But when I saw that they walked not uprightly according to the truth of the gospel, I said unto β Peter β before them all, If thou, being a Jew, livest after the manner of Gentiles, and not as do the Jews, why compellest thou the Gentiles to live as do the Jews?

15 We who are Jews by nature, and not sinners of the Gentiles, 16 β Knowing that a man is not justified by the works of the law, but by the faith of Jesus Christ, even we have believed in Jesus Christ, that we might be justified by the faith of Christ, and not by the works of the law: for by the works of the law shall no flesh be justified.

17 But if, while we seek to be justified by Christ, we ourselves also are found sinners, is therefore Christ the minister of sin? God forbid.

18 For if I build again the things which I destroyed, I make myself a transgressor.

19 For I through the law am dead to the law, that I might live unto God.

20 I am crucified with Christ: nevertheless I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me; and the life which I now live in the flesh I live by the faith of the Son of God β , who loved me, and gave himself for me.

21 I do not frustrate the grace of God: for if righteousness come by the law, then Christ is dead in vain.

1 He sheweth what moved them to leave the faith, and how they were brought back to it, and blessed with Abraham, 10 and that he sheweth by many reasons.

FOOLISH Galatians, who hath bewitched you, that ye should not obey the truth, before whose eyes Jesus Christ hath been evidently set forth, crucified among you?

2 This only would I learn of you, Received ye the Spirit by the works of the law, or by the hearing of faith?

3 Are ye so foolish? having begun in the Spirit, are ye now made perfect by the flesh?

4 Have ye suffered so many things in vain? if it be yet in vain.

5 He therefore that ministereth to you the Spirit, and worketh miracles among you, doeth he it by the works of the law, or by the hearing of faith?

12 Brethren, I beseech you, be as I am; for I am as ye are: ye have not injured me at all.

13 Ye know how through infirmity of the flesh I preached the gospel unto you at the first.

14 And my temptation which was in my flesh ye despised not, nor rejected; but received me as an angel of God, as even as Christ Jesus.

15 β Where β is then the blessedness ye speak of? for I bear you record, that, if it had been possible, ye would have plucked out your own eyes, and have given them to me.

16 Am I therefore become your enemy, because I tell you the truth?

17 They zealously affect you, but not well; yea, they would exclude (you, that ye might affect them).

18 But it is good to be zealously affected always in a good thing β , and not only when I am present with you.

19 β My little children β , of whom I travel in birth again until Christ be formed in you.

20 I desire to be present with you now, and to change β my voice β ; for I stand in doubt of you.

21 Tell me, ye that desire to be under the law, do ye not hear the law?

22 For it is written, that Abraham had two sons, the one by β bondmaid, the other by a freewoman.

23 But he who was of the bondwoman was born after the flesh; but he of the freewoman was by promise β .

24 Which things are an allegory: for these are the β two covenants; the one from the mount Sinai, which gendereth to bondage, which is Agar.

25 For this Agar is mount Sinai in Arabia, and is answered to Jerusalem which now is, and is in bondage with her children.

26 But Jerusalem which is above is free, which is the mother of us all.

27 For it is written, Rejoice, thou barren that bearest not; break forth and cry, thou that travailest not: for the desolate hath many more children than she which hath an husband.

28 Now β we, brethren, as Isaac was, are the children of promise.

29 But as then he that was born after the flesh persecuted him that was born after the Spirit, even so it is now.

30 Nevertheless what saith the scripture? Cast out the bondwoman and her son: for the son of the bondwoman shall not be heir with the son of the freewoman.

31 So then β , brethren, we are not children of the bondwoman, but of the free.

CHAPTER 5.

1 He moveth them to stand in their liberty, 3 and not to observe circumcision: 13 but rather law, which is the sum of the law, 19 he reckoneth up the works of the flesh, 23 and the fruits of the Spirit, 25 and exhorteth to walk in the Spirit.

STAND fast therefore in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free, and β be not entangled again with the yoke of bondage.

2 Behold, I Paul say unto you, that if ye be circumcised, Christ shall profit you nothing.

3 For I testify again to every man that is circumcised, that he is a debtor to do the whole law.

4 Christ is become of no effect unto you, whosoever of you are justified by the law; ye are fallen from grace.

5 For we through the Spirit wait for the hope of righteousness by faith.

6 For in Jesus Christ neither circumcision availeth any thing, nor uncircumcision; but faith which worketh by love.

7 Ye did run well; who did hinder you that ye should not obey the β truth?

8 This persuasion cometh not of him that calleth you.

9 A little leaven leaveneth the whole lump.

10 I have confidence in you through the Lord, that ye will be none otherwise minded: but he that troubleth you shall bear his judgment, whosoever he be.

11 And I, brethren, if I yet preach circumcision, why do I yet suffer persecution? then is the offence of the cross ceased.

12 I would they were even cut off which trouble you.

13 For, brethren, ye have been called

12 ¹² For the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, ¹³ for the edifying ¹⁴ of the body of Christ: ¹⁵ Till we all come ¹⁶ in ¹⁷ the unity of the faith, ¹⁸ and of the ¹⁹ knowledge ²⁰ of the Son of God, unto ²¹ a perfect man, unto the measure of the ²² stature ²³ of the fulness of Christ:

14 That we ¹⁵ henceforth be no more ¹⁶ children, ¹⁷ tossed to and fro, and carried about with every ¹⁸ wind of doctrine, by the sleight of men, and cunning craftiness, ¹⁹ whereby they lie in wait to deceive ²⁰; ²¹ But ²² speaking the truth ²³ in love, ²⁴ may grow ²⁵ up into him in all things, ²⁶ which is the head, ²⁷ even Christ:

16 From whom the whole body ¹⁷ fitly joined together and ¹⁸ compacted ¹⁹ by that which every ²⁰ joint ²¹ supplieth ²², according to the effectual working in the measure of every part, ²³ maketh ²⁴ increase ²⁵ of the body unto the ²⁶ edifying ²⁷ of itself in love.

17 This I say therefore, and testify in the Lord, that ¹⁸ ye henceforth walk not as ¹⁹ other Gentiles ²⁰ walk, ²¹ in the vanity of their mind.

18 Having the understanding darkened, ¹⁹ being alienated from the life of God through the ignorance that is in them, because of the ²⁰ blindness ²¹ of their heart:

19 Who being past feeling ²⁰ have given ²¹ themselves over unto lasciviousness, to work all uncleanness ²² with greediness ²³.

20 But ye ²¹ have not so learned ²² Christ;

21 ²² If so be that ²³ ye ²⁴ have heard ²⁵ him ²⁶, and ²⁷ have been taught ²⁸ by ²⁹ him ³⁰, ³¹ as the truth is in Jesus ³².

22 That ye ²³ put off concerning ²⁴ the evil of the ²⁵ members, ²⁶ as Col. 2. 11. ²⁷ 2 Cor. 5. 9. ²⁸ Heb. 12. 1. ²⁹ 1 Pet. 2. 1.

former conversation ²¹ the old man, which ²² is corrupt ²³ according to the ²⁴ deceitful lusts ²⁵;

23 And ²⁴ be renewed ²⁵ in the spirit of your mind ²⁶;

24 And that ye ²⁵ put on the new man, which after God ²⁶ is created ²⁷ in righteousness and ²⁸ true holiness ²⁹.

25 Wherefore putting away lying, ²⁶ speak every man truth with his neighbour: for ²⁷ we are members one of another.

26 ²⁷ Be ye angry, and sin not ²⁸: let not the sun go down upon your wrath: ²⁹ Neither give ³⁰ place ³¹ to the devil.

27 Let ²⁸ him that stole ²⁹ steal no more: but rather ³⁰ let him labour, working with his hands the thing which is good, that he may have ³¹ to give ³² to him that needeth.

28 Let no ²⁹ corrupt ³⁰ communication proceed out of your mouth, but ³¹ that which is good ³² to the use of edifying ³³, ³⁴ that it may minister ³⁵ grace ³⁶ unto the hearers.

29 And ³⁰ grieve not the holy Spirit of God, ³¹ whereby ³² ye ³³ are sealed ³⁴ unto the day of redemption.

31 Let all bitterness, and wrath, and anger, and clamour, and evil speaking, be put away from you, with all malice: ³² And ³³ be ye kind one to another, tenderhearted, ³⁴ forgiving one another, even as God ³⁵ for Christ's sake ³⁶ hath forgiven ³⁷ you ³⁸.

monger, nor unclean person, nor covetous man, ⁷ who is ⁷ an idolater, ⁸ hath any inheritance in the kingdom ⁹ of Christ and of God ².

6 = Let no man deceive you with vain words: for because of these things ⁶ cometh the wrath of God ⁶ upon the children of ⁶ disobedience.

7 Be not ye therefore partakers with them.

8 ⁸ For ye were ⁸ sometimes ⁸ darkness, but now ⁸ are ye light in the Lord: walk as ⁸ children of light:

9 (For ⁹ the fruit of the ⁹ Spirit ⁹ is in all goodness and righteousness and truth:)

10 ¹⁰ Proving what is acceptable unto the Lord.

11 And ¹¹ have no fellowship with ¹¹ the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather ¹¹ reprove them.

12 ¹² For it is a shame even to speak of these things which are done of them in secret.

13 But ¹³ all things ¹³ that are ¹³ reprov'd are made manifest by the light: ¹³ for whatsoever ¹³ doth make manifest ¹³ is light.

14 Wherefore ¹⁴ he saith ¹⁴, ¹⁴ Awake thou that sleepest, and ¹⁴ arise from the dead, and ¹⁴ Christ shall give thee light ¹⁴.

15 ¹⁵ See then that ye walk circumspectly ¹⁵, not as fools, but as wise.

16 ¹⁶ Redeeming the time ¹⁶, because the days are evil.

17 ¹⁷ Wherefore be ye not unwise, but ¹⁷ understanding ¹⁷ what the will of the Lord is.

18 And ¹⁸ be not drunk with wine, wherein is ¹⁸ excess ¹⁸; but be filled with the Spirit;

19 Speaking to ¹⁹ yourselves ¹⁹ in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing and ¹⁹ making melody ¹⁹ in your heart to the Lord;

20 ²⁰ Giving thanks always for all things unto God and the Father ²⁰ in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ;

21 ²¹ Submitting yourselves one to another in the fear of ²¹ God ²¹.

22 ²² Wives, submit yourselves unto your own husbands, ²² as unto the Lord.

23 For ²³ the husband is the head of the wife, even as ²³ Christ is the head of the church: ²³ and he is the saviour ²³ of the body.

24 ²⁴ Therefore ²⁴ as the church is subject unto Christ, ²⁴ so let the wives be ²⁴ to their own husbands ²⁴ in every thing.

25 ²⁵ Husbands, love your wives, even as Christ also loved the church, and ²⁵ gave himself for it;

26 That he might ²⁶ sanctify and cleanse it ²⁶ with ²⁶ the washing of water ²⁶ by ²⁶ the word, 27 ²⁷ That he might ²⁷ present it to himself a glorious church ²⁷, not ²⁷ having spot or wrinkle, or any such thing; ²⁷ but that it should be holy and without blemish.

28 ²⁸ So ought men to love their wives ²⁸ as ²⁸ their own bodies. He that loveth his wife loveth himself.

29 For ²⁹ no man ever yet hated his own flesh, but nourisheth and cherisheth it, even as ²⁹ the Lord ²⁹ doth the church:

30 For ³⁰ we are members of his body, ³⁰ of his flesh, and of his bones ³⁰.

31 ³¹ For this cause shall ³¹ man leave his father and mother, and shall be joined unto his wife, and they ³¹ two shall be ³¹ one flesh.

32 ³² This is a great mystery ³²; but ³² as ³² the sacrament concerning Christ and the church ³².

33 Nevertheless ³³ let every one of you in particular so love his wife even as himself; and the wife ³³ see that she ³³ reverence ³³ her husband.

CHAPTER 6.

1 The duty of children towards their parents: 16 Our life is a warfare, 17 not only against flesh and blood, but also spiritual enemies. 18 The complete armour of a Christian, 19 and how it ought to be used. 21 Titulus is commended.

CHILDREN, ¹ obey your parents ¹ in the Lord: ¹ for this is right.

2 ² Honour thy father and mother; ² which is ² the first commandment ² with promise ²;

3 That it may be well with thee, and thou mayest live long on ³ the earth ³.

4 And, ⁴ ye fathers, provoke not your children to wrath: but ⁴ bring them up in the nurture ⁴ and admonition of the Lord.

5 ⁵ Servants, be obedient to them that are your masters according to the Lord, ⁵ with fear and trembling, ⁵ in singleness of your heart, as unto Christ;

6 ^a Not with eyeservice, as menpleasers;
but as the ^a servants ^a of Christ, ^a doing the will of God from the heart;
7 With good will doing service ^a, as to the Lord, and not to men:

8 ^a Knowing that whatsoever good thing any man ^a doeth ^a, the same shall he receive of the Lord, ^a whether ^a he be bond or free.

9 And, ye ^a masters, do the same things unto them, ^a as forbearing ^a threatening ^a; knowing that ^a your Master also ^a is in heaven; ^a neither is there respect of persons with him.

10 ^a Finally ^a, my brethren, ^a be strong ^a in the Lord, and ^a in the power of his might.

11 ^a Put on the whole armour of God, that ye may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil.

12 For ^a we ^a wrestle not against ^a flesh and blood, but against ^a principalities, against powers, against ^a the ^a rulers ^a of the darkness of this world, against the ^a spiritual wickedness in ^a high places ^a.

13 ^a Wherefore take unto you the whole armour of God, that ye may be able to withstand ^a in the evil day, and ^a having done ^a all, to stand.

14 Stand therefore, ^a having your loins girt about with truth, and ^a having on the breastplate of righteousness;

15 ^a And your feet shod with the ^a preparation ^a of the gospel of peace;

THE EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE TO THE PHILIPPIANS.

CHAPTER 1.

He testifies his thankfulness to God, and his love toward them, for the fruits of their faith, and fellowship in his sufferings, 9 daily praying to him for their increase in grace: 13 he sheweth what good the faith of Christ had received by his troubles at Rome, 21 and how ready he is to glorify Christ either by his life or death, 27 exhorting them to unity, 28 and to fortitude in persecution.

PAUL and Timothens, ¹the servants ²of ³Jesus Christ ⁴β, to all the saints ⁵in Christ Jesus which are at Philippi, with the bishops and deacons:

⁶Grace be unto you, and peace, from God our Father, and from the Lord Jesus Christ.

⁷I thank my God upon ⁸every remembrance ⁹of you,

¹⁰Always in every prayer of mine for you all making request ¹¹with joy,

¹²For your fellowship ¹³in the gospel from the first day until now;

¹⁴Being confident ¹⁵of this very thing ¹⁶that he which hath begun ¹⁷a good work in you I will ¹⁸perform ¹⁹it until the day of Jesus Christ ²⁰β:

²¹Even as it is meet for me to think this of you all, ²²because ²³I have you ²⁴in my heart; inasmuch as both in ²⁵my bonds, and in ²⁶the defence and confirmation ²⁷of the gospel, ²⁸ye all are ²⁹partakers ³⁰of my grace;

³¹For God is my record, ³²how greatly I long after you all in the ³³bowels ³⁴of Jesus Christ ³⁵β;

³⁶And this I pray, ³⁷that your love may abound yet more and more in ³⁸knowledge ³⁹and in all ⁴⁰judgment ⁴¹β;

⁴²That ⁴³ye may ⁴⁴approve things that are excellent ⁴⁵β; that ye may be ⁴⁶single ⁴⁷and ⁴⁸without offence ⁴⁹β; till ⁵⁰the day of Christ;

⁵¹Being filled with the fruits of righteousness, ⁵²which are by Jesus Christ, ⁵³unto the glory and praise of God.

⁵⁴But I would ye should understand, brethren, that the things ⁵⁵which happened unto me have fallen out rather unto the furtherance of the gospel;

⁵⁶So that ⁵⁷my bonds ⁵⁸in Christ are manifest ⁵⁹in all ⁶⁰the ⁶¹palace ⁶²β, and ⁶³in all other places ⁶⁴β;

⁶⁵And ⁶⁶many ⁶⁷of ⁶⁸the brethren in the Lord, waxing confident by my bonds ⁶⁹β, are much more bold to speak ⁷⁰β the word ⁷¹β, without fear.

⁷²Some indeed preach Christ even ⁷³of ⁷⁴envy ⁷⁵and ⁷⁶strife; and some also ⁷⁷of ⁷⁸good will:

⁷⁹β The one preach Christ of contention, not sincerely, supposing to ⁸⁰add ⁸¹affliction ⁸²to my bonds:

⁸³But the other of love, knowing that I am set for ⁸⁴the defence of the gospel ⁸⁵β.

⁸⁶What then? ⁸⁷β notwithstanding ⁸⁸β, every way, whether in pretence, or in truth, Christ is preached; and I therein do rejoice, yea, and ⁸⁹will rejoice ⁹⁰β.

⁹¹β For ⁹²β I know that this shall turn to my ⁹³salvation ⁹⁴through your prayer, and ⁹⁵the supply of ⁹⁶the Spirit of Jesus Christ ⁹⁷β.

⁹⁸According to my ⁹⁹earnest expectation and my hope, that ¹⁰⁰in nothing I shall be ashamed, but that ¹⁰¹with all boldness, as always, so now also Christ shall be magnified in my body, whether it be by life, or by death.

¹⁰²For to me to live is Christ, and to die is gain.

¹⁰³But ¹⁰⁴if I live in the flesh, this is the fruit of my labour: yet what I shall choose I ¹⁰⁵wot not ¹⁰⁶β.

¹⁰⁷For I am in a strait betwixt two, having ¹⁰⁸a desire ¹⁰⁹to ¹¹⁰depart, and to be with Christ; ¹¹¹β which is ¹¹²β far better:

24 Nevertheless to abide in the flesh is more needful for you.

25 And having this confidence, I know that I shall abide and continue with you all for your furtherance and joy of faith.

26 That your rejoicing may be more abundant in Jesus Christ for me by my coming to you again.

27 Only let your conversation be as it becometh the gospel of Christ: that whether I come and see you, or else be absent, I may hear of your affairs, that ye stand fast in one spirit, with one mind striving together for the faith of the gospel.

28 And in nothing terrified by your adversaries: which is to them an evident token of perdition, but to you of salvation, and that of God.

29 For unto you it is given in the behalf of Christ, not only to believe on him, but also to suffer for his sake.

30 Having the same conflict, which ye saw in me, and now hear to be in me.

CHAPTER 2.

1 He exhorted them to unity, and to all humbleness of mind, by the example of Christ's humility and exaltation: 13 to a careful proceeding in the way of salvation, that they be as lights to the wicked world, 16 and comforts to him their apostle, who is more ready to be offered up to God. 19 He hopeth to send Timothy to them, whom he greatly commendeth, 25 as Epaphroditus also, whom he presently sendeth to them.

If there be therefore any consolation in Christ, if any comfort of love, if any fellowship of the Spirit, if any bowels and mercies,

2 Fulfill ye my joy, that ye be like-minded, having the same love, being of one accord, of one mind.

3 Let nothing be done through strife or vainglory; but in lowliness of mind let each esteem other better than themselves.

4 Look not every man on his own things, but every man also on the things of others.

5 Let this mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus: 6 Who, being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God:

7 But he emptied himself, being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God:

8 And being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God:

9 And being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God:

10 And being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God:

11 And being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God:

12 And being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God:

13 And being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God:

14 And being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God:

15 And being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God:

16 And being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God:

17 And being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God:

18 And being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God:

19 And being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God:

20 And being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God:

21 And being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God:

22 And being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God:

23 And being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God:

24 And being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God:

25 And being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God:

26 And being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God:

27 And being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God:

28 And being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God:

29 And being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God:

30 And being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God:

31 And being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God:

32 And being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God:

33 And being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God:

34 And being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God:

35 And being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God:

36 And being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God:

37 And being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God:

38 And being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God:

39 And being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God:

40 And being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God:

41 And being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God:

42 And being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God:

43 And being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God:

7 But made himself of no reputation, and took upon him the form of a servant, and was made in the likeness of men.

8 And being found in fashion as a man, he humbled himself, and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross.

9 Wherefore God also hath highly exalted him, and given him a name which is above every name:

10 That in the name of Jesus every knee should bow, of things in heaven, and things in earth, and things under the earth.

11 And that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father.

12 Wherefore, my beloved, as ye have always obeyed, so now, as ye have in my presence only, but now much more in my absence, work out your own salvation with fear and trembling.

13 For it is God which worketh in you both to will and to do his good pleasure.

14 Do all things without murmurings and disputings:

15 That ye may be blameless and harmless, as the sons of God, without rebuke, in the midst of a crooked and perverse nation, among whom ye shine as lights in the world;

16 Holding forth the word of life; that I may rejoice in the day of Christ, that I have not run in vain, neither laboured in vain.

17 Yea, and if I be offered upon the sacrifice and service of your faith, I joy, and rejoice with you all.

18 For the same cause also do ye joy, and rejoice with me.

19 But I trust in the Lord Jesus Christ, as I have trusted before.

20 I desire to see you, that I may be comforted by you, as ye have been comforted by me, and that we may be united together in the same faith.

21 I desire to see you, that I may be comforted by you, as ye have been comforted by me, and that we may be united together in the same faith.

22 I desire to see you, that I may be comforted by you, as ye have been comforted by me, and that we may be united together in the same faith.

23 I desire to see you, that I may be comforted by you, as ye have been comforted by me, and that we may be united together in the same faith.

24 I desire to see you, that I may be comforted by you, as ye have been comforted by me, and that we may be united together in the same faith.

25 I desire to see you, that I may be comforted by you, as ye have been comforted by me, and that we may be united together in the same faith.

26 I desire to see you, that I may be comforted by you, as ye have been comforted by me, and that we may be united together in the same faith.

27 I desire to see you, that I may be comforted by you, as ye have been comforted by me, and that we may be united together in the same faith.

29 I desire to see you, that I may be comforted by you, as ye have been comforted by me, and that we may be united together in the same faith.

30 I desire to see you, that I may be comforted by you, as ye have been comforted by me, and that we may be united together in the same faith.

31 I desire to see you, that I may be comforted by you, as ye have been comforted by me, and that we may be united together in the same faith.

to send ¹ Timothy shortly unto you, that I also may be of good comfort, when I know your state.

20 For ² have no man ³ like-minded, who will ⁴ naturally care ⁵ for your state.

21 For ⁶ all ⁷ seek their own, not the things which are ⁸ Jesus Christ's ⁹.

22 But ye know ¹⁰ the proof of him ¹¹, that, as a son ¹² with ¹³ the father, he hath served ¹⁴ me ¹⁵ in ¹⁶ the gospel.

23 Him therefore I hope to send ¹⁷ presently, so soon as ¹⁸ I shall see how it will go with me.

24 But ¹⁹ I trust in the Lord that I also myself shall come shortly.

25 Yet I supposed it necessary to send to you ²⁰ Epaphroditus, my brother, and companion in labour, and ²¹ fellow-soldier, but your ²² messenger ²³, and ²⁴ he that ministered to my wants ²⁵.

26 For he ²⁶ longed ²⁷ after ²⁸ you all, and ²⁹ was ³⁰ full of heaviness, because that ye had heard that he had been sick.

27 For indeed he was sick nigh unto death: but God had mercy on him; and not on him only, but on me also, lest I should have sorrow upon sorrow.

28 I ³¹ sent ³² him therefore the more carefully, that, when ye see him ³³ again, ye may rejoice ³⁴, and that I may be the less sorrowful.

29 Receive him therefore in the Lord with all gladness; and ³⁵ hold such in reputation:

30 Because for the work ³⁶ of Christ ³⁷ he was nigh unto death, ³⁸ not regarding ³⁹ his life, ⁴⁰ to supply ⁴¹ your lack of service toward me ⁴².

CHAPTER 3.

1 He warneth them to beware of the false teachers of the circumcision, 4 shewing that himself hath greater cause than they to trust in the righteousness of the law: 7 which notwithstanding he counteth as dung and loss, to gain Christ and his righteousness, 13 therein acknowledging his own imperfection. 15 He exhorteth them to be thus minded, 17 and to imitate him, 18 and to decline the ways of carnal Christians.

FINALLY, my brethren, I rejoice in the Lord ¹. To write the same things to you, to me indeed is not grievous, ² but ³ for you it is safe.

2 Beware of ⁴ dogs, ⁵ beware of ⁶ evil workers, ⁷ beware of ⁸ the ⁹ concision.

3 For we are the circumcision, ¹⁰ which worship God in the spirit ¹¹, and ¹² rejoice in Christ Jesus, and have no confidence in the flesh.

4 Though ¹ I ² might also have ³ confidence in the flesh. If any other man thinketh that he hath whereof he might ⁴ trust ⁵ in the flesh, I more:

5 Circumcised the eighth day, ⁶ of the stock of Israel, ⁷ of the tribe of Benjamin, ⁸ an Hebrew, ⁹ of the Hebrews ¹⁰; as touching ¹¹ the law ¹², a Pharisee;

6 Concerning ¹³ the zeal, ¹⁴ persecuting the church; ¹⁵ touching the righteousness which is in the law, blameless.

7 But ¹⁶ what things were gain to me, those I ¹⁷ counted ¹⁸ loss for Christ.

8 Yea doubtless, and I count ¹⁹ all things ²⁰ but loss ²¹ for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus my Lord: for whom I have suffered the loss of ²² all things ²³, and do count them ²⁴ but ²⁵ dung ²⁶, that I may ²⁷ win ²⁸ Christ,

9 And be found in him, not having mine own righteousness, which is of the law, but ²⁹ that which is through the ³⁰ faith of Christ ³¹, the righteousness which is of God ³² by ³³ faith:

10 That I may know him, and the power of his resurrection, and ³⁴ the ³⁵ fellowship of ³⁶ his sufferings, being made conformable unto his death;

11 If by any means I ³⁷ might ³⁸ attain unto the resurrection ³⁹ of ⁴⁰ the dead.

12 Not as though I had already ⁴¹ attained, either were already ⁴² perfect: but I follow after, if that I may ⁴³ apprehend ⁴⁴ that for which ⁴⁵ also I ⁴⁶ am ⁴⁷ apprehended of Christ ⁴⁸ Jesus.

13 Brethren, I count not myself ⁴⁹ to have ⁵⁰ apprehended: but this one thing ⁵¹ I do ⁵², forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, 14 I ⁵³ press ⁵⁴ toward the mark for the prize of ⁵⁵ the ⁵⁶ high ⁵⁷ calling of God ⁵⁸ in Christ ⁵⁹ Jesus.

15 Let us therefore, as many as be ⁶⁰ perfect, ⁶¹ be thus minded ⁶²; and if in any thing ye be ⁶³ otherwise ⁶⁴ minded, God shall reveal ⁶⁵ even this ⁶⁶ unto you.

16 Nevertheless, whereto we have already attained, let us walk ⁶⁷ by the same rule, let us mind the same things ⁶⁸.

1 From particular admonitions 4 he proceedeth to general exhortations, 10 shewing how he rejoiced at their liberality towards him trying in private, not so much for the supply of his own wants, as for the grace of God in them. 19 And so he concludeth with prayer and salutations.

CHAPTER 1.

1 After salutation he thanketh God for their faith, 7 confirmeth the doctrine of Epaphras, 9 prayeth further for their increase in grace, 14 describeth the true Christ, 21 encourageth them to receive Jesus Christ, and commendeth his own ministry.

PAUL, "an apostle of β Jesus Christ β by the will of God, and Timothy¹ our brother,

2 To the saints "and faithful brethren in β Christ β which are at γ Colossae: "Grace be unto you, and peace, from God our Father β and the Lord Jesus Christ β .

3 "We give thanks to β God and the Father of β our Lord Jesus Christ, "praying always for you².

4 "Since we heard of your faith in Christ Jesus, and of β the love β which ye have β to all the saints,

5 "For β the hope β which is laid up for you in heaven, whereof ye heard before in the word of the truth of the gospel;

6 Which is come unto you, β "as it is in all the world; and "bringeth forth fruit, as it doth also in you β , since the day ye heard of it, and "knew⁴ "the grace of God in truth:

7 As ye also learned β of β Epaphras our dear fellowservant, who is β for you β "a faithful minister of Christ;

8 Who also declared unto us your "love in the Spirit.

9 "For this cause we also, since the day we heard it, do not cease to pray for you, and to desire⁶ "that ye might be filled with β the "knowledge⁷ of his will "in all wisdom and spiritual understanding;

10 "That ye might walk worthy of the Lord "unto all pleasing, "being fruitful in every good work, and increasing β in β the "knowledge⁸ of God;

11 "Strengthened⁹ with all might, according to "his glorious power¹⁰, "unto all β patience¹¹ "and longsuffering "with joyfulness;

13 ²⁰ For this cause also thank we ²⁰ God without ceasing, because, when ye ²¹ received the word of God which ye heard of us ²¹, ye ²² received it ²² not as the word of men, but ²³ as it is in truth, the word of God, which effectually worketh also in you that believe.

14 For ye, brethren, became followers of the churches of God which in Judaea are in Christ Jesus: for ye also have suffered like things of your own countrymen, even as they ¹⁵ Aue of the Jews:

15 Who both killed the Lord Jesus, and ¹⁶ their own prophets ¹⁶, and ¹⁷ have persecuted ¹⁷ us; and they please not God, and are contrary to all men:

16 Forbidding us to speak to the Gentiles that they might be saved, ¹⁷ to fill up their sins ¹⁷ always: ¹⁸ for ¹⁸ the wrath is come upon them ¹⁸ to the uttermost.

17 But we, brethren, being ¹⁹ taken from you ¹⁹ for a short time ¹⁹, in presence, not in heart, ²⁰ endeavoured the more abundantly ²⁰ to see your face with great desire.

18 Wherefore we ²¹ would have come ²¹ unto you, even I Paul, once and again; but Satan hindered us.

19 For what is our hope, or joy, or crown of ²⁰ rejoicing ²⁰? Are not ²¹ even we ²¹ in the presence of our Lord Jesus ²² Christ ²² ²³ at his coming?

20 ²³ For ye are our glory and joy.

CHAPTER 3.

1 Saint Paul testifieth his great love to the Thessalonians, partly by sending Timothy unto them to strengthen and comfort them: partly by rejoicing in their well doing: 10 and partly by praying for them, and desiring a safe coming unto them.

WHEREFORE when we could no longer ¹ forbear ¹, we thought it good to be left at Athens alone;

2 And sent Timothy, our brother, and minister of God, and our fellow-labourer in the gospel of Christ, to establish you, and to comfort ³ you concerning your faith:

3 That ⁴ no man should be moved ⁴ by these afflictions ⁴: for yourselves know that we are appointed thereunto.

4 For verily, when we were with you, we told you before that we should suffer ¹ tribulation ¹; even as it came to pass, and ye know.

5 For this cause, when I could no longer ⁶ forbear ⁶, I ⁷ sent to know your faith, lest by some means the tempter have tempted you, and your labour ⁸ be in vain.

6 But now when Timothy came ⁹ s from you unto us, and brought us good tidings of your faith and charity ⁹, and that ye have good remembrance of us always, desiring greatly to see us, as we also to see you:

7 Therefore, brethren, we were comforted over you in all our affliction ⁷ and distress by your faith:

8 For now we live, if ye stand fast in the Lord.

9 For what thanks can we render to God again for you, for all the joy wherewith we joy for your sakes before our God;

10 Night and day praying exceedingly that we might see your face, and might perfect that which is lacking in your faith?

11 Now God himself and our Father ¹², and our Lord Jesus Christ ¹³, direct our way unto you.

12 And the Lord make you to increase and abound in love ¹⁴ one toward another, and toward all men, even as we do toward you:

13 To the end he may establish your hearts unblameable in holiness before ¹⁵ God, even our Father ¹⁵, at the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ ¹⁶ with all his saints ¹⁷.

CHAPTER 4.

1 He exhorteth them to go on forward in all manner of godliness, to live soberly and justly, to love one another, 11 and quietly to follow their own business: 13 and lastly to receive moderately for the dead, 15 and unto this last exhortation is annexed a brief description of the resurrection, and second coming of Christ to judgment.

FURTHERMORE then we beseech you, brethren, and exhort you ¹ by the Lord Jesus, that as ye have received of us how ye ought to walk ² and to please God ³, so ye would abound ⁴ more and more.

2 For ye know what commandments we gave you by the Lord Jesus.

3 For this is the will of God, even your sanctification, that ye should abstain from ⁴ fornication ⁴:

4 That every one of you should know how to possess his vessel ⁵ in sanctification and honour;

5 Not in the lust of concupiscence, even as the Gentiles which know not God:

6 That no man go beyond ⁷ and defraud his brother ⁶ in any matter ⁶: because that the Lord ⁶ is the avenger of ⁷ all such ⁷, as we also ⁸ have forewarned you ⁸ and testified.

11. 1 Or, archet.

7 For God ⁹ hath not called ⁹ us unto uncleanness, ¹⁰ but unto ¹⁰ holiness ¹¹. 8 He therefore that ¹² despiseth ¹², ¹³ despiseth ¹³ not man, but God, ¹⁴ who ¹⁴ hath also given ¹⁴ unto ¹⁴ us ¹⁴ his holy Spirit.

9 But as touching brotherly love ¹⁵ ¹⁵ ye need not ¹⁵ that I write unto you: for ¹⁶ ye yourselves are taught of God ¹⁶ to love one another.

10 And indeed ye do it toward all the brethren which are in all Macedonia: but we beseech you, brethren, ¹⁷ that ye increase more and more;

11 And that ye ¹⁸ study ¹⁸ to be quiet, and ¹⁹ to do your own business, and ²⁰ to work with your own hands, as we commanded you;

12 That ye may walk ¹⁴ honestly ¹⁴ toward them that are without, and that ye may have lack ¹⁵ of ¹⁵ nothing ¹⁵.

13 But ¹⁶ if ¹⁶ ye would not have you to be ignorant, brethren, concerning them which ¹⁷ are asleep, that ye sorrow not, ¹⁸ even as ¹⁸ others ¹⁸ which have no hope.

14 For ¹⁹ if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so ²⁰ they also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with ²¹ him ²¹.

15 For this we say unto you ²² by ²³ the word ²³ of the Lord, that ²⁴ we which are alive and remain unto the coming of the Lord shall not ²⁵ prevent ²⁵ them which are asleep.

16 For ²⁶ the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a ²⁷ shout ²⁷, with the voice of the archangel, and with ²⁸ the trump of God: ²⁹ and the dead in Christ shall rise first:

17 Then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them ³⁰ in the clouds, to meet the Lord ³¹ in the air ³¹: and so ³² shall we ever be with the Lord.

18 Wherefore ³³ I comfort one another with these words.

CHAPTER 5.

1 He precedeth in the former description of Christ's coming to judgment, 16 and giveth divers precepts, 23 and so concludeth the epistle.

BUT ¹ of the times and the seasons, brethren, ² ye have no need that I write unto you.

2 For yourselves know perfectly that ³ the day of the Lord so cometh as a thief in the night.

3 For ⁴ when they shall say, Peace and safety; then ⁵ sudden destruction cometh upon them, ⁶ as travail upon a woman with child; and they shall not escape.

4 But ye, brethren, are not in darkness, that ⁷ that day ⁷ should overtake you as a thief ⁸.

5 Ye are ⁹ all ⁹ the children of light, and the children of the day: we are not of the night, nor of darkness.

6 Therefore let us not sleep, as ¹⁰ others ¹⁰; but ¹¹ let us watch and be sober.

7 For ¹² they that sleep sleep in the night; and they that be drunken ¹³ are drunken in the night.

8 But let us, who are of the day, be sober, ¹⁴ putting on ¹⁴ the breastplate of faith and love; and for an helmet, the hope of salvation.

9 For ¹⁵ God ¹⁵ hath not appointed us to wrath, ¹⁶ but ¹⁶ to obtain salvation ¹⁶ by our Lord Jesus Christ.

10 Who died for us, that, whether we wake or sleep, we should ¹⁷ live together with him ¹⁷.

11 Wherefore ¹⁸ I comfort ¹⁸ yourselves together, and edify one another, even as also ye do.

12 And we beseech you, brethren, ¹⁹ to know them which labour among you, and are over you in the Lord, and admonish you;

13 And to ²⁰ esteem them very highly in love ²⁰ for their work's sake. ²¹ And be at peace ²¹ among yourselves ²¹.

14 Now we ²² exhort ²² you, brethren, warn them that are ²³ unruly, ²⁴ comfort the feebleminded, ²⁵ support the weak, ²⁶ be patient toward ²⁶ all men ²⁶.

15 See that none render evil for evil unto any man; but ever ²⁷ follow that which is good, both among yourselves, and to all men.

16 Rejoice evermore.

17 Pray without ceasing.

18 In every thing give thanks: for this is the will of God in Christ Jesus concerning you.

19 Quench not the Spirit.

20 Despise not ²⁸ prophesies ²⁸.

21 ²⁹ Prove ²⁹ all things; ³⁰ hold fast that which is ³⁰ good.

* THE SECOND EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE

TO THE THESSALONIANS*.

CHAPTER 1.

1 Saint Paul correcteth them of the good opinion which he had of their faith, love, and patience: 11 and therewithal teacheth diverse reasons for the comforting of them in persecution, whereof the chiefest is taken from the righteous judgment of God.

PAUL, and Silvanus, and Timothy, unto the church of the Thessalonians, in God our Father and the Lord Jesus Christ:

2 Grace unto you, and peace, from God our Father and the Lord Jesus Christ.

3 We are bound to thank God always for you, brethren, as it is meet, because that your faith groweth exceedingly, and the charity of every one of you all toward each other aboundeth;

4 So that we ourselves glory in you in the churches of God for your patience and faith in all your persecutions and tribulations that ye endure β:

5 Which is a manifest token of the righteous judgment of God, that ye may be counted worthy of the kingdom of God, for which ye also suffer β:

6 Seeing it is a righteous thing with God to recompense tribulation to them that trouble you;

7 And to you who are troubled rest with us, when the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels,

8 In flaming fire taking vengeance on them that know not God, and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ β:

9 Who shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord, and from the glory of his power;

10 When he shall come to be glorified in his saints, and to be admired in all them that believe (because our testimony among you was believed) in that day.

11 Wherefore also we pray always for you, that our God would increase unto you his calling, and fulfill all the good pleasure of his goodness, and the work of faith with power;

12 That the name of our Lord Jesus Christ may be glorified in you, and ye in him, according to the grace of our God and the Lord Jesus Christ.

CHAPTER 2.

1 He willet them to continue steadfast in the truth received, sheweth that there shall be a departure from the faith, and a discovery of antichrist, before the day of the Lord come. 18 And thereupon repeateth his former exhortation, and prayeth for them.

NOW we beseech you, brethren, by the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, and by our gathering together unto him,

2 That ye be not soon shaken in mind, or be troubled, neither by spirit, nor by word, nor by letter as from us, so that the day of Christ β is at hand.

3 Let no man deceive you by any means; for that day shall not come, except there come a falling away first, and that man of sin β shall be revealed, the son of perdition;

4 Who opposeth and exalteth himself above all that is called God, or that is worshipped; so that he shall sit in the temple of God, shewing himself that he is God.

5 Remember ye not, that, when I was yet with you, I told¹⁰ you these things?

6 And now ye know what¹⁰ I withheld¹⁰ eth¹⁰ that he might be revealed in his time.

7 For¹⁰ the mystery of¹¹ iniquity¹¹ doth already work: ¹²only he who now letteth will let, until he be taken¹³ out of the way.

8 And then shall¹³ that Wicked¹³ be revealed, whom¹³ the Lord¹³ β shall consume¹³ with the¹⁴ spirit¹⁴ of his mouth, and shall destroy¹⁴ with the¹⁵ brightness¹⁵ of his coming:

9 Even him, whose coming is¹⁶ after¹⁶ the working of Satan with all¹⁷ power and signs and lying wonders¹⁷,

10 And with all¹⁸ deceivableness of unrighteousness¹⁸ in them¹⁹ who perish¹⁹; because they received not the love of the truth, that they might be saved.

11 And¹⁹ for this cause God¹⁹ β shall send¹⁹ them²⁰ strong delusion²⁰, that they should believe²¹ a lie²¹:

12 That they all might be²² damned²² who believed not the truth, but had pleasure in unrighteousness.

13 But²² we are bound to give thanks always to God for you, brethren beloved of the Lord, because God²³ β hath²³ from the beginning chosen you²⁴ β to salvation²⁴ through sanctification of the Spirit and belief of the truth:

14 Whereunto²⁵ β he called²⁵ you²⁵ by our gospel, to the²⁶ obtaining²⁶ of the glory of our Lord Jesus Christ.

15 Therefore, brethren, stand fast, and hold²⁷ the traditions which ye have been taught, whether by word, or our epistle.

16 Now our Lord Jesus Christ himself, and β God, even our Father²⁸ β , which²⁸ hath loved²⁸ us, and²⁹ hath given²⁹ us everlasting³⁰ consolation³⁰ and good hope³⁰ through grace³⁰, 17 Comfort³¹ your hearts, and establish³¹ you³¹ in every good word and work.

CHAPTER 3.

1 He craveth their prayers for himself, 3 testeth what confidence he hath in them, 5 maketh request to God in their behalf, 6 teacheth them divers precepts, especially to shun idleness, and ill company, 16 and last of all concludeth with prayer and salutation.

FINALLY, brethren, pray for us, that the word of the Lord may have free course, and be glorified, even as it is with you;

2 And that we may be delivered from¹ unreasonable¹ and wicked men: for all men have not² faith².

3 But³ the Lord is faithful, who shall establish you, and keep you from⁴ evil.

4 And we have confidence in the Lord touching you, that ye both do and do the things which we command you.

5 And the Lord direct your hearts into the love of God, and into the patient waiting for Christ.

6 Now we command you, brethren, in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, that ye withdraw yourselves from every brother that walketh disorderly, and not after the tradition which β he β received of us.

7 For yourselves know how ye ought to follow us: for we behaved not ourselves disorderly among you;

8 Neither did we eat any man's bread for nought; but wrought⁶ with labour and travail night and day, that we might not be chargeable⁷ to any of you:

9 Not because we have not power, but to make ourselves an example unto you to follow us.

10 For even when we were with you, this we commanded you, that if any would not work, neither should he eat.

11 For we hear that there are some which walk among you disorderly, working⁹ not at all, but are busybodies.

12 Now them that are such we command and exhort by our Lord Jesus Christ, that with quietness they work, and eat their own bread.

13 But ye, brethren, be not weary in well doing.

14 And if any man obey not our word by this epistle, note that man, and have no company with him, that he may be ashamed.

15 Yet count him not as an enemy, but admonish him as a brother.

16 Now the Lord of peace himself give you¹⁰ peace always by all means. The Lord be with you all.

17 The salutation of Paul with mine own hand, which is the token in every epistle: so I write.

18 The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all. β Amen β .

CHAPTER 6.

1 Of the duty of servants. 3 Not to have fellowship with ungodly teachers. 6 Godliness is great gain. 10 and love of money the root of all evil. 11 What Timothy is to do, and what to follow, and whereof to admonish the rich. 20 To keep the purity of true doctrine, and to avoid profane janglings.

LET ¹as many ²servants as are under the yoke ³count their own masters worthy of all honour, ⁴that the name of God and his doctrine be not blasphemed.

⁵And they that have believing masters, let them not despise them, ⁶because they are brethren; but rather do them service, ⁷because ⁸they are faithful and beloved, partakers of the benefit. ⁹These things teach and exhort.

¹⁰If any man ¹¹teach otherwise, and ¹²consent ¹³not ¹⁴to wholesome words, ¹⁵even the words of our Lord Jesus Christ, ¹⁶and to the doctrine which is according to godliness;

¹⁷He is ¹⁸proud, ¹⁹knowing nothing, but ²⁰dotting about ²¹questions and strifes of words, whereof cometh envy, railings, evil surmising, ²²But ²³perverse disputings ²⁴of men of corrupt minds, and destitute of the truth, ²⁵supposing that ²⁶gain is godliness: ²⁷from such withdraw thyself.

²⁸But ²⁹godliness with contentment is great ³⁰gain.

³¹For ³²we brought nothing into this world, ³³and it is certain ³⁴we can carry nothing out.

³⁵And ³⁶having food and raiment ³⁷let us be therewith content.

³⁸But ³⁹they that will be ⁴⁰rich fall into temptation ⁴¹and a snare, and ⁴²into many foolish and hurtful lusts, ⁴³which drown men in destruction and perdition.

⁴⁴For ⁴⁵the love of money is ⁴⁶the root of all evil: ⁴⁷while some coveted after, they have ⁴⁸perred from the faith, and pierced themselves through with many sorrows.

⁴⁹But ⁵⁰thou, ⁵¹O man of God, flee these things; and follow after righteousness, godliness, faith, love, patience, meekness.

¹²Fight the good fight ¹³of faith; lay hold on eternal life, whereunto thou art ¹⁴also ¹⁵called, ¹⁶and ¹⁷thou hast professed ¹⁸it ¹⁹is good profession before many witnesses.

²⁰Give these charge in the sight of God, ²¹who quickeneth ²²all things, and before ²³Christ Jesus ²⁴who ²⁵before ²⁶Pontius Pilate witnessed ²⁷is ²⁸good confession.

²⁹That thou keep this commandment without spot, unrebukeable, ³⁰until the appearing of our Lord Jesus Christ:

³¹Which in his times he shall show, who is ³²the blessed and only Potentate, ³³the King of kings, and Lord of lords;

³⁴Who only hath immortality, dwelling in the light which no man can approach unto; ³⁵whom no man hath seen, nor can see: ³⁶to whom be honour and power everlasting. Amen.

³⁷Charge them that are rich in ³⁸this world, ³⁹that they be not highminded, ⁴⁰nor trust in ⁴¹uncertain riches, but in ⁴²the living ⁴³God, ⁴⁴who giveth us richly all things to enjoy;

⁴⁵That they do good, that ⁴⁶they be rich in good works, ⁴⁷ready to distribute, ⁴⁸willing to ⁴⁹communicate ⁵⁰is.

⁵¹Laying up in store for themselves a good foundation against the time to come, that they may ⁵²lay hold on ⁵³eternal life.

⁵⁴O Timothy, ⁵⁵keep that which is committed to thy trust, ⁵⁶avoiding ⁵⁷profane and vain babblings, and ⁵⁸oppositions ⁵⁹of science falsely so called ⁶⁰is.

⁶¹Which some professing ⁶²have erred concerning the faith. Grace be with ⁶³thee ⁶⁴3 times. Amen.

⁶⁵The first to Timothy was written from Laodicea, which is the chiefest city of Phrygia Pacatiana.

THE SECOND EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE

TO

CHAPTER 1.

1 Paul's love to Timothy, and the unforgotten faith which was in Timothy himself, his mother, and grandmother. 6 He is exhorted to stir up the gift of God which was in him, 8 to be steadfast, and patient in persecution, 13 and to persevere in the form and truth of that doctrine which he had learned of him. 15 Phygellus and Hermogenes, and such like, are noted, and Onesiphorus is highly commended.

PAUL, "an apostle of β Jesus Christ β by the will of God, according to β the promise of life which is in Christ Jesus,

2 To Timothy, my dearly beloved son: Grace, mercy, and peace, from God the Father and β Christ Jesus our Lord β .

3 I thank God, whom I serve from my forefathers with pure conscience, that without ceasing I have remembrance of these in my prayers night and day;

4 Greatly desiring to see thee, being mindful of thy tears, that I may be filled with joy;

5 When I call to remembrance the unforgotten faith that is in thee, which dwelt first in thy grandmother Lois, and thy mother Eunice; and I am persuaded that that in thee also.

6 Wherefore I put thee in remembrance that thou stir up the gift of God, which is in thee by the putting on of my hands.

7 For God hath not given us the spirit of fear; but of power, and of love, and of a sound mind.

8 Be not thou therefore ashamed of the testimony of our Lord, nor of me his prisoner: but be thou partaker of the afflictions of the gospel according to the power of God;

9 Who hath saved us, and called us with an holy calling, not according to our works, but according to his own purpose and grace, which was given us in Christ Jesus before the world began;

10 But is now made manifest by the appearing of our Saviour Jesus Christ, who hath abolished death, and hath brought life and immortality to light through the gospel;

11 Whereunto I am appointed a preacher, and an apostle, and a teacher of the Gentiles β .

12 For the which cause I also suffer these things: nevertheless I am not ashamed: for I know whom I have 13 Hold fast the form of sound words, which thou hast heard of me, in faith and love which is in Christ Jesus.

14 That good thing which was committed unto thee keep by the Holy Ghost which dwelleth in us.

15 This thou knowest, that all they which are in Asia be turned away from me; of whom are β Phygellus β and γ Hermogenes γ .

16 The Lord γ give mercy unto the house of Onesiphorus; for he oft refreshed me, and was not ashamed of my chain:

17 But, when he was in Rome, he sought me out very β diligently, and found me.

18 The Lord grant unto him that he may find mercy β of the Lord β in that day: and in how many things he ministered γ unto me γ at Ephesus, thou knowest! very well!

CHAPTER 2.

1 He is exhorted again to constancy and perseverance, and to do the duty of a faithful servant of the Lord in dividing the sword aright, and staying profane and vain babblings, 17 Of Hymeneus and Philetus. 19 The foundation of the Lord is sure. 21 He is taught wherof to beware, and what to follow after, and in what sort the servant of the Lord ought to behave himself.

THOU therefore, my son, be strong in the grace that is in Christ Jesus.

2 And the things that thou hast heard of me among many witnesses, the same commit thou to faithful men, who shall be able to teach others also.

3 Thou therefore endure hardness, as a good soldier of β Jesus Christ.

4 No man that β warreth β entangleth himself with the affairs of this life; that he may please him who hath chosen him to be a soldier.

5 And if a man also strive for masteries, yet is he not crowned, except he strive lawfully.

6 The husbandman that laboureth must be first partaker of the fruits.

7 Consider what I say; and the Lord β give thee β understanding in all things.

1 He adverteth him of the times to come, & describeth the enemies of the truth, 10. and commendeth the holy scriptures.

THIS I know also, that² in the last days perilous times shall come.2 For men shall be² lovers of their own selves,¹ covetous¹, ²boasters², proud,² blasphemers², ²disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy,3 Without natural affection, ²traitors², false accusers, ²incontinent, fierce, ²despisers of those that are good,4 Traitors², heady², highminded, ²lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God;5 Having a form of godliness, but ²denying² the power thereof: ²from such turn away.6 For² of this sort are they which creep into houses, and lead captive silly women laden with sins, led away with divers lusts.7 Ever learning, and never able² to come to the² knowledge² of the truth.8 Now as Jannes and Jambres stood against Moses, so do these also resist the truth: ²men of corrupt minds,² ²reprobate concerning² the faith.9 But they shall² proceed² no further: for their folly shall be manifest unto all men,² as their's also was.10 But² thou shalt fully know² my doctrine, manner of life, purpose, faith, longsuffering, charity, patience,¹⁰ in which I came unto me² at Antioch, at Iconium, at Lystra; ²what persecutions I endured²; but² out of them all the Lord delivered me.12 Yea, and² all that will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution.

13 But evil men and seducers shall wax worse and worse, deceiving, and being deceived.

14 But continue thou in the things which thou hast learned and hast been assured of, knowing of whom thou hast learned them;

15 And that from a child thou hast known the holy scriptures, which are able to make thee wise unto salvation through faith which is in Christ Jesus.

16 All scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness:

17 That the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works.

CHAPTER 4.

1 He exhorted him to do his duty with all care and diligence, 6 certifieth him of the nearness of his death, 9 willeth him to come speedily unto him, and to bring Marcus with him, and certain other things which he wrote for, 16 warneth him to beware of Alexander the smith, 16 informeth him what had befallen him at his first answering, 19 and soon after he concluded.

I CHARGE thee therefore before God, and the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing & his kingdom;

2 Preach the word; be instant in season, out of season; reprove, rebuke, exhort with all long suffering and doctrine.

3 For the time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine; but after their own lusts shall they heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears;

4 And they shall turn away their ears from the truth, and shall be turned unto fables.

5 But watch thou in all things, endure afflictions, do the work of an evangelist, make full proof of thy ministry.

6 For I am now ready to be offered, and the time of my departure is at hand.

7 I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith: Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give me at that day: and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing.

9 Do thy diligence to come shortly unto me:

10 For Demas hath forsaken me, having loved this present world, and is departed unto Thessalonica; Crescens to Galatia, Titus unto Dalmatia.

11 Only Luke is with me. Take Mark, and bring him with thee: for he is profitable to me for the ministry.

12 And Tychicus have I sent to Ephesus.

13 I cloke that I left at Troas with Carpus, when thou comest, bring with thee, and the books, but especially the parchments.

14 Alexander the coppermith did me much evil: the Lord reward him according to his works:

15 Of whom be thou ware also; for he hath greatly withstood our words.

16 At my first answer no man stood with me, but all men forsook me: I pray God that it may not be laid to their charge.

17 Notwithstanding the Lord stood with me, and strengthened me; that by me the preaching might be fully known, and that all the Gentiles might hear; and I was delivered out of the mouth of the lion.

18 And the Lord shall deliver me from every evil work, and will preserve me unto his heavenly kingdom: to whom be glory for ever and ever. Amen.

19 Salute Prisca and Aquila, and the household of Onesiphorus.

21 Do thy diligence to come before winter. Eubulus greeteth thee, and Pudens, and Linus, and Claudia, and all the brethren.

22 The Lord Jesus Christ be with thy spirit. Grace be with you. Amen.

The second epistle unto Timotheus, ordained the first bishop of the church of the Ephesians, was written from Rome, when Paul was brought before Nero the second time.

TITUS.

CHAPTER 1.

1 For what end Titus was left in Crete. 6 How they that are to be chosen ministers ought to be qualified. 11 The mouths of evil teachers to be stopped: 12 and what manner of men they be.

PAUL, a servant of God, and an apostle of Jesus Christ, according to the faith of God's elect, and the acknowledging of the truth which is after godliness;

2 in hope of eternal life, which God, that cannot lie, promised before the world began;

3 But hath in due times manifested his word through preaching, which is committed unto me according to the commandment of God our Saviour;

4 To Titus, mine own son after the common faith: Grace, & mercy, and peace, from God the Father, and the Lord Jesus Christ our Saviour.

5 For this cause left I thee in Crete, that thou shouldst set in order the things that are wanting, and ordain elders in every city, as I had appointed thee;

6 If any be blameless, the husband of one wife, having faithful children not accused of riot or unruly.

7 For a bishop must be blameless, as the steward of God; not selfwilled, not soon angry, not given to wine, no striker, not given to filthy lucre;

8 But a lover of hospitality, a lover of good men, sober, just, holy, temperate;

9 Holding fast the faithful word, as he hath been taught, that he may be able to sound doctrine both to exhort and to convince the gainsayers.

10 For there are many unruly and vain talkers and deceivers, specially they of the circumcision;

11 Whose mouths must be stopped, who subvert whole houses, teaching things which they ought not, for filthy lucre's sake.

12 Whose mouths must be stopped, who subvert whole houses, teaching things which they ought not, for filthy lucre's sake.

13 Whose mouths must be stopped, who subvert whole houses, teaching things which they ought not, for filthy lucre's sake.

14 Whose mouths must be stopped, who subvert whole houses, teaching things which they ought not, for filthy lucre's sake.

15 Whose mouths must be stopped, who subvert whole houses, teaching things which they ought not, for filthy lucre's sake.

16 Whose mouths must be stopped, who subvert whole houses, teaching things which they ought not, for filthy lucre's sake.

17 Whose mouths must be stopped, who subvert whole houses, teaching things which they ought not, for filthy lucre's sake.

18 Whose mouths must be stopped, who subvert whole houses, teaching things which they ought not, for filthy lucre's sake.

19 Whose mouths must be stopped, who subvert whole houses, teaching things which they ought not, for filthy lucre's sake.

20 Whose mouths must be stopped, who subvert whole houses, teaching things which they ought not, for filthy lucre's sake.

21 Whose mouths must be stopped, who subvert whole houses, teaching things which they ought not, for filthy lucre's sake.

22 Whose mouths must be stopped, who subvert whole houses, teaching things which they ought not, for filthy lucre's sake.

23 Whose mouths must be stopped, who subvert whole houses, teaching things which they ought not, for filthy lucre's sake.

24 Whose mouths must be stopped, who subvert whole houses, teaching things which they ought not, for filthy lucre's sake.

13 One of themselves, even a prophet of their own, said, The Cretians are always liars, evil beasts, insubutable.

14 This witness is true. Wherefore rebuke them sharply, that they may be sound in the faith;

15 Not giving heed to Jewish fables, and commandments of men, that turn from the truth.

16 Unto the pure all things are pure; but unto them that are defiled and unbelieving is nothing pure; but even their mind and conscience is defiled.

17 They profess that they know God; but in works they deny him, being abominable and disobedient, and unto every good work reprobate.

18 They profess that they know God; but in works they deny him, being abominable and disobedient, and unto every good work reprobate.

19 They profess that they know God; but in works they deny him, being abominable and disobedient, and unto every good work reprobate.

20 They profess that they know God; but in works they deny him, being abominable and disobedient, and unto every good work reprobate.

21 They profess that they know God; but in works they deny him, being abominable and disobedient, and unto every good work reprobate.

22 They profess that they know God; but in works they deny him, being abominable and disobedient, and unto every good work reprobate.

23 They profess that they know God; but in works they deny him, being abominable and disobedient, and unto every good work reprobate.

24 They profess that they know God; but in works they deny him, being abominable and disobedient, and unto every good work reprobate.

25 They profess that they know God; but in works they deny him, being abominable and disobedient, and unto every good work reprobate.

26 They profess that they know God; but in works they deny him, being abominable and disobedient, and unto every good work reprobate.

27 They profess that they know God; but in works they deny him, being abominable and disobedient, and unto every good work reprobate.

28 They profess that they know God; but in works they deny him, being abominable and disobedient, and unto every good work reprobate.

29 They profess that they know God; but in works they deny him, being abominable and disobedient, and unto every good work reprobate.

30 They profess that they know God; but in works they deny him, being abominable and disobedient, and unto every good work reprobate.

31 They profess that they know God; but in works they deny him, being abominable and disobedient, and unto every good work reprobate.

32 They profess that they know God; but in works they deny him, being abominable and disobedient, and unto every good work reprobate.

33 They profess that they know God; but in works they deny him, being abominable and disobedient, and unto every good work reprobate.

34 They profess that they know God; but in works they deny him, being abominable and disobedient, and unto every good work reprobate.

35 They profess that they know God; but in works they deny him, being abominable and disobedient, and unto every good work reprobate.

36 They profess that they know God; but in works they deny him, being abominable and disobedient, and unto every good work reprobate.

37 They profess that they know God; but in works they deny him, being abominable and disobedient, and unto every good work reprobate.

38 They profess that they know God; but in works they deny him, being abominable and disobedient, and unto every good work reprobate.

39 They profess that they know God; but in works they deny him, being abominable and disobedient, and unto every good work reprobate.

40 They profess that they know God; but in works they deny him, being abominable and disobedient, and unto every good work reprobate.

41 They profess that they know God; but in works they deny him, being abominable and disobedient, and unto every good work reprobate.

CHAPTER 2.

1 Directions given unto Titus both for his doctrine and life. 9 Of the duty of servants, and in general of all Christians.

BUT speak thou the things which become sound doctrine:

2 That the aged men be sober, grave, temperate, sound in faith, in charity, in patience.

3 The aged women likewise, that they be in behaviour as becometh holiness, not false accusers, given to much wine, teachers of good things;

4 That they may teach the young women to be sober, to love their husbands, to love their children.

5 To be discreet, chaste, keepers at home, good, obedient to their own husbands, that the word of God be not blasphemed.

6 Young men likewise exhort to be sober minded.

7 In all things shewing thyself a pattern of good works: in doctrine showing uncorruptness, gravity, sincerity.

8 Sound speech, that cannot be condemned; that he that is of the contrary part may be ashamed, having no evil thing to say of you.

9 Exhort servants to be obedient unto their own masters, and to please them well in all things; not answering again;

10 Not purloining, but showing all good fidelity; that they may adorn the doctrine of God our Saviour in all things.

11 For the grace of God is that bringeth salvation, hath appeared to all men.

12 It teacheth us to deny ungodliness and worldly lusts, and that we should live soberly, righteously, and godly, in this present world.

13 It teacheth us to love one another with pure hearts, with good consciences, and with sincerity, that we may truly love one another.

14 It teacheth us to love God, and to love our neighbours as ourselves.

15 It teacheth us to be obedient to the Lord, and to the King, as unto the Lord.

16 It teacheth us to be ready to obey the Lord, and to the King, as unto the Lord.

17 It teacheth us to be ready to obey the Lord, and to the King, as unto the Lord.

18 It teacheth us to be ready to obey the Lord, and to the King, as unto the Lord.

19 It teacheth us to be ready to obey the Lord, and to the King, as unto the Lord.

20 It teacheth us to be ready to obey the Lord, and to the King, as unto the Lord.

21 It teacheth us to be ready to obey the Lord, and to the King, as unto the Lord.

22 It teacheth us to be ready to obey the Lord, and to the King, as unto the Lord.

lation in thy love, because the ⁷bowels⁸ of the saints ⁷are⁷ refreshed by thee, brother.

8 Wherefore, ⁷though I might be much bold in Christ to enjoin thee that which is ⁸convenient⁸, 9 Yet for love's sake ⁹I rather beseech thee, being such an one as Paul ¹⁰the aged, ¹⁰and now also a prisoner of ¹⁰Jesus Christ ¹⁰.

10 I beseech thee⁹ for my son ⁹Onesimus, ⁹whom I have begotten in my bonds:

11 Which in time past was to thee unprofitable, but now profitable to thee and to me:

12 Whom I ¹¹have sent¹¹ again¹¹: thou therefore receive¹¹ him, that is, ¹¹mine own bowels¹¹:

13 Whom I ¹³would have retained¹³ with me, ¹³that in thy stead he might have ministered unto me in the bonds of the gospel:

14 But without thy mind would I do nothing; ¹⁴that thy ¹⁴benefit¹⁴ should not be as it were of necessity, but willingly.

15 For perhaps he therefore ¹⁵departed¹⁵ for a season, that thou shouldst ¹⁵receive¹⁵ him for ever;

16 Not now as a ¹⁶servant¹⁶, but above a ¹⁶servant¹⁶, ¹⁶a brother beloved, specially to me, but how much more unto thee, ¹⁶both in the flesh, and in the Lord?

17 If thou count me therefore ¹⁷a partner, receive him as myself.

18 If he hath wronged thee, or owe thee ought, put that on mine account;

19 I Paul have written ¹⁹it with mine own hand, I will repay ¹⁹it: albeit I do not say to thee how thou shalt owe me even thine own self besides.

20 Yea, brother, let me have ²⁰joy²⁰ of thee in the Lord: ²⁰refresh my ²⁰bowels²⁰ in ²⁰the Lord's²⁰.

21 Having confidence in thy obedience I ²¹wrote²¹ unto thee, knowing that thou wilt also do more than I say.

22 But withal prepare me also a lodging: for ²²I trust that ²²through your prayer I shall be given unto you.

23 There salute thee ²³Ephrasa, my fellowprisoner in Christ Jesus;

24 ²⁴And ²⁴Marcus²⁴, ²⁴Aristarchus²⁴, ²⁴Demas²⁴, ²⁴Lucas²⁴, my fellowlabourers.

25 The grace of ²⁵our²⁵ Lord Jesus Christ be with your spirit. ²⁵Ameny.

17 Wherefore in all things it behoved him to be made like unto his brethren, that he might be a merciful and faithful high priest in things pertaining to God, to make reconciliation for the sins of the people.
18 For in that he himself hath suffered being tempted, he is able to succour them that are tempted.

CHAPTER 3.

1 Christ is more worthy than Moses, 7 therefore if ye believe not in him, ye shall be more worthy punishment than hardhearted Israel.

WHEREFORE, holy brethren, partakers of the heavenly calling, consider of the Apostle and High Priest of our profession, Jesus Christ; 2 Who was faithful to him that appointed him, as also Moses was faithful in all he said.

3 For this man was counted worthy of more glory than Moses, inasmuch as he who hath builded the house hath more honour than the house.

4 For every house is builded by some man; but he that built all things is God.

5 And Moses verily was faithful in all he said, as a servant, for a testimony of those things which were to be spoken after him;

6 But Christ, as a son over his own house, whose house we are, if we hold fast the confidence and the rejoicing of the hope firm unto the end.

7 Wherefore (as the Holy Ghost saith, 'To day if ye will hear his voice, 8 Harden not your hearts, as in the provocation, in the day of temptation in the wilderness: 9 When your fathers tempted me, proved me, and saw my works forty years.

10 Wherefore I was grievously vexed with that generation, and said, They do always err in their heart; and they have not known my ways.

11 So I swear in my wrath, that they shall not enter into my rest.

12 Take heed, brethren, lest there be in any of you an evil heart of unbelief, in departing from the living God.

13 But exhort one another daily, while it is called To day; lest any of you be hardened through the deceitfulness of sin.

14 For we are made partakers of Christ, if we hold the beginning of our confidence steadfast unto the end;

15 While it is said, To day if ye will hear his voice, harden not your hearts, as in the provocation.

16 For some, when they had heard, did provoke: howbeit not all that came out of Egypt by Moses.

17 But with whom was he grievously vexed forty years? was it not with them that had sinned, whose carcases fell in the wilderness?

18 And to whom swore he that they should not enter into his rest, but to them that believed not?

19 So we see that they could not enter in because of unbelief.

CHAPTER 4.

1 The rest of Christians is attained by faith. 2 The power of God's word. 3 By our high priest Jesus the Son of God, subject to infirmities, but not sin, we must and may go boldly to the throne of grace.

LET us therefore fear, lest, a promise being left us of entering into his rest, any of you should seem to come short of it.

2 For unto us was the gospel preached: as well as unto them: but the word preached did not profit them, because they did not mix it with faith in them that heard it.

3 For we which have believed do enter into rest, as he said, 7 As I have sworn in my wrath, if they shall enter into my rest: although the works were finished from the foundation of the world.

4 For he spake in a certain place of the THEREFORE leaving the principles of the doctrine of Christ, let us go unto perfection; not laying again the foundation of repentance from dead works, and of faith toward God, 2. Off the doctrine of baptisms, and of laying on of hands, and of resurrection of the dead, and of eternal judgment.

3 And this will we do, if God permit.

4 For it is impossible for those who were once enlightened, and have tasted of the heavenly gift, and were made partakers of the Holy Ghost,

5 And have tasted the good word of God, and the powers of the world to come,

6 If they shall fall away, to renew them again unto repentance; seeing they crucify to themselves the Son of God afresh, and put him to an open shame.

7 For the earth which drinketh in the rain that cometh out upon it, and bringeth forth herbs meet for them, by whom it is dressed, receiveth blessing from God:

8 But that which beareth thorns and briers is rejected, and is nigh unto cursing; whose end is to be burned.

9 But, beloved, we are persuaded better things of you, and things that accompany salvation, though we thus speak.

10 For God is not unrighteous to forget your work and labour of love, which ye have shewed toward his name, in that ye have ministered to the saints, and do minister.

11 And we desire that every one of you do show the same diligence to the full assurance of hope unto the end:

12 That ye be not slothful, but followers of them who through faith and patience inherit the promises.

13 For when God made promise to Abraham, because he could swear by no greater, he swore by himself, 14 Saying, Surely blessing I will bless thee, and multiplying I will multiply thee. And so, after he had patiently endured, he obtained the promise.

16 For men verily swear by the greater: and an oath for confirmation is to them an end of all strife.

17 Wherein God, willing more abundantly to shew unto the heirs of promise the immutability of his counsel, confirmed it by an oath:

18 That by two immutable things, in which it was impossible for God to lie, we might have a strong consolation, who have fled for refuge to lay hold upon the hope set before us:

19 Which hope we have as an anchor of the soul, both sure and stedfast, and which entereth into that within the veil;

20 / Whither the forerunner is for us entered, even Jesus, made an high priest for ever after the order of Melchisedec.

CHAPTER 7.

1 Christ Jesus is a priest after the order of Melchisedec, 11 and so, far more excellent than the priests of Aaron's order.

FOR this Melchisedec, king of Salem, priest of the most high God, who met Abraham returning from the slaughter of the kings, and blessed him;

2 To whom also Abraham gave a tenth part of all; first being by interpretation King of righteousness, and after that also King of Salem, which is, King of peace;

3 Without father, without mother, without descent, having neither beginning of days, nor end of life; but made like unto the Son of God; abideth a priest continually.

4 Now consider how great this man was, unto whom even the patriarch Abraham gave the tenth of the spoils:

5 And verily they that are of the sons of Levi, who receive the office of the priesthood, have a commandment to take tithes of the people according to the law, that is, of their brethren, though they come out of the loins of Abraham:

6 But he whose descent is not counted from them received tithes of Abraham, and blessed him that had the promises.

7 And without all contradiction the less is blessed of the better.

8 And here men that die receive tithes; but there he receiveth them, of whom it is witnessed that he liveth.

9 And as I may so say, Levi also, who receiveth tithes, payed tithes in Abraham.

10 For he was yet in the loins of his father, when Melchisedec met him.

11 If therefore perfection were by the Levitical priesthood, (for under it the people received the law,) what further need was there that another priest should rise after the order of Melchisedec,⁹ and not be called after the order of Aaron?⁹

13 For the priesthood being changed, there is made of necessity a change also of the law.

15 For he of whom these things are spoken¹⁰ pertaineth to¹⁰ another tribe, of which no man¹¹ gave¹¹ attendance at the altar.

16 For it is evident¹² that our Lord¹² sprang¹² out of Juda; of which tribe Moses spake nothing concerning priesthood.

15 And it is yet far more evident: ¹⁴for that¹⁴ after the similitude of Melchisedec there ariseth¹⁴ another priest¹⁴.

16 Who¹⁶ is made¹⁶, not after the law of a carnal commandment, but after the power of an endless life.

17 For he is testifies, ¹⁷Thou art a priest for ever after the order of Melchisedec.

18 For there is verily a disannulling of the commandment going before for the weakness and unprofitableness thereof.

19 For the law made nothing perfect, ¹⁹but the bringing in of a better hope did¹⁹; by the which we draw nigh unto God.

20 And inasmuch as not without an oath²⁰ he was made priest²⁰:

21 (For those priests were made²¹ without an oath; but this with an oath by him that said unto him, ²¹The Lord sware and will not repent, Thou art a priest for ever after the order of Melchisedec:)

22 By so much was Jesus made a surety of a better testament²².

23 And they truly were many priests²³, because they were²³ not suffered to continue by reason of death:

24 But this man, because he continueth ever, ²⁴hath an unchangeable priesthood.

25 Wherefore he is able also to save them to the uttermost that come unto God by him, seeing he ever liveth to make intercession for them.

26 For such an high priest became us, who is holy, harmless, undefiled, separate from sinners, and made higher than the heavens;

27 Who needeth not daily²⁷, as those²⁷ high priests, to offer up sacrifice, first for his own sins, and then for the people's: for this he did once, when he offered up himself.

28 For the law maketh men high priests which have infirmity; but the word of the oath, which was since the law, maketh the Son, who is ²⁷consecrated²⁷ for evermore.

CHAPTER 8.

1 By the eternal priesthood of Christ the Levitical priesthood of Aaron is abolished. 7 And the temporal covenant with the fathers, by the eternal covenant of the gospel.

NOW of the things which we have spoken this is the sum: We have such an high priest, who is set on the right hand of the throne of the Majesty in the heavens;

2 A minister of the sanctuary, and of the true tabernacle, which the Lord pitched, and not man.

3 For every high priest is ordained to offer gifts and sacrifices: wherefore it is of necessity that this man have something also to offer.

4 For if he were on earth, he should not be a priest, seeing that there are priests that offer gifts according to the law:

5 Who serve unto the example and shadow of heavenly things, as Moses was admonished of God when he was about to make the tabernacle: for, See, saith he, that thou make all things according to the pattern shewed to thee in the mount.

6 But now hath he obtained a more excellent ministry, by how much also he is the mediator of a better covenant, which was established upon better promises.

7 For if that first covenant had been faultless, then should no place have been sought for the second.

8 For finding fault with them, he saith, Behold, the days come, saith the Lord, when I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel and with the house of Judah:

9 Not according to the covenant that I made with their fathers in the day when I took them by the hand to lead them out of the land of Egypt; because they regarded them not, my covenant, and I repented them not, saith the Lord.

10 For this is the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel after those days, saith the Lord: I will put my laws into their mind, and write them in their hearts: and I will be to them a God, and they shall be to me a people:

11 And they shall not teach every man his neighbour, and every man his brother, saying, Know the Lord: for all 13 In that he saith. A new covenant, he hath made the first old. Now that which ¹⁸decayeth and wudgeth old is ¹⁹ready to vanish away ²⁰.

CHAPTER 9.

1 The description of the rites and bloody sacrifices of the law, 11 far inferior to the dignity and perfection of the blood and sacrifice of Christ.

THEN verily the first covenant had also ordinances of divine service, and ²a worldly sanctuary.

2 For there was ³a tabernacle ⁴made; and ⁵the first ⁶wherein ⁷was ⁸the candlestick; and ⁹the table; and the shewbread; which is called ¹⁰the sanctuary.

3 And after the second veil, the tabernacle ⁴which is called ⁵the holiest of all: ⁶Which had ⁷the golden censer, and ⁸the ark of the covenant overlaid round about with gold, wherein was ⁹the golden pot that had manna, and ¹⁰Aaron's rod that budded, and ¹¹the tables of the covenant;

5 And ⁶over it the cherubims ⁷of glory ⁸shadowing the mercyseat; of which we cannot now speak particularly.

6 Now when these things were thus ⁷ordained ⁸in the priests ⁹went ¹⁰always into the ¹¹first ¹²tabernacle, accomplishing the service of God.

7 But into the second ⁸went the high priest alone ⁹once every year, not without blood, ¹⁰which he ¹¹offered ¹²for himself, and ¹³for the errors of the people:

8 The Holy Ghost this signifying, that ⁹the way into ¹⁰the holiest of all ¹¹was not yet ¹²made manifest, while as the ¹³first ¹⁴tabernacle ¹⁵was ¹⁶yet standing:

9 Which was ¹⁰a figure ¹¹for the time then present ¹²in which ¹³the ¹⁴offerings ¹⁵were offered ¹⁶both gifts and sacrifices, that could not make him that did the service perfect, ¹⁷as pertaining to the conscience:

10 Which stood only in meats and drinks, and ¹¹divers washings, ¹²and ¹³carnal ¹⁴offerings.

dinances ², imposed on them until the time of reformation.

11 But Christ being come ²an high priest ³of ⁴good things ⁵to come ⁶by ⁷the ⁸greater and more perfect tabernacle, not made with hands, that is to say, not ⁹of this building;

12 Neither ³by the blood of goats and calves, but by his own blood he entered in ⁴once ⁵into the holy place, ⁶having obtained ⁷eternal redemption for us.

13 For if ²the blood of bulls and of goats, and ³the ashes of an heifer sprinkling the unclean, sanctifieth to the purifying of the flesh:

14 How much more ²shall the blood of Christ, ³who through the eternal Spirit ⁴offered himself without spot to God, ⁵purge ⁶your conscience from ⁷dead works ⁸to serve the living God?

15 And for this cause ²he is the mediator of ³the ⁴new testament ⁵, that ⁶by means of death ⁷he is the redemption of the transgressions that were under the first ⁸testament ⁹; ¹⁰they which are called might receive the promise of eternal inheritance.

16 For where ²a testament is, there must also of necessity ³be ⁴the death of the testator.

17 For ²a testament is of force after men are dead: ³otherwise ⁴it is of no strength at all ⁵while the testator liveth.

18 Whereupon neither the first testament ²was ³dedicated ⁴without blood.

19 For when Moses had spoken every precept to all the people according to the law, he took the blood of ²calves and of goats ³, with water, and ⁴scarlet wool, and hyssop, and sprinkled both the book, and all the people, 20 Saying, ²This is the blood of the testament ³which God ⁴hath enjoined ⁵unto you.

21 Moreover ²he sprinkled with ³blood ⁴both the tabernacle, and all the vessels of the ministry.

22 And ²almost all things are by the law ³purged ⁴with blood; and ⁵without shedding of blood ⁶is ⁷no remission.

23 It was therefore necessary that "the patterns" of things in the heavens should be purified with these; but the heavenly things themselves with better sacrifices than these.

24 For "Christ" is not entered "into the holy places" made with hands, which are the "figures" of "the true"; but into heaven itself, now "to appear in the presence of God for us."

25 Nor yet that he should offer himself often, as "the high priest entereth into the holy place every year with blood of others;"

26 For then must he often have suffered since the foundation of the world: but now "once" in the end of the "world" hath he appeared to put away sin by "the sacrifice of himself."

27 "And" as it is appointed unto men once to die, "but after this the judgment:"

28 So "Christ" was once "offered to bear" the sins of many; and unto them that "look for him," shall he appear the second time without sin unto salvation.

CHAPTER 10.

1 The weakness of the law sacrifices. 10 The sacrifice of Christ's body once offered. 14 For ever hath taken away sins. 19 An exhortation to hold fast the faith, with patience and thanksgiving.

FOR the law having "a shadow" of "good things" to come, and not the very image of the things, "can" never with "those sacrifices" which they offered year by year continually make the comers thereunto "perfect."

2 For then "would they not have ceased to be offered?" because that the worshippers once purged should have had no more "conscience" of sins.

3 "But in those sacrifices there is a remembrance again made" of sins every year.

4 For "it is not possible" that the blood of bulls and of goats should take away sins.

5 Wherefore when he cometh into the world, he saith, "Sacrifice and offering thou wouldest not, but a body" hath thou prepared "me:"

6 In "burnt offerings" and "sacrifices" for sin thou "hast had" no pleasure.

7 Then said I, Lo, "I come" (in the "volume" of the book it is written of me), to do thy will, O God.

8 Above when he said, "Sacrifice and offering and burnt offerings" and offering for sin thou wouldest not, neither hast pleasure therein; which are offered "by"
the law;

9 Then "said" he, Lo, "I come" to do thy will, O God. He taketh away the first, that he may establish the second.

10 "By" the which will we "are" sanctified "through the offering of the body of Jesus Christ once for all."

11 And every "priest" standeth "daily ministering and offering oftentimes the same sacrifices," which can never take away sins:

12 "But this man, after he had offered one sacrifice for sins" for ever, "sat down" on the right hand of God;

13 From henceforth "expecting" "till his enemies be made his footstool."

14 For by one offering "he hath perfected for ever them" that are sanctified.

15 Whereof the Holy Ghost also is a witness to us: for after that he had said
"before,"

16 "This is the covenant that I will make with them after those days," saith the Lord, "I will put my laws into their hearts, and in their minds will I write them;"

17 "And their sins and iniquities will I remember no more."

18 Now where remission of these is, there is no more offering for sin.

19 Having therefore, brethren, "no boldness to enter" into the "holiest" "by" the blood of Jesus,

20 "By" a new and living way, which "I hath" consecrated for us, "through the veil," that is to say, his flesh;

21 And having "an high priest" over
"the house of God;"

22 "Let us draw near with a true heart
"in full assurance of faith, having our hearts sprinkled "from an evil conscience, and "our bodies washed with pure water."

23 "Let us hold fast the profession of our "faith" "without wavering;" (for "he is faithful that promised:)"

24 And let us consider one another to provoke unto love and to good works:

25 "Not forsaking" the assembling of ourselves together, "as the manner of some is; but exhorting one another: and "so much the more, as ye see "the day approaching."

26 For "if we sin wilfully" "after that we have received the knowledge of the truth, there remaineth no more sacrifice for
sins,

27 But a certain fearful looking for of judgment and fiery indignation, which shall devour the adversaries.

28 He that despised Moses' law died without mercy under two or three witnesses:

29 Of how much sorer punishment, suppose ye, shall he be thought worthy, who hath trodden under foot the Son of God, and hath counted the blood of the covenant wherewith he was sanctified, an unbloody thing, and hath done despite unto the Spirit of grace?

30 For we know him that hath said, Vengeance belongeth unto me, I will recompense, saith the Lord. And again, The Lord shall judge his people.

31 It is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God.

32 But call to remembrance the former days, in which, after ye were illuminated, ye endured a great fight of afflictions;

33 Partly, whilst ye were made a gazing-stock both by reproaches and afflictions; and partly, whilst ye became companions of them that were so used.

34 For ye had compassion of me in my bonds, and took joyfully the spoiling of your goods, knowing in yourselves that ye have in heaven a better and an enduring substance.

35 Cast not away therefore your confidence, which hath great recompense of reward.

36 For ye have need of patience, that, after ye have done the will of God, ye might receive the promise.

37 For yet a little while, and he that shall come will come, and will not tarry. Now the just shall live by faith: but if any man draw back, my soul shall have no pleasure in him.

38 But we are not of them who draw back unto perdition; but of them that believe to the saving of the soul.

2 For by it the elders obtained a good report.

3 Through faith we understand that the worlds were framed by the word of God, so that things which are seen were not so made of things which do appear.

4 By faith Abel offered unto God a more excellent sacrifice than Cain, by which he obtained witness that he was righteous, God testifying of his gifts: and by it he being dead yet speaketh.

5 By faith Enoch was translated that he should not see death; and was not found, because God had translated him: for before his translation he had this testimony, that he pleased God.

6 But without faith it is impossible to please him: for he that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him.

7 By faith Noah, being warned of God of things not seen as yet, moved with fear, prepared an ark to the saving of his house; by the which he condemned the world, and became heir of the righteousness which is by faith.

8 By faith Abraham, when he was called to go out into a place which he should after receive for an inheritance, obeyed; and he went out, not knowing whither he went.

9 By faith he sojourned in the land of promise, as in a strange country, dwelling in tabernacles with Isaac and Jacob, the heirs with him of the same promise:

10 For he looked for a city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God.

11 Through faith also Sara herself received strength to conceive seed, and was delivered of a child, when she was past age, because she judged him faithful who had promised.

12 Therefore sprang there even of one, and him as good as dead, so many as the stars of the sky in multitude, and as the sand which is by the sea shore innumerable.

13 These all died in faith, not having

VAR. READ.—Chap. 12. V. 3. β So A D⁴, La. Tr. T⁵. WH²; against thieves (i.e. to their own real hurt) M⁴ D⁴, Vulg. (best MSS.) Pesch. WH². —V. 7. β is for chastening that ye are enduring; God death (so Al. Da. Del. translate; Endure for your chastening (i.e. amendment) when God death... Vulg., Ed.) N⁴ A, Vulg. Memph. Thrb., Ed. —V. 15. β So D; the many, the greater number N⁴ A, Ed. —V. 16. β So M⁴ D⁴; his own M⁴ A C D⁴, Ed.

3 4 For 4 consider 5 him that 6 endured 6 such contradiction of sinners β against himself β, lest ye be wearied and faint in your minds.

4 Ye have not yet resisted unto blood, striving against sin.

5 And 7 ye have 7 forgotten 8 the 9 exhortation 8 which speaketh unto you as unto children, 'My son, despise not thou the chastening of the Lord, nor faint when thou art rebuked of him:

6 For 4 whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth, and scourgeth every son whom he receiveth.

7 β If ye endure chastening, God dealeth β with you as with sons; for 10 what son is he 10 whom the father chasteneth not?

8 But if ye be without chastisement, —whereof all 11 are 11 partakers, then are ye bastards, and not sons.

9 Furthermore 12 we have had fathers of our flesh which corrected us 12, and we gave them reverence: shall we not much rather be in subjection unto 13 the Father of spirits, and live?

10 For they verily 13 for a few days chastened us 13 after their own pleasure; but he for our profit, 14 that we might be partakers of his holiness.

11 Now no chastening for the present seemeth to be joyous, but grievous: nevertheless afterward it yieldeth 15 the peaceable fruit of righteousness unto them which 15 are 15 exercised thereby.

12 Wherefore 16 lift up the hands 15 which hang down 15, and the 16 feeble 16 knees;

13 And make 17 straight paths 17 for your feet 17, lest that which is lame be turned out of the way 17; but 19 let it 19 rather be healed.

14 Follow peace with 20 all men 20, and holiness 21, without which no man shall see the Lord:

15 Looking diligently 15 lest any man 22 fall 22 of the grace of God; 15 lest any root of bitterness springing up trouble you, and thereby β many β be defiled;

16 Lest there be any fornicator, or profane person, as Easan, 16 who for one morsel of meat sold β his β birthright.

17 For ye know how that afterward, 17 when he 23 would have inherited 23 the blessing, he was rejected: 18 for he found no 24 place of repentance 24, though he sought 24 it 24 carefully with tears.

18 For ye are not come unto β 25 the mount β 25 that might be touched β 25, and 27 that burned with fire 27, nor unto blackness, and darkness, and tempest,

19 And the sound of a trumpet, and the voice of words; which voice they that heard 19 intreated that 28 the word 28 should not be spoken to them any more:

20 (For they could not endure that which was commanded, 20 And if so much as a beast touch the mountain, it shall be stoned, or thrust through with a dart: β 21

21 A so terrible was 21 the sight 21, that Moses said, I exceedingly fear and quake.)

22 But ye are come 22 unto mount Sion, 22 and unto the city of the living God, the heavenly Jerusalem, 22 and β to 22 an innumerable company 22 of angels,

23 To the 23 general assembly 23 and church of 23 the firstborn β, which are 23 written in heaven, and to 23 God 23 the Judge of all 23, and to the spirits of just men 23 made perfect, 24 And to 24 Jesus 24 the mediator 24 of the new 24 covenant, and to 24 the blood of sprinkling, that speaketh β better things β 25 than 25 that of Abel 25.

26 See that ye refuse not him that speaketh. For 26 if they escaped not 26 who refused 26 him that 26 spake 26 on earth, much more shall not we escape, if we turn away from him that speaketh from heaven:

26 Whose voice then shook the earth: but now he hath promised, saying, 27 Yet once more 1 I shake β 27 not the earth only, but also heaven.

27 And this word, Yet once more, signifies 27 the 27 removing 27 of those things that 27 are shaken, as of things that are made, 27 that 27 those things which cannot be shaken may remain.

10† course of nature¹⁰; and it is set on fire of hell⁸.

7 For every kind of beasts, and of birds, and of ¹¹serpents¹¹, and of things in the sea, is tamed, and hath been tamed of mankind:

8 But the tongue can no man tame; ¹²it is ¹³an unruly ¹⁴evil, ¹⁵full ¹⁶of deadly poison.

9 Therewith bless we ¹⁰God, even the Father⁸; and therewith curse we men, ¹¹which are made after the similitude of God.

10 Out of the same mouth proceedeth blessing and cursing. My brethren, these things ought not so to be.

11 Doth ¹²a ¹³fountain send forth at the same ¹⁴place ¹⁵sweet water and bitter¹⁶?

12 Can the fig tree, my brethren, bear olive berries? either a vine, figs? so can no fountain both yield salt water and fresh¹⁷.

13 ¹⁴Who is a wise man and endued with knowledge among you? let him shew out of ¹⁵a good conversation ¹⁶his works ¹⁷with meekness of wisdom.

14 But if ye have ¹⁵bitter envying and ¹⁶strife¹⁷ in your hearts, ¹⁸ye glory not, and lie not against the truth¹⁹.

15 ¹⁶This wisdom ¹⁷descendeth not ¹⁸from above, but is earthly, ¹⁹sensual, devilish.

16 For ¹⁷where envying and ¹⁸strife¹⁹ is, there is ²⁰confusion and every evil work.

17 But ¹⁸the wisdom that is from above is ¹⁹first ²⁰pure, then peaceable, ²¹gentle²², and easy to be ²³intreated²⁴, full of mercy and good fruits, ²⁵without partiality²⁶, and without hypocrisy.

18 ¹⁹And the fruit of righteousness ²⁰is sown in peace of them that make peace²¹.

1 We are to strive against covetousness, 4. Intemperance, 5. pride, 11. detraction, and rash judgment of others: 13. and n. to be confident in the good success of worldly business, but mindful ever of the uncertainty of this life, to commit ourselves and all our affairs to God's providence.

FROM whence come wars ¹and ²fightings among you? come they not hence, even of your lusts ³that war in your members?

2 Ye lust, and have not: ¹ye kill², and desire to have³, and cannot obtain: ye fight and war, yet ye have not⁴, because ye ask not.

3 Ye ask, and receive not, ¹because ye ask amiss, that ye may ²consume it ³upon your lusts.

4 ¹Ye adulterers and adulteresses, ye know ye not ²placard ³the friendship of ⁴peace.

5 ¹Ye know ye not ²placard ³the friendship of ⁴peace.

6 ¹Ye know ye not ²placard ³the friendship of ⁴peace.

7 ¹Ye know ye not ²placard ³the friendship of ⁴peace.

8 ¹Ye know ye not ²placard ³the friendship of ⁴peace.

9 ¹Ye know ye not ²placard ³the friendship of ⁴peace.

10 ¹Ye know ye not ²placard ³the friendship of ⁴peace.

11 ¹Ye know ye not ²placard ³the friendship of ⁴peace.

12 ¹Ye know ye not ²placard ³the friendship of ⁴peace.

13 ¹Ye know ye not ²placard ³the friendship of ⁴peace.

14 ¹Ye know ye not ²placard ³the friendship of ⁴peace.

15 ¹Ye know ye not ²placard ³the friendship of ⁴peace.

16 ¹Ye know ye not ²placard ³the friendship of ⁴peace.

17 ¹Ye know ye not ²placard ³the friendship of ⁴peace.

the world is enmity with God? / whose- ever therefore will be a friend of the world ¹is ²the enemy of God.

5 ¹Do ye think that the scripture ²saith in vain³, ⁴The spirit that ⁵dwelleth ⁶in us lusteth ⁷to envy?

6 But he giveth more grace⁸. Wherefore ⁹he ¹⁰saith, ¹¹God resisteth the proud, but giveth grace unto the humble.

7 Submit yourselves therefore to God. ⁸Resist ⁹the devil, and he will flee from you.

8 Draw nigh to God, and he will draw nigh to you. ⁹Cleanse your hands, ye sinners; and ¹⁰purify your hearts, ye ¹¹double minded.

9 ¹⁰Be afflicted, and mourn, ¹¹and ye will weep: let your laughter be turned to mourning, and your joy to ¹²heaviness¹³.

10 ¹¹Humble yourselves in the sight of the Lord, and he shall lift you up.

11 ¹²Speak not evil one of another, brethren. He that speaketh evil of his brother, ¹³and ¹⁴judgeth his brother, speaketh evil of the law, and judgeth the law: but if thou judge the law, thou art not a doer of the law, but a judge.

12 ¹³There is one lawgiver¹⁴, ¹⁵who ¹⁶is able to save and to destroy: ¹⁷who ¹⁸art thou that judgest ¹⁹another?

13 ¹⁴Go to now, ye that say, To day ¹⁵we will go to morrow we will go into ¹⁶such a city, and ¹⁷continue there a year¹⁸, and ¹⁹buy and sell²⁰, and get gain:

14 ¹⁵Whereas ye know not ¹⁶what shall be on the morrow¹⁷. For what is your life? ¹⁸It is even a vapour¹⁹, that appeareth for a little time, ²⁰and then vanisheth away²¹.

15 ¹⁶For ¹⁷that ye ought to say¹⁸, ¹⁹If the Lord will, we shall live, and do this, or that.

16 But now ye ¹⁷rejoice¹⁸ in your boastings: all such ¹⁹rejoicing²⁰ is evil.

17 ¹⁸Therefore ¹⁹to him ²⁰that knoweth to do good, and doeth it not, to him it is sin.

18 ¹⁹Therefore ²⁰to him ²¹that knoweth to do good, and doeth it not, to him it is sin.

19 ²⁰Therefore ²¹to him ²²that knoweth to do good, and doeth it not, to him it is sin.

20 ²¹Therefore ²²to him ²³that knoweth to do good, and doeth it not, to him it is sin.

21 ²²Therefore ²³to him ²⁴that knoweth to do good, and doeth it not, to him it is sin.

22 ²³Therefore ²⁴to him ²⁵that knoweth to do good, and doeth it not, to him it is sin.

23 ²⁴Therefore ²⁵to him ²⁶that knoweth to do good, and doeth it not, to him it is sin.

24 ²⁵Therefore ²⁶to him ²⁷that knoweth to do good, and doeth it not, to him it is sin.

25 ²⁶Therefore ²⁷to him ²⁸that knoweth to do good, and doeth it not, to him it is sin.

26 ²⁷Therefore ²⁸to him ²⁹that knoweth to do good, and doeth it not, to him it is sin.

27 ²⁸Therefore ²⁹to him ³⁰that knoweth to do good, and doeth it not, to him it is sin.

28 ²⁹Therefore ³⁰to him ³¹that knoweth to do good, and doeth it not, to him it is sin.

29 ³⁰Therefore ³¹to him ³²that knoweth to do good, and doeth it not, to him it is sin.

30 ³¹Therefore ³²to him ³³that knoweth to do good, and doeth it not, to him it is sin.

31 ³²Therefore ³³to him ³⁴that knoweth to do good, and doeth it not, to him it is sin.

32 ³³Therefore ³⁴to him ³⁵that knoweth to do good, and doeth it not, to him it is sin.

33 ³⁴Therefore ³⁵to him ³⁶that knoweth to do good, and doeth it not, to him it is sin.

34 ³⁵Therefore ³⁶to him ³⁷that knoweth to do good, and doeth it not, to him it is sin.

35 ³⁶Therefore ³⁷to him ³⁸that knoweth to do good, and doeth it not, to him it is sin.

36 ³⁷Therefore ³⁸to him ³⁹that knoweth to do good, and doeth it not, to him it is sin.

37 ³⁸Therefore ³⁹to him ⁴⁰that knoweth to do good, and doeth it not, to him it is sin.

38 ³⁹Therefore ⁴⁰to him ⁴¹that knoweth to do good, and doeth it not, to him it is sin.

39 ⁴⁰Therefore ⁴¹to him ⁴²that knoweth to do good, and doeth it not, to him it is sin.

40 ⁴¹Therefore ⁴²to him ⁴³that knoweth to do good, and doeth it not, to him it is sin.

•THE FIRST EPISTLE GENERAL OF PETER.

CHAPTER 1.

1 Ye blessed God for his manifold spiritual graces: 10 showing that the salvation in Christ is, no more, but a thing prophesied of old: 13 and exhorteth them accordingly to a godly conversation, inasmuch as they are now born again by the word of God.

that perlabeth, though 'it be tried with fire, might be found unto praise and y honour and glory at the appearing of Jesus Christ:

8 "Whom having not seen, ye love; 'in whom, though now ye see him not, yet believing, ye rejoice with joy unspeakable and full of glory:

9 Receiving 'the end of your faith, 'even the salvation of your souls?

10 "Of which salvation the prophets have enquired and searched diligently, who prophesied of the grace that should come unto you:

11 Searching what, or what manner of time 'the Spirit of Christ which was in them did signify, when it testified beforehand 'the sufferings of Christ, and the glory that should follow.

12 "Unto whom it was revealed, that 'not unto themselves, but unto us ye did minister the things, which are now reported unto you by them that 'have 'preached the gospel unto you 'with 'the Holy Ghost sent down from heaven; 'which things the angels desire to look into.

13 Wherefore 'gird up the loins of your mind, 'be sober, and hope 'to the end 'for the grace that is 'to be brought unto you 'at the revelation 'of Jesus Christ;

14 As obedient children, 'not fashioning yourselves according to the former lusts 'in your ignorance:

15 "But as he which hath called you is holy, so be ye holy in all manner of conversation ';

16 Because it is written, 3 "Be ye holy; for I am holy.

17 And if ye 'call on the Father '3, 'who without respect of persons judgeth according to every man's work, 'pass the time of your 'sojourning here in fear:

18 Forasmuch as ye know 'that ye were not redeemed with corruptible things, as silver and gold, from your vain 'conversation '4, 'redeemed by tradition from your fathers;

19 But 'with the precious blood of Christ, 'as of a lamb without blemish and without spot:

20 "Who verily was foreordained before the foundation of the world, but was manifest 'in these last times 3 for you.

21 Who by him 3 do believe in God 3, 'that raised him up from the dead, and 'gave him glory: '3 that your faith and hope might be '3 in God.

22 Seeing ye 'have purified your souls in obeying the truth 3 through the Spirit 3 unto unfeigned 'love of the brethren, see that ye love one another with a 'pure y heart fervently:

CHAPTER 2.

1 He doberth them from the branch of charity: 4 showing that Christ is the foundation where-upon they are built. 11 He bewarcth them also to abstain from fleshly lusts, 13 to be obedient to magistrates, 15 and teacheth earnestly how to obey their masters, 20 patiently suffering for well doing, after the example of Christ.

WHEREFORE 'laying aside all malice, and all envy, and all evil, and hypocrites, and 2 "As newborn babes, desire 'the sincere 'milk of the word '3, that ye may grow 3 thereby 3:

3 If so be ye have 'tasted that the Lord is gracious.

4 To whom coming, as unto a living stone, 'disallowed indeed of men, but chosen of God, and precious,

5 "Ye also, as lively stones, 'are built up '3 a spiritual house, 3 'an 3 holy priesthood, to offer up 'spiritual sacrifices, 'acceptable to God by Jesus Christ.

6 "Wherefore also it is contained in the scripture 3, 'Behold, I lay in Zion a chief corner stone, elect, precious: and he that believeth on him shall not be confounded.

7 Unto you therefore which believe '3 as to 'precious '3; but unto them which 3 be disobedient, 3—the stone which the builders disallowed, the same is made the head of the corner,

8 "And a stone of stumbling, and a rock of offence, 'even to them which stumble '4 at the word, being disobedient: 'whereunto '4 also they were appointed.

9 But ye are 'a chosen generation, 'a royal priesthood, 'an holy nation, '3 'a peculiar people '3; that ye should shew forth the 'praises of him who hath called you out of 'darkness into his marvelous light:

10 "Which in time past were not a people, but are now the people of God: which had not obtained mercy, but now have obtained mercy.

11 Dearly beloved, I beseech you 'as strangers and 'pilgrims '3, 'abstain from fleshly lusts, 'which war against the soul;

12 Having your conversation honest among the Gentiles: that, ⁷whereas they speak against you as evildoers, they may by your good works, which they shall behold, glorify God ⁸in the day of visitation.

13 Submit yourselves to every ordinance of man for the Lord's sake: whether it be to the king, as supreme;

14 Or unto governors, as unto them that are sent by him for the punishment of evildoers, and for the praise of them that do well.

15 For so is the will of God, that with well doing ye may put to silence the ignorance of foolish men:

16 As free, and not using your liberty for a cloak of maliciousness, but as the servants of God.

17 Honour all men. Love the brotherhood. Fear God. Honour the king.

18 Servants, be subject to your masters with all fear; not only to the good and gentle, but also to the froward.

19 For this is the thankworthy, if a man for conscience toward God endure grief, suffering wrongfully.

20 For what glory is it, if, when ye be buffeted for your faults, ye shall take it patiently? but if, when ye do well, and suffer for it, ye take it patiently, this is acceptable with God.

21 For even hereunto were ye called: because Christ also suffered for us, leaving us an example, that ye should follow his steps:

22 Who did no sin, neither was guile found in his mouth:

23 Who, when he was reviled, reviled not again; when he suffered, he threatened not; but committed himself to him that judgeth righteously:

24 Who his own self bare our sins in his own body on the tree, that we, being dead to sins, should live unto righteousness: by whose stripes ye were healed.

25 For ye were as sheep going astray; but are now returned unto the Shepherd and Bishop of your souls.

heart, in that which is not corruptible, even the ornament of a meek and quiet spirit, which is in the sight of God of great price.

5 For after this manner in the old time the holy women also, who trusted in God, adorned themselves, being in subjection unto their own husbands:

6 Even as Sara obeyed Abraham, calling him lord: whose daughters ye are, as long as ye do well, and are not afraid with any amazement.

7 Likewise, ye husbands, dwell with them according to knowledge, giving honour unto the wife, as unto the weaker vessel, and as being his heirs together of the grace of life; that your prayers be not hindered.

8 Finally, be ye all of one mind, having compassion one of another, love as brethren, be pitiful, be courteous:

9 Not rendering evil for evil, or railing for railing: but contrariwise blessing; knowing that ye are thereunto called, that ye should inherit a blessing.

10 For he that will love life, and see good days, let him refrain his tongue from evil, and his lips that they speak no guile:

11 Let him eschew evil, and do good; let him seek peace, and ensue it.

12 For the eyes of the Lord are over the righteous, and his ears are open unto their prayers: but the face of the Lord is against them that do evil.

13 And who is he that will harm you, if ye be followers of that which is good?

14 But and if ye suffer for righteousness' sake, happy are ye: and ye shall not be afraid of their terror, neither be troubled;

15 But sanctify the Lord God in your hearts: and be ready always to give an answer to every man that asketh you a reason of the hope that is in you, with meekness and fear:

16 Having a good conscience; that, whereas ye speak evil of you, as of evildoers, they may be ashamed that falsely accuse your good conversation in Christ.

17 For it is better, if the will of God be so, that ye suffer for well doing, than for evil doing.

18 For Christ also hath once suffered for sins, the just for the unjust, that he might bring us to God, being put to death in the flesh, but quickened by the Spirit:

19 By which also he went and preached unto the spirits in prison;

20 Which sometime were disobedient,

CHAPTER 4.

1 He exhorted them to cease from sin by the example of Christ, and the consideration of the general end that now approacheth: 12 and comforteth them against persecution.

FORASMUCH then as Christ hath suffered β for us β in the flesh, arm yourselves likewise with the same mind: for he that hath suffered in the flesh hath ceased from sin;
 2 That he no longer should live the rest of his time in the flesh to the lusts of men, but to the will of God.
 3 For the time past β of our life β may suffice γ us to have wrought the will of the Gentiles, when we walked in lasciviousness, lusts, excess of wine, revellings, banquetings, and abominable idolatries:
 4 Wherein they think it strange that ye run not with them to the same excess of riot, speaking evil of you:
 5 Who shall give account to him that is ready to judge the quick and the dead.
 6 For for this cause was the gospel preached also to them that are dead, that they might be judged according to men in the flesh, but live according to God in the spirit.
 7 But the end of all things is at hand: be ye therefore sober, and watch unto prayer.
 8 And above all things have fervent charity among yourselves: for charity shall cover the multitude of sins.
 9 Use hospitality one to another without grudging:
 10 As every man hath received the gift, even so minister the same one to another, as good stewards of the manifold grace of God.
 11 If any man speak, let him speak as of the 7 oracles of God; or if any man know, let him know as the 7 oracles of God; or if any man prophesy, let him prophesy as the 7 oracles of God.

Christ, so as to whom we praise and dominion for ever and ever. Amen.
 12 Beloved, think it not strange concerning the fiery trial which is to try you, as though some strange thing happened unto you:
 13 But rejoice, inasmuch as ye are partakers of Christ's sufferings; that, when his glory shall be revealed, ye may be glad also with exceeding joy.
 14 If ye be reproached for the name of Christ, happy are ye; for the spirit of glory and of God β resteth upon you: γ for their part he is evil spoken of, but on your part he is glorified.
 15 But let none of you suffer as a murderer, or as a thief, or as an evildoer, or as a busybody in other men's matters.
 16 Yet if any man suffer as a Christian, let him not be ashamed; but let him glorify God β on this behalf.
 17 For the time is come that judgment must begin at the house of God: and if it first begin at β us β , what shall the end be of them that obey not the gospel of God?
 18 And if the righteous scarcely be saved, where shall the ungodly and the sinner appear?
 19 Wherefore let them that suffer according to the will of God commit the keeping of their souls to him in well doing, β as β unto a faithful Creator.

CHAPTER 5.

1 He exhorted the elders to feed their flock, the younger to obey, and all to be sober, watchful, and consistent in the faith: 9 to read the cruel adversary the devil.

THE elders β which are among you, I exhort, who am also an elder, and a witness of the sufferings of Christ, and also a partaker of the glory that shall be revealed:
 2 Feed the flock of God which is among you, taking the oversight thereof, not by constraint, but willingly; not for filthy lucre, but of a ready mind;
 3 Neither as if being lords over God's heritage, but being examples to the flock.
 4 And when the chief Shepherd shall appear, ye shall receive a crown of glory that fadeth not away.
 5 Likewise, ye younger, submit yourselves unto the elder. Yea, all of you β be subject one to another, and be clothed with humility; for God resisteth the proud, and giveth grace to the humble.
 6 Humble yourselves therefore under the mighty power of God.

prophecy¹⁸; whereunto ye do well that ye take heed, as unto a¹⁹ light¹⁹ that shineth in a dark place, until the day dawn, and the day star arise in your hearts:

20 Knowing this first, that 'no prophecy of the scripture²⁰ is of any private interpretation²⁰.

21 For²¹ the prophecy came not in old time²¹ by the will of man: but holy men of God spake²¹ as they were moved by the Holy Ghost.

CHAPTER 2.

1 He foretelleth them of false teachers, shewing the impiety and punishment both of them and their followers: 7 from which the godly shall be delivered, as Lot was out of Sodom: 10 and more fully describeth the manners of those profane and blasphemous seducers, whereby they may be the better known, and avoided.

BUT there were false prophets also among the people, even as there shall be false teachers among you, who privily shall bring in¹ damnable heresies¹, even denying the Lord² that bought them, and bring upon themselves swift destruction.

2 And many shall follow their³ pernicious ways³; by reason of whom the way of truth shall be evil spoken of.

3 And through⁴ covetousness shall they with feigned words⁴ make merchandise of you: whose judgment now of a long time lieth not, and their damnation⁵ slumbereth not.

4 For if God spared not the angels that sinned⁶, but cast them down to hell⁶, and delivered them into chains⁶ of darkness, to be reserved unto judgment;

5 And spared not the old world, but saved Noah the eighth person⁷, a preacher of righteousness, bringing in the flood upon the world of the ungodly;

6 And turning the cities of Sodom and Gomorrah into ashes condemned them with an overthrow⁸, making them an example unto those that after should live ungodly;

7 And delivered just Lot, vexed with the filthy conversation of the wicked⁹:

8 (For that righteous man dwelling among them, in seeing and hearing, vexed his righteous soul from day to day with their unlawful deeds);

9 The Lord knoweth how to deliver the godly out of temptations, and to reserve the unjust unto the day of judgment¹⁰ to be punished¹⁰:

10 But chiefly them that walk after the flesh in the lust of uncleanness¹¹, and despise¹² government¹²; Presumptuous are they, selfwilled, they are not afraid to speak evil of dignities¹².

11 Whereas angels, which are greater in power and might, bring not railing accusation¹⁴ against them before the Lord¹⁵.

12 But these, as natural brute beasts, made¹⁶ to be taken and destroyed, speak evil of the things that they understand not; and shall utterly perish¹⁷ in their own corruption;

13 And shall receive¹⁸ the reward of unrighteousness, as they that count it pleasure¹⁹ to riot¹⁹ in the day time¹⁹.

14 Spots they are and blemishes, sporting themselves with their own deceivings while they feast with you;

15 Having eyes full of adultery²⁰, and that cannot²¹ cease²¹ from²¹ sin; beguiling unstable souls: /an heart they have exercised²² with covetous practices²²; 16 cursed children²³:

15 Which have forsaken the right way, and are gone astray, following the way of Balaam the son of Beor²⁴, who loved²⁵ the wages of unrighteousness;

16 But was rebuked for his iniquity: the dumb ass speaking with man's voice forbade the madness of the prophet.

17 These are wells without water, clouds²⁶ that are carried with a tempest; to whom the mist²⁷ of darkness is reserved²⁸ for ever.

18 For whom they speak great swelling words of vanity, they allure²⁹ through the lusts of the flesh, through wantonness, those that are just, who have escaped³⁰ from them who live in error.

19 While they promise them liberty, they themselves are the servants³¹ of corruption: for of whom a man is overcome, of the same is he brought in bondage.

20 For after they have escaped the pollutions of the world³² through the knowledge of the Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, they are again entangled therein, and overcome, the latter end is worse with them than the beginning.

21 For it had been better for them not to have known the way of righteousness, than, after they have known it, to turn from the holy commandment delivered unto them.

22 But it is happened unto them according to the true proverb, 'The dog is turned to his own vomit again; and the sow that was washed to her wallowing in the mire.'

CHAPTER 4.

1 He earnestly them not to believe all teachers, but of the Spirit, but to try them by the rules of the catholic faith: 7 and by many reasons exhorteth to brotherly love.

BELOVED, "believe not every spirit, but "try the spirits whether they are of God: because "many false prophets are gone out into the world.

2 Hereby "I know ye "the Spirit of God: "Every spirit that confesseth that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh is of God:

3 And "every spirit that β confesseth not β y that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh is not of God: and this is that spirit of antichrist, whereof ye have heard that it should come; and / even now already is it in the world.

4 Ye are of God, little children, and have overcome them: because greater is he that is in you, than "he that is in the world.

5 They are of the world: therefore speak they of the world, and "the world heareth them.

6 We are of God: "he that knoweth God heareth us; he that is not of God heareth not us. Hereby know we "the spirit of truth, and the spirit of error.

7 Beloved, let us love one another: for love is of God; and every one that loveth is born of God, and knoweth God.

8 He that loveth not "knoweth not God; for God is love.

9 In this was manifested the love of God toward us, because that God "sent" his only begotten Son into the world, that he might live through him.

10 Herein is love, "not that we loved God, but that he loved us, and sent his Son, "to be the propitiation for our sins.

11 Beloved, "if God so loved us, we ought also to love one another.

12 No man hath seen God at any time. If we love one another, God dwelleth in us, and "his love is perfected in us.

13 Hereby know we that we dwell in him, and he in us, because he hath given us of his Spirit.

14 And "we have seen and do testify that "the Father "sent" the Son to be the Saviour of the world.

1 He exhorteth a certain honourable matron, with her children, to persevere in Christian love and belief; 8 testifies that he will reward the faithful profession; 10 and to have nothing to do with those seducers that bring not the true doctrine of Christ Jesus.

THE elder unto the elect lady and her children, whom I love in the truth; and not I only, but also all they that have known the truth;

2 For the truth's sake, which dwelleth in us, and shall be with us for ever.

3 Grace be with you, mercy, and peace, from God the Father, and from the Lord Jesus Christ, the Son of the Father, in truth and love.

4 I rejoiced greatly that I found of thy children walking in truth, as we have received a commandment from the Father.

5 And now I beseech thee, lady, not as though I wrote thee a new commandment unto thee, but that which we had from the beginning, that we love one another.

6 And this is love, that we walk after his commandments. This is the commandment, That, as ye have heard from the beginning, ye should walk in it.

He commendeth Gaius for his piety, 5 and hospitality 7 to true preachers: 9 complaining of the unkind dealing of ambitious Diotrephes on the contrary side, 11 whose evil example is not to be followed: 12 and giveth special testimony to the good report of Demetrius.

THE elder unto the wellbeloved Gaius, whom I love in the truth.

2 Beloved, I wish above all things that thou mayest prosper and be in health, even as thy soul prospereth.

3 For I rejoiced greatly, when the brethren came and testified of the truth that is in thee, even as thou walkest in the truth.

4 I have no greater joy than to hear that my children walk in truth.

5 Beloved, thou doest faithfully whatsoever thou doest to the brethren, and to strangers;

6 Which have borne witness of thy charity before the church: whom if thou bring forward on their journey, thou shalt have a goodly sort; thou shalt do well.

7 Because that β for his name's sake they went forth, taking nothing of the Gentiles.

8 We therefore ought to receive such, that we might be fellowhelpers to the truth.

9 I wrote β unto the church; but Diotrephes, who loveth to have the preeminence among them, receiveth us not.

10 Wherefore, if I come, I will remember his deeds which he doeth, prating against us with malicious words; and not content therewith, neither doth he himself receive the brethren, and forbid them, and casteth them out of the church.

11 Beloved, follow not that which is evil, but that which is good. He that doeth good is of God; but he that doeth evil hath not seen God.

12 Demetrius hath good report of all men, and of the truth itself: yea, and we also bear record; and β ye know β that our record is true.

13 I had many things to write to you, but I will not with ink and pen write unto thee:

Amos DOMINE
CH. 85

He exhorteth them to be constant in the profession of the faith: & False teachers are crept in to seduce them: for whose damnable doctrine and manners horrible punishment is prepared: 20 whereon the godly, by the assistance of the Holy Spirit, and prayers to God, may persevere, and grow in grace, and keep themselves, and recover others out of the snare of these deceivers.

JUDE, the servant of Jesus Christ, and brother of James, to them that β are sanctified β ¹ by ¹ God the Father, and ¹ preserved in Jesus Christ, and ^c called :
² Mercy unto you, and ^a peace, and love, be multiplied.

3 Beloved, when I gave all diligence to write unto you ^{of} ~~the~~ ^{the} common salvation, ^{it} was needful for me ^{to} write unto you, and exhort you that ye should earnestly contend for the faith which was ^{once} delivered unto the saints.

4 : For there are certain men crept in unawares, 'who were before of old 'ordained ' to this condemnation, ungodly men, 'turning ' the grace of our God into lasciviousness, and ' denying the only ⁸ Lord God ⁸, and our Lord Jesus Christ.

5 ⁵ I will therefore put you in remembrance, though ye once knew ^βthis^β, how that y^m the Lord y, having saved the people out of the land of Egypt, ⁶ afterward ⁶ destroyed them that believed not.

6 And the angels which kept not 7 their first estate⁷, but left their own habitation, he hath reserved in everlasting chains under darkness unto the indgment of the great day.

7^s Even as ^s Sodom and Gomorrha, and the cities about them in like manner, giving themselves over to fornication, and going after ⁹ strange flesh⁹, are set forth for an example, suffering the vengeance of eternal fire.

8 ' Likewise ¹⁰ also ¹⁰ ¹¹ these ^{Altho} dreamers ¹¹ defile the flesh, despise ¹² disminion ¹², and ' speak evil of ¹³ dignities ¹³.
9 Yet * Michael the archangel, when contending with the devil he disputed about the body of Moses, * durst not 10 "But these speak evil of those things which they know not: but what they know naturally, as brute beasts, in those

11 Woe unto them! for they ¹⁴ have gone ¹⁶ in the way ^a of Cain, and ¹⁵ ran greedily after the error of Balaam for reward ¹⁵, and perished ¹⁶ in the ¹⁶ gain-saying of Core ¹⁵.

LE 8¹ There are "spots" in your season of charity 8, ¹⁸ when they feast with you, feeding themselves without fear ¹⁸; / clouds they are without water, ¹⁷ carried about of winds; ¹⁷ trees whose fruit withereth ¹⁹, without fruit, twice dead, ¹⁸ plucked up by the roots:

13 'Raging waves of the sea, 'foaming out their own shame; wandering stars,
'to whom is reserved the blackness of darkness for ever.

14 And Enoch also, "the seventh from Adam, prophesied of these, saying, Behold, "the Lord ²⁹ cometh with ten thousands of his saints³⁰.

15 To execute judgment upon all, and to convince all that are ungodly ^{among} them ^{of} all their ungodly deeds which they have ungodly committed, and of all their ^{hard} speeches which ungodly sinners have spoken against him.

16 These are murmurers, complainers, walking after their own lusts; and ¹⁷their mouth speaketh great swelling words, ¹⁸having men's persons in admiration
¹⁹because of ²⁰their advantage.

17 *But, beloved, remember ye the words which were spoken before ²² of ²³ the apostles of our Lord Jesus Christ; 18 How that they told you 'there should be mockers in the last time, who should walk after their own ungodly lusts.

19 These be they 'who separate β themselves β , "sensual, having not the Spirit.
20 But ye, beloved, "building up yourselves on your most holy faith, "praying in the Holy Ghost.

21 Keep yourselves in the love of God, looking for the mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ unto eternal life.

22 ²³ And β of some have compassion β , γ making a difference γ ²³ :
 23 And others β - save with fear. ^a pulling them out of the fire; hating even the garment spotted by the flesh.

24 Now unto him that is able to keep

8 you from falling, and * to present you 8 faultless before the presence of his glory with exceeding joy.

25 / To the only β wise β God γ our Saviour, be glory and majesty, dominion and power, both now and every. Amen. β

ST. JOHN THE DIVINE.

4 John writeth his revelation to the seven churches of Asia, signified by the seven golden candlesticks. 7 The coming of Christ. 14 His glorious power and majesty.

2 'Who bare ¹record¹ of the word of God, and of the ¹testimony¹ of Jesus Christ, β and β of all things 'that he saw.

4 JOHN to the seven churches which are in Asia: Grace be unto you, and peace, from him ^awhich is, and ^awhich was, and which is to come; ^aand from the seven Spirits which are before his throne:

5 And from Jesus Christ, who is the faithful witness, and the first begotten of the dead, and the prince of the kings of the earth. Unto him that loved us, and washed us from our sins in his own blood.

6 ³ And hath ³ made ³ us ³ kings and priests ³ unto ⁴ God and his Father ⁴; ⁷ to him ⁵ be glory ⁵ and dominion for ever and ever. Amen.

7 Behold, he cometh with clouds; and every eye shall see him, and they also which pierced him: and all kindreds of the earth shall wail because of him. Even so. Amen.

CHAPTER 3.

2 The angel of the church of Sardis is reproved, 3 exhorted to repent, and threatened if he do not repent. 3 The angel of the church of Philadelphia 10 is approved for his diligence and patience. 15 The angel of Laodicea rebuked, for being neither hot nor cold, 19 and admonished to be more zealous. 20 Christ standeth at the door and knocketh.

AND unto the angel of the church in Sardis write; These things saith he, that hath the seven Spirits of God, and the seven stars; I know thy works, that thou hast a name that thou livest, and art dead.

3 Be watchful, and strengthen the things which remain, that are ready to die: for I have not found thy works perfect before God.

3 Remember therefore how thou hast received and heard, and hold fast, and repent. If therefore thou shalt not watch, I will come on thee as a thief, and thou shalt not know what hour I will come upon thee.

4 Thou hast a few names even in Sardis which have not defiled their garments; and they shall walk with me in white: for they are worthy.

5 He that overcometh, the same shall be clothed in white raiment; and I will not blot out his name out of the book of life, but I will confess his name before my Father, and before his angels.

6 He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches.

7 And to the angel of the church in Philadelphia write; These things saith he that is holy, he that is true, he that hath the key of David, he that openeth, and no man shutteth; and he that shutteth, and no man openeth; I know thy works: behold, I have set before thee an open door, and no man can shut it: for thou hast a little strength, and hast kept my word, and hast not denied my name.

9 Behold, I will make of them of the synagogue of Satan, which say they are Jews, and are not, but do lie; behold, I will make them to come and worship before thy feet, and to know that I have loved thee.

10 Because thou hast kept the word of my patience, I also will keep thee from the hour of temptation, which shall come upon all the world, to try them that dwell upon the earth.

11 Behold, I come quickly: hold that fast which thou hast, that no man take thy crown.

12 Him that overcometh will I make a pillar in the temple of my God, and he shall go no more out: and I will write upon him the name of my God, and the name of the city of my God, which is new Jerusalem, which cometh down out of heaven from my God: and I will write upon him my new name.

13 He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches.

14 And unto the angel of the church of the Laodiceans write; These things saith the Amen, the faithful and true witness, the beginning of the creation of God;

15 I know thy works, that thou art neither cold nor hot: I would thou wert cold or hot.

16 So then because thou art lukewarm, and neither cold nor hot, I will spue thee out of my mouth.

17 Because thou sayest, I am rich, and increased with goods, and have need of nothing; and knowest not that thou art wretched, and miserable, and poor, and blind, and naked:

18 I counsel thee to buy of me gold tried in the fire, that thou mayest be rich; and white raiment, that thou mayest be clothed, and that the shame of thy nakedness do not appear; and anoint thine eyes with eyesalve, that thou mayest see.

19 As many as I love, I rebuke and chasten: be zealous therefore, and repent.

20 Behold, I stand at the door, and knock: if any man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him, and he with me.

21 To him that overcometh I will grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I also overcame, and am set down with my Father in his throne.

22 He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches.

CHAPTER 4.

2 John seeth the throne of God in heaven. 4 The four and twenty elders. 6 The four beasts full of eyes before and behind. 10 The elders lay down their crowns, and worship him that sat on the throne.

AFTER this I looked, and behold, a door was opened in heaven: and the first voice which I heard was as it were of a trumpet talking with me; which said, Come up hither, and I will show thee things which must be hereafter.

2 And immediately I was in the spirit: and behold, a throne was set in heaven, and one sat on the throne.

3 And he that sat was as β was β to look upon like a jasper and a sardine stone: I and there was a rainbow round about the throne, in sight like unto an emerald.

4 And round about the throne were four and twenty seats; and upon the seats I saw four and twenty elders sitting, clothed in white raiment; and β they had β on their heads crowns of gold.

5 And out of the throne proceeded lightnings and thunderings and voices: and there were seven lamps of fire burning before the throne, which are the seven Spirits of God.

CHAPTER 5.

1 The book sealed with seven seals: 9 which only the Lamb that was slain is worthy to open. 12 Therefore the elders praise him, 9 and confess that he redeemed them with his blood.

AND I saw in the right hand of him that sat on the throne ^a a book written within and on the backside, ^a sealed with seven seals.

2 And I saw a strong angel proclaiming with a loud voice, Who is worthy to open the book, and to loose the seals thereof? 3 And no man ^a in heaven, nor in earth, neither under the earth, was able to open the book, neither to look thereon.

4 And I wept much, because no man was found worthy to open β and to read β the book, neither to look thereon.

5 And one of the elders saith unto me, Weep not: behold, ^a the Lion of the tribe of Juda, ^a the Root of David, ^a hath prevailed to open ^a the book, ^a and β to loose β the seven seals thereof.

6 And I beheld, and, lo, in the midst of the throne and of the four ^a beasts ^a, and γ in the midst of the elders, ^a stood ^a a Lamb ^a as it had been slain, having seven horns and ^a seven eyes, which are ^a the seven Spirits of God sent forth into all the earth.

7 And when he ^a had taken ^a the book, ^a the four ^a beasts ^a and four ^a and twenty elders fall down before the Lamb, having every one of them ^a harps, and golden vials full of ^a odours ^a, 'which are the prayers of saints.
 9 And ^a they ^a sung ^a a new song, saying, 'Thou art worthy to take the book, and to open the seals thereof: 'for thou wast slain, and ^a hast redeemed ^a β us β to God by thy blood, 'out of every ^a kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation;
 10 'And ^a hast made ^a β us β unto our God ^a kings ^a and priests: and ^a we shall reign ^a on the earth.
 11 And I beheld, and I heard ^a the voice ^a of many angels ^a round about the throne and the ^a beasts ^a and the elders: and the number of them was ^a ten thousand times ten thousand ^a, and thousands of thousands;
 12 Saying with a loud voice, 'Worthy is the Lamb that was slain to receive ^a power, and riches, and wisdom, and strength, and honour, and glory, and blessing ^a;
 13 And ^a every creature which is in heaven, and on the earth, and under the earth, and such as are in the sea, and all that are in them, heard I saying, 'Blessing, and honour, and glory, and power, be ^a unto him ^a that sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb for ever and ever.
 14 'And the four ^a beasts ^a said, Amen. And the four and twenty elders fell down and worshipped β him ^a that liveth for ever and ever β .

CHAPTER 6.

1 The opening of the seals in order, and what followed thereupon, containing a prophecy to the end of the world.

AND I saw when the Lamb opened ^a one of ^a the seals, ^a and I heard, as it were the noise of thunder, ^a one of the four ^a beasts ^a saying, Come γ and see γ .

2 And I saw, and behold ^a a white horse: and he that sat on him had a bow; and a crown was given unto him: and he went forth conquering, and to conquer.

3 And when he ^a had opened ^a the second seal, ^a I heard the second ^a beast ^a say, Come γ and see γ .

4 And there went out another horse that was red: and power was given to him that sat thereon to take peace from the earth, and that they should kill one another: and there was given unto him a great sword.

5 And when he ^a had opened ^a the third seal, ^a I heard the third ^a beast ^a say, Come γ and see γ . And I beheld, and lo ^a a black horse; and he that sat on him had a pair of balances in his hand.

6 And when he ^a had opened ^a the fourth seal, ^a I heard the fourth ^a beast ^a say, Come γ and see γ . And I beheld, and lo ^a a pale horse; and he that sat on him had death, and hell, as his portion.

7 And when he ^a had opened ^a the fifth seal, ^a I saw under the altar the souls of them that were slain for the word of God, and for the testimony which they bore unto Jesus:

7 Of the tribe of Simeon were sealed twelve thousand. Of the tribe of Levi were sealed twelve thousand. Of the tribe of Issachar were sealed twelve thousand.

8 Of the tribe of Zabulon were sealed twelve thousand. Of the tribe of Joseph were sealed twelve thousand. Of the tribe of Benjamin were sealed twelve thousand.

9 After this I beheld, and, lo, a great multitude, which no man could number, of all nations, and kindreds, and people, and tongues, stood before the throne, and before the Lamb, β clothed with white robes, and palms in their hands;

10 And cried β with a loud voice, saying, β Salvation to our God β which sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb.

11 And all the angels stood round about the throne, and about the elders and the four β beasts², and fell before the throne on their faces, and worshipped God.

12 Saying, Amen: β Blessing, and glory, and wisdom, and thanksgiving, and honour, and power, and might, be unto our God for ever and ever. β Amen β .

13 And one of the elders answered, saying unto me, β What³ are these which are arrayed in β white robes⁴? and whence came they?

14 And I said unto him, β Sir β , thou knowest. And he said to me, β These are they which β came⁵ out of β great tribulation⁶, and β have β washed⁷ their robes, and made them white in the blood of the Lamb.

15 Therefore are they before the throne of God, and serve him day and night in his temple: and he that sitteth on the throne shall β dwell⁸ β among them¹⁰.

CHAPTER 8.

1 At the opening of the seventh seal, 2 seven angels had seven trumpets given them. 3 Four of them opened their trumpets, and great plagues followed. 4 Another angel pushed incense to the prayers of the saints on the golden altar.

AND when he had opened the seventh seal, there was silence in heaven about the space of half an hour.

2 And I saw the seven angels which stood before God; and to them were given seven trumpets.

3 And another angel came and stood at the altar, having a golden censer; and there was given unto him much incense, that he should offer it with the prayers of all saints upon the golden altar which was before the throne.

4 And the smoke of the incense, which came with the prayers of the saints, ascended up before God out of the angel's hand.

5 And the angel took the censer, and filled it with fire of the altar, and cast it into the earth: and there were voices, and thunderings, and lightnings, and an earthquake.

6 And the seven angels which had the seven trumpets prepared themselves to sound.

7 The first angel sounded, and there followed hail and fire mingled with blood, and they were cast upon the earth: and the third part of trees was burnt up, and all green grass was burnt up.

8 And the second angel sounded, and as it were a great mountain burning with fire was cast into the sea: and the third part of the sea became blood;

9 And the third part of the creatures which were in the sea, and had life, died; and the third part of the ships were destroyed.

10 And the third angel sounded, and there fell a great star from heaven, burning as it were a lamp, and it fell upon the third part of the rivers, and upon the fountains of waters;

11 And the name of the star is called Wormwood: and the third part of the waters became wormwood; and many men died of the waters, because they were made bitter.

12 And the fourth angel sounded, and the third part of the sun was smitten, and the third part of the moon, and the third part of the stars; so as the third part of them was darkened, and the 3 angel ³ flying through the midst of heaven ⁴, saying with a loud voice, ⁵Woe, woe, woe, to the inhabitants of the earth by reason of the other voices of the trumpet of the three angels, which are yet to sound!

CHAPTER 9.

1 At the sounding of the fifth angel, a star fell from heaven, to whom is given the key of the bottomless pit. 2 He opened the pit, and there came forth locusts like scorpions. 3 The first voice said. 4 The sixth trumpet sounded. 5 Four angels are let loose, that were bound.

AND the fifth angel sounded, and I saw a star fall from heaven, unto the earth: and to him was given the key of the bottomless pit.

2 And he opened the bottomless pit: and there arose a smoke out of the pit, as the smoke of a great furnace; and the sun and the air were darkened by reason of the smoke of the pit.

3 And there came out of the smoke locusts upon the earth: and unto them was given power, as the scorpions of the earth have power.

4 And it was commanded them that they should not hurt the grass of the earth, neither any green thing, neither any tree; but only those men which have not the seal of God in their foreheads.

5 And to them it was given that they should not kill them, but that they should be tormented five months: and their torment was as the torment of a scorpion, when he striketh a man.

6 And in those days shall men seek death, and shall not find it; and shall desire to die, and death shall flee from them.

7 And the shapes of the locusts were like unto horses prepared unto battle: and on their heads were as it were crowns like gold, and their faces were as the faces of men.

8 And they had hair as the hair of women, and their teeth were as the teeth of lions.

9 And they had breastplates, as it were breastplates of iron; and the sound of their wings was as the sound of chariots of many horses running to battle.

10 And they had tails like unto scorpions, and there were stings in their tails: and their power was to hurt men five months.

11 And they had a king over them, which is the angel of the bottomless pit, whose name in the Hebrew tongue is Abaddon, but in the Greek tongue hath his name Apollyon.

12 One was seen, and, behold, there came two woes more; and, hereafter.

13 And the sixth angel sounded, and I heard a voice from the four horns of the golden altar which is before God, 14 Saying to the sixth angel which had Heaven spake unto me again, and said, Go and take the little book which is open in the hand of the angel which standeth upon the sea and upon the earth.

9 And I went unto the angel, and said unto him, Give me the little book. And he said unto me, Take it, and eat it up; and it shall make thy belly bitter, but it shall be in thy mouth sweet as honey.

10 And I took the little book out of the angel's hand, and ate it up; and it was in my mouth sweet as honey; and as soon as I had eaten it, my belly was bitter.

11 And So he said unto me, Thou must prophesy again before many peoples, and nations, and tongues, and kings.

CHAPTER 11.

3 The two witnesses prophesy. 6 They have power to shut heaven, that it rain not. 7 The beast shall fight against them, and kill them. 8 They lie unburied, 11 and after three days and a half rise again. 14 The second voice is past. 15 The seventh trumpet soundeth.

AND there was given me a reed like unto a rod; and the angel stood, saying, Rise, and measure the temple of God, and the altar, and them that worship therein.

2 But the court which is without the temple I leave out, and measure it not; for it is given unto the Gentiles; and the holy city shall they tread under foot forty and two months.

3 And I will give power unto my two witnesses, and they shall prophesy a thousand two hundred and threescore days, clothed in sackcloth.

4 These are the two olive trees, and the two candlesticks standing before the God of the earth.

5 And if any man will hurt them, fire proceedeth out of their mouth, and devoureth their enemies; and if any man will hurt them, he must in this manner be killed.

6 These have power to shut heaven, that it rain not in the days of their prophecy; and have power over waters to turn them to blood, and to smite the earth with all plagues, as often as they will.

7 And when they shall have finished their testimony, the beast that ascendeth out of the bottomless pit shall make war against them, and shall overcome them, and kill them.

8 And their dead bodies shall lie in the street of the great city, which spiritually is called Sodom and Egypt, where also So our Lord was crucified.

CHAPTER 12.

1 A woman clothed with the sun transitteth. 4 The great red dragon standeth before her, ready to devour her child: 6 when she was delivered the γ flesh into the wilderness. 7 Michael and his angels fight with the dragon, and prevail. 13 The dragon being cast down into the earth, persecuteth the woman.

AND there appeared a great γ woman γ der γ in heaven: a woman clothed with the sun, and the moon under her feet, and upon her head a crown of twelve stars:

2 And she being with child cried, γ travailing in birth, and pained to be delivered.

3 And there appeared another γ woman γ in heaven; and behold γ a great red dragon, γ having seven heads and ten horns, γ and seven γ crowns γ upon his heads.

4 And γ his tail drew the third part γ of the stars of heaven, γ and did cast γ them to the earth: and the dragon stood γ before the woman which was ready to be delivered, γ for to devour her child as soon as it was born.

5 And she brought forth a man child, γ who γ was to γ rule γ all nations with a rod of iron: and her child was caught up unto God, and to his throne.

6 And γ the woman fled into the wilderness, where she hath a place prepared of God, that they should feed her there γ a thousand two hundred and threescore days.

7 And there was war in heaven: γ Michael and his angels fought γ against the dragon; and the dragon fought and his angels.

8 And prevailed not; β neither was their place found β any more in heaven.

9 And γ the great dragon was cast out, γ that γ was γ old γ serpent, called the Devil, and Satan, γ which deceiveth the whole γ world γ : he was γ cast out γ into the earth, and his angels were γ cast out γ with him.

10 And I heard a loud voice saying in heaven, γ Now γ is come salvation, and strength, and the kingdom of our God, and the power of his Christ: for the accuser of our brethren is cast down, γ which γ accused γ them before our God day and night.

11 And γ they overcame him γ by γ the blood of the Lamb, and γ by γ the word of their testimony; γ and they loved not their lives unto the death.

12 Therefore γ rejoice, γ ye heavens, and ye that dwell in them. γ Woe to β the inhabitants of the earth and of the sea β : for the devil is come down unto you, having great wrath, γ because he knoweth that he hath but a short time.

13 And when the dragon γ saw that he was cast unto the earth, he persecuted γ the woman which brought forth the man child.

14 γ And to the woman were given γ two γ wings of γ a great eagle γ , γ that she might fly γ into the wilderness, into her place, where she is nourished γ for a time, and times, and half a time, γ from γ the face of the serpent.

15 And the serpent γ cast out of his mouth water as a γ flood γ after the woman, that he might cause her to be carried away of the γ flood γ .

16 And the earth helped the woman, and the earth opened her mouth, and swallowed up the γ flood γ which the dragon cast out of his mouth.

CHAPTER 13.

1 A beast riseth out of the sea with seven heads and ten horns, to whom the dragon giveth his power.
11 Another beast cometh up out of the earth: it causeth an image to be made of the former beast, and that men should worship it, and receive his mark.

AND I stood upon the sand of the sea, and saw a beast rise up out of the sea, having seven heads and ten horns, and upon his horns ten crowns, and upon his heads the name y of blasphemy.

2 And the beast which I saw was like unto a leopard, and his feet were as the feet of a bear, and his mouth as the mouth of a lion: and the dragon gave him his power, and his seat, and great authority.

3 And I saw one of his heads as it were wounded to death; and his deadly wound was healed: and all the world wondered after the beast.

4 And they worshipped the dragon which gave power unto the beast: and they worshipped the beast, saying, Who is like unto the beast? who is able to make war with him?

5 And there was given unto him a mouth speaking great things and blasphemies; and power was given unto him to continue forty and two months.

6 And he opened his mouth in blasphemy against God, to blaspheme his name, and his tabernacle, and them that dwell in heaven.

7 And it was given unto him to make war with the saints, and to overcome them: and power was given him over all kindreds, and tongues, and nations.

8 And all that dwell upon the earth shall worship him, whose names are not written in the book of life of the Lamb slain from the foundation of the world.

9 If any man have an ear, let him hear.

10 He that leadeth into captivity shall go into captivity: he that killeth with the sword must be killed with the sword. Here is the patience and the faith of the saints.

11 And I beheld another beast coming up out of the earth; and he had two horns like a lamb, and he spake as a dragon.

12 And he exerciseth all the power of the first beast before him, and causeth the earth and them which dwell therein to worship the first beast, whose deadly wound was healed.

13 And he doeth great wonders, so that he maketh fire come down from heaven on the earth in the sight of men.

14 And deceiveth them that dwell on the earth by the means of those miracles, which he had power to do in the sight of the beast; saying to them that dwell on the earth, that they should make an image to the beast, which had the wound by a sword, and did live.

15 And he had power to give life unto the image of the beast, that the image of the beast should both speak, and cause that as many as would not worship the image of the beast should be killed.

16 And he causeth all, both small and great, rich and poor, free and bond, to receive a mark in their right hand, or in their foreheads:

17 And that no man might buy or sell, save he that had the mark, or the name of the beast, or the number of his name.

18 Here is wisdom. Let him that hath understanding count the number of the beast: for it is the number of a man; and his number is six hundred three-score and six.

CHAPTER 14.

1 The Lamb standing on mount Zion with his company. 6 An angel preacheth the gospel. 8 The fall of Babylon. 15 The harvest of the world, and putting in of the sickle. 20 The vintage and winepress of the wrath of God.

AND I looked, and lo, a Lamb stood on the mount Zion, and with him an hundred forty and four thousand, having his Father's name written in their foreheads.

2 And I heard a voice from heaven, as the voice of many waters, and as the voice of a great thunder: and I heard the voice of harpers harping with their harps:

3 And they sung a new song, which was a new song before the throne, and before the four beasts, and the elders: and no man could learn that song, but the hundred and forty and four thousand, which were redeemed from the earth.

4 These are they which were not defiled with women; for they are virgins. These are they which follow the Lamb whithersoever he goeth. These were redeemed from among men, being the first-fruits unto God and to the Lamb.

16 And he gathered them together into a place called in the Hebrew tongue Armageddon.

17 And the seventh angel poured out his vial into the air; and there came a great voice out of the temple of heaven, from the throne, saying, "It is done."

18 And there were voices, and thunders, and lightnings; and there was a great earthquake, such as was not since men were upon the earth, so mighty an earthquake, and so great.

19 And the great city was divided into three parts, and the cities of the nations fell; and great Babylon came in remembrance before God, to give unto her the cup of the wine of the fierceness of his wrath.

20 And every island fled away, and the mountains were not found.

21 And there fell upon men a great hail out of heaven, every stone about the weight of a talent; and men blasphemed God because of the plague of the hail; for the plague thereof was exceeding great.

3 So he carried me away in the spirit into the wilderness: and I saw a woman sit upon a scarlet coloured beast, full of blasphemous names, having seven heads and ten horns.

4 And the woman was arrayed in purple and scarlet colour, and decked with gold and precious stones and pearls; having a golden cup in her hand, full of abominations and filthiness of her fornication.

5 And upon her forehead was a name written, MYSTERY, BABYLON THE GREAT, THE MOTHER OF HARLOTS AND ABOMINATIONS OF THE EARTH.

6 And I saw the woman drunken with the blood of the saints, and with the blood of the martyrs of Jesus; and when I saw her, I wondered with great admiration.

AND I heard a great voice out of the temple saying to the seven angels, Go your ways, and pour out the vials of the wrath of God upon the earth.

2 And the first went, and poured out his vial upon the earth; and there fell a noisome and grievous sore upon the men which had the mark of the beast, and upon them which worshipped his image.

3 And the second angel poured out his vial upon the sea; and it became as the blood of a dead man: and every living soul died in the sea.

4 And the third angel poured out his vial upon the rivers and fountains of waters; and they became blood.

5 And I heard the angel of the waters say, Thou art righteous, O Lord β, which art, and wast, and shalt be, because thou hast judged thus.

6 For they have shed the blood of saints and prophets, and thou hast given them blood to drink; β for β they are worthy.

7 And I heard β another out of β the altar say, Even so, Lord God Almighty, true and righteous are thy judgments.

9 And men were scorched with great heat, and blasphemed the name of God, which hath power over these plagues; and they repented not to give him glory.

10 And the fifth angel poured out his vial upon the seat of the beast; and his kingdom was full of darkness; and they gnawed their tongues for pain.

11 And he blasphemed the God of heaven because of their pains and their sores, and repented not of their deeds.

12 And the sixth angel poured out his vial upon the great river Euphrates; and the water thereof was dried up; that the way of the kings of the east might be prepared.

13 And I saw three unclean spirits like frogs come out of the mouth of the dragon, and out of the mouth of the beast, and out of the mouth of the false prophet.

8 The beast that thou sawest was, and is not; and β shall ascend out of the bottomless pit, β and γ go β into perdition: and they that dwell on the earth β shall wonder, β whose names β were not written β in the book of life β from the foundation β of the world, when they behold β the beast that was, and is not, γ and yet is γ .

9 And β here is the mind which hath wisdom β . The seven heads are seven mountains, on which the woman sitteth.

10 And there are β seven kings: five are fallen, and one is, and the other is not yet come; and when he cometh, he must continue β a short space β .

11 And the beast that was, and is not, β even he β is the eighth, and is β of the seven β , and goeth into perdition.

12 And β the ten horns which thou sawest are ten kings, which have received no β kingdom β as yet β ; but receive power as kings one hour with the beast.

13 These have one mind, and β shall give β their power and strength unto the beast.

14 β These shall make war with the Lamb, and the Lamb shall overcome them: β for he is Lord of lords, and King of kings: β and β they that are with him β are called, and chosen, and faithful β .

15 And he saith unto me, β The waters which thou sawest, where the whore sitteth, are peoples, and multitudes, and nations, and tongues.

16 And the ten horns which thou sawest upon the beast β , these shall hate the whore, and shall make her desolate β and naked, and shall eat her flesh, and β burn β her with fire.

17 β For God β hath put β in their hearts to fulfil β his will β , β and to agree β , and give their β kingdom β unto the beast, β until the words of God shall be fulfilled.

18 And the woman which thou sawest is that great city, which reigneth over the kings of the earth.

CHAPTER 18.

2 Babylon is fallen. 4 The people of God commanded to depart out of her. 9 The kings of the earth, β with the merchants and mariners, lament over her. 20 The saints rejoice for the judgments of God upon her.

AND β after these things I saw another angel come down from heaven, having great power; β and the earth was lightened with his glory.

2 And he cried mightily with a strong voice, saying, β Babylon the great is fallen, β is fallen, β and β is become β the β habitation of devils, and β the β hold β of every β foul β spirit, and β a β cage β of every unclean and hateful bird.

3 For all nations β have drunk of the wine of the wrath β of her fornication, and the kings of the earth have committed fornication with her, β and the merchants of the earth are waxed rich through the β abundance β of her β delicacies β .

4 And I heard another voice from heaven, saying, β Come out of her, my people, that ye be not β partakers of her sins β , and that ye receive not of her plagues.

5 For her sins β have reached β unto heaven, and β God hath remembered her iniquities.

6 Reward her even as she rewarded β you β , and double β unto her β double according to her works: β in the cup which she hath filled β fill to her double.

7 How much she hath glorified herself, and lived deliciously, so much torment and sorrow give her: for she saith in her heart, I sit a β queen, and am no widow, and shall see no sorrow.

8 Therefore shall her plagues come β in one day, death, and mourning, and famine; and β she shall be utterly burned with fire: for strong β is the Lord God who β judgeth β her.

9 And the kings of the earth, who have committed fornication and lived deliciously with her, shall bewail her, and lament for her β when they shall see the smoke of her burning,

10 Standing afar off for the fear of her torment, saying, β Alas, alas, that great city Babylon, that mighty city! β for in one hour is thy judgment come.

11 And β the merchants of the earth β shall weep and mourn β over her; for no man buyeth their merchandise any more:

12 β The merchandise β of gold, and silver, and precious stones, and of pearls, and fine linen, and purple, and silk, and scarlet, and all β thyne wood β , and all manner vessels of ivory, and all manner vessels of most precious wood, and of brass, and iron, and marble,

13 And β cinnamon β , and odours, and ointments, and frankincense, and wine, and oil, and fine flour, and wheat, and beasts, and sheep, and horses, and chariots, and β slaves β , and β souls of men β .

15 And the merchants of these things, which were made rich by her, shall stand off for the fear of her torment, weeping and wailing.

16 And saying, Alas, alas that great city, that was clothed in fine linen, and purple, and scarlet, and decked with gold, and precious stones, and pearls!

17 For in one hour so great riches are come to nought!

18 And every shipmaster, and all the company in ships, and sailors, and as many as trade by sea, stood afar off, 19 And cried when they saw the smoke of her burning, saying, What city is like unto this great city?

20 And they cast dust on their heads, and cried, weeping and wailing, saying, Alas, alas that great city, wherein were made rich all that had ships in the sea by reason of her costliness! for in one hour she is made desolate.

21 Rejoice over her, thou heaven, and ye holy apostles, and prophets; for God hath avenged you on her.

22 And a mighty angel took up a stone like a great millstone, and cast it into the sea, saying, Thus with violence shall that great city Babylon be thrown down, and shall be found no more at all.

23 And the voice of harpers, and musicians, and of pipers, and trumpeters, shall be heard no more at all in thee; and no craftsman, of whatsoever craft he be, shall be found any more in thee; and the sound of a millstone shall be heard no more at all in thee;

24 And the light of a candle shall shine no more at all in thee; and the voice of the bridegroom and of the bride shall be heard no more at all in thee: for thy merchants were of the great men of the earth; for by thy sorceries were all nations deceived.

25 And in her was found the blood of prophets, and of saints, and of all that were slain upon the earth.

3 And again they said, Alleluia! And her smoke rose up for ever and ever.

4 And the four and twenty elders and the four beasts fell down and worshipped God that sat on the throne, saying, Amen! Alleluia!

6 And I heard as it were the voice of a great multitude, and as the voice of many waters, and as the voice of mighty thunderings, saying, Alleluia: for the Lord God God omnipotent reigneth!

7 Let us be glad and rejoice, and give honour to him: for the marriage of the Lamb is come, and his wife hath made herself ready.

8 And to her was granted that she should be arrayed in fine linen, clean and white: for the fine linen is the righteousness of saints.

9 And he saith unto me, Write, Blessed are they which are called unto the marriage supper of the Lamb. And he saith unto me, These are the true sayings of God.

10 And I fell at his feet to worship him. And he said unto me, See thou do it not: I am thy fellow-servant, and of thy brethren who have the testimony of Jesus: worship God: for the testimony of Jesus is the spirit of prophecy.

11 And I saw heaven opened, and behold a white horse; and he that sat upon him was called Faithful and True, and in righteousness he doth judge and make war.

12 His eyes were as a flame of fire, and on his head were many crowns; and he had a name written, that no man knew, but he himself.

14 And the armies which were in heaven followed him upon white horses, clothed in fine linen, white and clean.

ON THE THIRTIEN DAY AFTER THE RESURRECTION OF KING, AND LORD OF LORDS.
 17 And I saw an angel standing in the sun, and he cried with a loud voice, saying, "to all the fowls that fly in the midst of heaven." Come and gather yourselves together unto the supper of the great God.
 18 That ye may eat the flesh of kings, and the flesh of captains, and the flesh of mighty men, and the flesh of horses, and of them that sit on them, and the flesh of all men, both free and bond, both small and great.
 19 And I saw the beast, and the kings of the earth, and the beast's armies, gathered together to make war against him that sat on the horse, and against his army.
 20 And the beast was taken, and with him the false prophet that wrought miracles before him, with which he deceived them that he received the mark of the beast, and them that worshipped his image. These both were cast alive into the lake of fire burning with brimstone.
 21 And the remnant were slain with the sword of him that sat upon the horse, which sword proceeded out of his mouth: and all the fowls were filled with their flesh.

CHAPTER 20.

1 Satan bound for a thousand years. 6 The first resurrection: they blessed that have part therein. 7 Satan let loose again. 8 Gog and Magog. 10 The devil cast into the lake of fire and brimstone. 12 The last and general resurrection.

AND I saw an angel come down from heaven, having the key of the bottomless pit and a great chain in his hand.
 2 And he laid hold on the dragon, that is, old serpent, which is the Devil, and Satan, and bound him a thousand years.

3 And cast him into the bottomless pit, and shut him up, and set a seal upon him, that he should deceive the nations no more, till the thousand years should be fulfilled: and after that he must be loosed a little season.

4 And I saw thrones, and they sat upon them, and judgment was given unto them: and I saw the souls of them that were beheaded for the witness of Jesus, and for the word of God, and which had not worshipped the beast, neither his image, neither had received his mark upon their foreheads, or in their hands; and they lived and reigned with Christ a thousand years.

5 But the rest of the dead lived not again until the thousand years were finished. This is the first resurrection.

6 Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection: on such the second death hath no power, but they shall be priests of God and of Christ,

 8 And shall go out to deceive the nations which are in the four quarters of the earth, Gog and Magog, to gather them together to battle: the number of whom is as the sand of the sea.
 9 And they went up on the breadth of the earth, and compassed the camp of the saints about, and the beloved city; and fire came down from God out of heaven, and devoured them.

 12 And I saw the dead, small and great, stand before God; and the books were opened: and another book was opened, which is the book of life: and the dead were judged out of those things which were written in the books, according to their works.
 13 And the sea gave up the dead which were in it; and death and hell delivered up the dead which were in them: and they were judged every man according to their works.
 14 And death and hell were cast into the lake of fire. This is the second death.

6 And he said unto me, β —It is done. β I am Alpha & Omega, the beginning and the end. β I will give unto him that is athirst of the fountain of the water of life freely.

7 He that overcometh shall inherit β all things β ; and β I will be his God, and he shall be my son.

8 β But the fearful, and unbelieving, and the abominable, and murderers, and whoremongers, and sorcerers, and idolaters, and all liars, shall have their part in the lake which burneth with fire and brimstone: which is the second death.

9 And there came unto me one of the seven angels which had the seven vials β full β of the seven last plagues, and talked with me, saying, Come hither, I will shew thee the bride, the Lamb's wife.

10 And he carried me away in the spirit to a great and high mountain, and shewed me that β great β city, the holy Jerusalem, descending out of heaven from God.

11 Having the glory of God: β and β her light was like unto a stone most precious, even like a jasper stone, clear as crystal;

12 β And had β a wall great and high, β and had β twelve gates, y and at the gates twelve angels, y names written thereon, which are the names of the twelve tribes of the children of Israel:

13 On the east three gates; on the north three gates; on the south three gates; and on the west three gates.

14 And the wall of the city β had β twelve foundations¹⁰, and β in β them y the names y of the twelve apostles of the Lamb.

15 And he β that talked with me β had β a golden reed β to measure the city, and the gates thereof, and the wall thereof.

16 And the city lieth foursquare, and the length is as large as the breadth: and he measured the city with the reed, twelve thousand furlongs. The length and the breadth and the height of it are equal.

17 And he measured the wall thereof, an hundred and forty and four cubits, according to the measure of a man, β that is, of the angel¹¹.

18 And the building β of the wall of it was of β jasper¹²; and the city was pure gold, like unto β clear β glass.

19 And the foundations of the wall of the city were β garnished with β all manner of precious stones. The first foundation was β jasper¹³; the second, sapphire;

the third, a chalcedony; the fourth, an emerald;

20 The fifth, sardonyx; the sixth, sardius; the seventh, chrysolite; the eighth, beryl; the ninth, a topaz; the tenth, a chrysopterus; the eleventh, a jacinth; the twelfth, an amethyst.

21 And the twelve gates were twelve pearls; every several gate was of one pearl: and the street of the city was pure gold, as it were transparent glass.

22 And I saw no temple therein: for the Lord God Almighty and the Lamb are the temple of it.

23 And the city β had β no need of the sun, neither of the moon, to shine in it β ; for the glory of God did lighten it, and the Lamb is the β light¹⁷ thereof.

24 β And the nations of them which are saved shall walk in the light of it β ; and the kings of the earth do bring their glory y and honour y into it.

25 And the gates of it shall not be shut at all by day: for β there shall be no night there.

26 And they shall bring the glory and honour of the nations into it.

27 And β there shall in no wise enter into it any thing β that defileth β , neither y whatsoever worketh y abomination, or maketh a lie: but they which are written in the Lamb's β book of life.

CHAPTER 22.

1 The river of the water of life. 2 The tree of life. 3 The light of the city of God is himself. 4 The angel will not be worshipped. 5 Nothing may be added to the word of God, nor taken from.

AND he shewed me β a β pure β river of water of life, clear as crystal, proceeding out of the throne of God and of the Lamb¹.

2 In the midst of the street of it, and on either side of the river, was β there β the tree β of life, which bare twelve manner of fruits, and yielded her fruit β every month β ; and the leaves of the tree were β for the healing of the nations.

3 And β there shall be no more β curse β ; β but β the throne of God and of the Lamb shall be in it; and his servants shall serve him:

4 And they shall see his face; and β his name shall be in their foreheads.

5 And there shall be no night β there β ; and they y need y no candle, neither light of the sun; for the Lord God β giveth β them light: and they shall reign for ever and ever.

6 And he said unto me, These sayings are faithful and true: and β the Lord God of β the holy prophets β send his angel to shew unto his servants the things which must shortly be done.

7 Behold, I come quickly: β blessed is he that keepeth the sayings of the prophecy of this book.

PREFACE.

The success in Great Britain and America of the Sunday School Teacher's Bible published in May 1875, proved that our project had anticipated a public need.*

The cordial approval of its principle and contents by eminent Biblical Scholars and by representatives of all classes of Bible Teachers, encouraged us to enlarge and improve each successive issue of its "AIDS TO BIBLE STUDENTS," so as to meet the wants not only of Teachers in Schools, but also of Parents at Home, and of Bible Students in general.

In particular, we obtained concise or exhaustive articles from the most eminent authorities on leading Biblical Subjects; these articles will be found to summarize information possessed by few, or only obtainable by those who have access to a Library and leisure for special study.

Some of the more interesting and important articles—viz., on Hebrew Poetry, by the Rev. T. K. Cheyne, and Music, by Dr. Stainer; on Bible Ethnology, by the Rev. A. H. Sayce, Plants, by Sir J. Hooker, Animal Creation, by Dr. Tristram, Money and Weights, by Mr. Madden, and on Jewish Sects, and Bible Chronology, by Dr. Green—were published separately in an Appendix in November 1877.

This Appendix—the importance and high quality of which has been so fully acknowledged—was shortly after incorporated with the original work, and has been found to greatly extend its scope and usefulness.

Besides further improvements in the original work, including new and more elaborate sections of the Historical Epitome—esp., 'Between the Testaments' and the 'Apostolic History' by the Rev. P. Thomson and the Editor—additions were made in 1878 and 1879 in pursuance of the original design, notably a Glossary of Bible Words, by the Rev. Professor Lumby, D.D., and 'The Bible and the Monuments,' by the Rev. Professor Sayce.

Finally, on the occasion of the Sunday School Centenary, 1880, these "Aids" were republished with the new VARIORUM REFERENCE BIBLE, the combined work being entitled the VARIORUM TEACHER'S BIBLE.

*It is necessary to point out, that it was at least 16 months afterwards that a Bible issued from the Oxford University Press, bearing on its title page The S.S. Teacher's Edition, and closely following the model of the Queen's Printers Sunday School Teacher's Bible (Title, &c. copyright), even including their 'Index of Persons, Places, and Subjects' afterwards withdrawn,—because the later is sometimes regarded as the contemporary or even as the predecessor of the Queen's Printers work.

THE BIBLE.

THE word Bible (Gr. Biblia) means properly "books" — "a collection of books" or "library." Hence the Bible is strictly a library of sacred literature—thus in its very title conveying the miscellaneous character of its contents. It is divided into two parts, called respectively the Old and the New Testament, or, more correctly, Covenant. The books of the Old Covenant derive their name from the fact that they are concerned with the covenant into which God entered with the chosen people Israel (Deut. v. 2, 3; Jer. xxxi. 32), by virtue of which they were made the recipients of a certain special revelation and certain special privileges on the condition of their fidelity to the obligations laid upon them. This fidelity being found to be very wavering, uncertain, and imperfect, a new and larger covenant was made (Jer. xxxi. 31; Matt. xxvi. 28, where "new testament" should be rather "new covenant"), and the collection of books belonging to this new covenant forms the second main division of the Bible.

Another term which has been used from Josephus downwards to express the special relation in which God placed himself to Israel is the "Theocracy," implying at once the direct government of the people by God, and their peculiar consecration to His service. Though the precise word does not occur in the Bible, the idea occurs frequently (comp. Deut. xxxii. 6, which—God was king over his chosen people, 1 Sam. xii. 12; Matt. xii. 28, &c.). Viewed in this light, the Old Testament describes (1) the establishment of the Theocracy in a pure and ideal form; (2) on the failure of this, the institution of a modified and imperfect Theocracy (1 Sam. xii. 13–15), which, in its turn, falls, though in the meantime the principles involved in it are largely developed and deepened, especially by the teaching of the prophets; while the New Testament, in which the phrases "Kingdom of God" and "Kingdom of Heaven" are very frequent, describes (1) the advent of the Divine King (Matt. i. 23; Luke ii. 11; xix. 38, &c.); (2) the establishment of a new spiritual kingdom no longer confined to a single people, but diffused throughout the world.

A third light in which the Bible may be regarded is as the record of a Revelation, which is again divided into two great periods, the one co-extensive with the Old Covenant, the other with the New (John i. 17, 18; Heb. i. 1). In these two periods may be seen a gradually progressive unfolding of the fundamental truths of religion. This too may be regarded from different points of view. Starting from Ex. vi. 3, we may observe how (1) God first revealed Himself as Elohim (A.V. God), the author of Creation; how (2) to the patriarchs He revealed Himself as El Shaddai (A.V. God Almighty), He who orders the course of nature and of human affairs to His own ends; (3) to Moses as Jehovah (or more correctly Jahveh, A.V. Lord), "I AM THAT I AM," the Eternal and Unchangeable, who "keepeth his promise for ever," the God of grace, who makes a covenant with His people, and opens out to them the slowly unfolded scheme of redemption and salvation; (4) next, as especially the God of mercy and forgiveness (Ex. xxxiv. 6, 7); (5) then, with a special emphasis on His unity (Deut. vi. 4), that does not tolerate any other idol-existences (Deut. xxxii. 39; Isa. xlii. 10; xlv. 6, &c.); as so far in a special sense the God of a single people, but yet (6) Lord also of the heathen (Isa. xlv. 1, &c.; Amos ix. 7), to whom ultimately every knee should bow (Isa. xlv. 23; Zech. xiv. 9); and, finally, as opening out a new revelation of Himself in the person of His Incarnate Son (Matt. i. 23; John i. 18; Heb. i. 1), who (7), even when His visible presence is removed, is still present in His Spirit (John xvi. 7; Acts ii. 4; Matt. xxviii. 20). Further, we may trace the preliminary steps of this second great Revelation in the gradual growth of the hope of a Messiah; first, as a king after the manner of David, ruling over a united people (Hosea, Amos); then born in David's city, Beth-lehem, and embodying the pacific character of Solomon as well as the triumphant character of David (Micah, and perhaps Zech. ix.—xi.); reaching a climax of delineation—the Virgin-Born, who institutes a reign of righteousness in which Gentiles as well as Jews shall participate, and, though he triumphs, triumphing through suffering and humiliation (Isaiah), the latter features perhaps belonging rather to the age of the Exile than of Hezekiah); the conception sustained, though not very prominently put forward, by Jeremiah and Ezekiel, chronologically defined (though this is less certain) by Daniel, and finally realised in the birth of the CHRIST, who disappointed the expectations of the multitudes (John vi. 15; Matt. xxvii. 42), and even of His disciples (Acts i. 6), only to fulfil the true idea of Messiahship. Or we may note the steps by which God has made known His will in such matters as the doctrine of individual responsibility (see esp. Ezek. xviii.), the law of retaliation, and the commands against murder and adultery (Matt. v., or divorce (Matt. xix.), and the doctrine of a future life (comp. e.g. Ps. lxxxviii. 10–12; Eccl. ix. 10 with Dan. xii. 2, 3, and with 1 Cor. xv.; 2 Tim. i. 10). Or, with St. Paul, we may take a wider view, and survey the whole course of human history:—(1) the Gentiles subject to the law of reason and conscience, but falling first into idolatry, and then suffered by God to sink into a state of utter moral corruption (Rom. i. ii.); (2) the Jews receiving first the promise, and after that the Law (Gal. iii. 17, &c.), which, though it failed to make them righteous, nevertheless served as a "schoolmaster" (strictly, servant placed in charge of a child) "to bring them to Christ"; (3) then, with the coming of Christ, the offer of the righteousness which had hitherto proved so unattainable alike to Jews and Gentiles (Rom. i. 16, 17), accepted by the one, but rejected by the other, who in their turn are, for a time at least, rejected, yet with a hope of ultimate restoration (Rom. xi.)

The Old Testament.

The books of the Old Testament, or Covenant, contain (1) a history of the origin of the covenant between God and the people of Israel, and a statement of the principles involved in that Covenant as affecting each of the contracting parties—the promises given by God and the duties undertaken by man, along with the laws laid down for the better performance of those duties (the Pentateuch); (2) a series of histories containing an account of the subsequent fortune of the Covenant people, with especial reference to the degree in which they kept or failed to keep their share in the Covenant, and the consequent dealings of God with them (Joshua—Nehemiah); (3) a number of literary productions expressive of the principles involved in the Covenant, in the shape of poems private and devotional, or intended for liturgical use in public worship (the Psalms); narrative or dramatic works, deriving their interest from their connection with the heroes of the Covenant race (Ruth, Jonah, Esther, Song of Songs); collections of aphorisms and philosophic utterances (Book of Proverbs, Ecclesiastes), and the imaginative treatment of deep religious problems (Book of Job); (4) a series of works by the authorised religious leaders of the people, the chief intermediaries between God and man, who were specially employed to transmit, develop, and gradually expand the principles embodied in the original Covenant, and to prepare the way for its final with a law between God and a single people, Israel, but a Covenant of grace and mercy vouchsafed by God to all mankind (the Prophets, except Jonah).

The older Jewish classification is not quite co-extensive with that which has just been given, and which corresponds rather with the order of the books in our Bible. In the New Testament (Luke xxiv. 44) we find a three-fold division of the sacred Scriptures, (1) the Law, (2) the Prophets, (3) the Psalms. The first of these is known as the Pentateuch, or Five Books of Moses; the second was divided by the Jews into (a) the former and (b) the latter Prophets: or (a) Joshua, Judges, 1 and 2 Samuel, and 1 and 2 Kings (the title "Prophets" being suggested by the theocratic character of the histories); and (b) Isaiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel, and the twelve Minor Prophets—while the third embraces all the other books not previously enumerated. This third division was known to the Jews by the technical name Kethubim, in the Greek Hagiographa or "Scriptures," and is miscellaneous in its character. Besides the Psalms, Proverbs, and Job, it included the prophetic or quasi-prophetic books, the ecclesiastical histories contained in Chronicles, Ezra, and Nehemiah, and also the five Megilloth or "Rolls," i.e. Canticles, Ruth, Lamentations, Ecclesiastes, and Esther.

The Law and the Prophets (not the Psalms) were divided by the Jews into Levassus; and it was one of these which our Lord "stood up to read" (Luke iv. 16). In addition to this regular course, the five Megilloth were recited at the principal feasts, Canticles at the Passover, Ruth at the Feast of Weeks, Lamentations in the month Ab (end of July), when both temples are said to have been destroyed, Ecclesiastes at the Feast of Tabernacles, and Esther at the Feast of Purim.

The Pentateuch.

The Pentateuch, like most of the other Jewish literature, is anonymous. Jewish tradition attributes the whole of it to Moses, though the only portions claiming to have been written by him are the book of the Covenant at Sinai (see Ex. xxiv. 4, 7), certain conditions of the covenant (Ex. xxxiv. 27), a list of stations in the wanderings (Num. xxxiii. 2), a book of the Law written in the Plains of Moab (Deut. xxxi. 9-11, 24-26), and the so-called Song of Moses (Deut. xxxii. 22). It has been thought in modern times that traces may be found of the incorporation in the Pentateuch of three (or four) considerable documents, besides smaller fragments such as those mentioned in Num. xxi. 17, 18, 27-30. These larger documents appear to be distinguished to some extent from each other by a different use of the Divine Name. The distinction is clearest in the book of Genesis, where, for instance, it will seem as if two separate accounts were given of the Creation, and as if two accounts of the Deluge were interwoven together. In other sections besides these, either the name Elohim (A.V. "God") or Jehovah (more properly Yahveh, A.V. "Lord") will be found to predominate; those with Jehovah are evidently the work of a prophet or a "son of the prophets." The Levitical legislation shows for the most part the characteristics of the Elohistic writer, and a Deutonomy a new style becomes apparent. The well-known orthodox commentator, Delitzsch, attributes the collection and welding together of these different documents to men like Eleazar and Joshua, in the generation after Moses. This is probably too slight a commendation of analytic criticism. It implies a certitude as to the character of the period referred to which could not easily be justified. All that is certain is that the traditional view creates far more difficulties than it solves, and that the Pentateuch, though not without artificial unity, is the work of various ages and men, and not entirely free from historical and literary inconsistencies. The parallel of the Iliad, one of our earliest literary monuments, will at once suggest itself to the student. The whole question of the date and relations of the various component parts of the Pentateuch must be regarded as still a matter of great uncertainty.

The division into five books is very ancient, and is thought as old as the books themselves. Our present list of 39 books is derived from the Septuagint, or Greek translation, made at Alexandria in the third century B.C. In the Hebrew Bibles the books are indicated by their first words.

These books, which were called Apocrypha (i.e. "hidden"), because they were at once obscure in their origin and consigned by the judgment of the church to comparative obscurity, were, for the most part, composed after the close of the Old Testament Canon, and in the interval which separates it from the New Testament. They were excluded from the Canon because of their date, their non-Israelitish origin, or on other religious grounds. They include (1) spurious works attributed to Old Testament personages (Baruch, Letter of Jeremiah, Ezechiel); (2) spurious additions to the canonical books, such as those to the books of Ezra and Judith; (3) historical works belonging to the interval between the Old and New Testament (Books of Maccabees); (4) romances with a moral or religious tendency (Judith, Tobit); (5) works of religious philosophy, turning on the conception of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticon, Wisdom of Solomon).

GENESIS.

Genesis is a Greek word meaning generation, and the first book of the Pentateuch is called by this name as treating of the generation or creation of all things. In Hebrew it is called bereshith—In the beginning. Though it begins with the creation and the primitive history of man, these subjects are treated only as a preliminary to the gradually narrowing selection of the descendants of Jacob to be the chosen recipients of the Divine Covenant. Out of all the families of the earth, that of Terah is chosen. Among the sons of Terah the call comes specially to Abraham. From Abraham it is transmitted to the "child of promise," Isaac. It then passes from Isaac's firstborn, Esau, to Jacob; and Jacob in turn gives his chief blessing, not to the eldest, Reuben, but to Judah and Ephraim. The divisions of the book are—(1) the primeval world, including the creation, the fall, the deluge, and the dispersion of the human race, chaps. i.-xi.; (2) Abraham, his call, his faith, and the triple promise made to him (called already in Gen. xv. 18 a "covenant"), chaps. xii.-xxv. 11; (3) Isaac, and the transference of the birth-right to Jacob, chaps. xxv. 12-xxvi. 43; (4) Jacob's family, and the descent into Egypt, chaps. xxxvii.-l.

EXODUS.

Exodus in Greek means departure, and is the word applied, in Luke ix. 31, to our Lord's decease. This book relates the deliverance of the Israelites out of Egypt, and, as a natural sequel to their deliverance (Ex. ii. 4-6, Deut. xxi. 2, 9), the solemn conclusion of the OLD COVENANT at Sinai. It may be thus divided: (1) The deliverance, including the early life of Moses, the struggle in Egypt, the Exodus, the overthrow of the Egyptians, and the march to Sinai, chaps. i.-xviii.; (2) The Covenant, beginning with the Decalogue and the fundamental laws contained in "book of the covenant" (Ex. xx.-xxiii.), the consecrations of God to Moses, the idolatrous worship of the golden calf, Moses' intercession and further laws, and the construction of the tabernacle (chaps. xxiv.-xl.). The family has now become a people; and to be "peculiar people" in its mission.

LEVITICUS.

Leviticus, in Hebrew seph'arim, as its name indicates, is taken up chiefly with the organization of the new religion, the basis of the new law. The book may be analysed thus: (1) Laws concerning sacrifices, chaps. i.-vii.; (2) a historical parallelism, ascribing the consecration of Aaron and his sons, chaps. viii.-x.; (3) laws concerning purity, xi.-xvi.; (4) laws signed to separate Israel from the heathen nations, chaps. xvii.-xx.; (5) laws concerning the priests, holy days, festivals, and vows, xxi.-xxvii., with a blessing, curse inserted, by way of sanction to the laws, chap. xxvii.

NUMBERS.

Numbers relates the two numberings of the people in the wilderness, first in the 2nd year of the exodus, chap. i.; and, secondly, in the 40th year of the exodus, chap. xvi., after the generation on which sentence was passed at Kadesh had passed away. It is called in Heb. sephardabar or sephardabar, "and he spake," or "in the wilderness." It consists of four sections: (1) Preparations for breaking up the camp at Sinai, and marching on Canaan, 1.-x. 10; (2) the march by way of the south (the west route being barred by the Philistines), from Sinai to Kadesh-barnea on the borders of Canaan, and repulse by the Canaanites, x. 11.-xiv. 45; (3) a notice of various occurrences, especially the numbering of Aaron and Miriam, and the rebellion of Korah, and censures in the 38 years of penal wandering, xvi.-xix. 22; (4) the history of the last year spent in the wilderness, the 40th of the exodus, with the death of Aaron, the second and new circuitous march to Canaan round Edom and Moab, the conquest of the east of Jordan, and the episode of Balaam, xx.-xxv.

DEUTERONOMY.

Deuteronomy is so called from its name in the Septuagint, meaning "second law." In Heb. it is called

The Historical Books.

JOSHUA.

Joshua is the first of what are called in Heb. "the former prophets," i.e. the historical books to the end of Kings, with the exception of Ruth. It records the history of Israel from the death of Moses to that of Joshua, embracing (1) the conquest in three campaigns, the first subjugating central Canaan, the second defeating the five kings of the south, and the third crushing the kings of the north under Jabin at Lake Merom (i.-xii.); and (2) the settlement of Canaan, first that of the trans-Jordanic tribes, then of Judah, Ephraim, and half Manasseh, and lastly of the 7½ remaining tribes. The first part is historical, the second mainly geographical. The Book of Joshua might be described as the Domesday-Book of the Israelites.

The title does not necessarily imply that the book was written by Joshua, any more than in the case of Ruth, Samuel, &c., though from xviii. 9, xiv. 26, it would seem that written records were made by Joshua and his contemporaries. The phrase "unto this day," which occurs so frequently, points to a time later than the events narrated, but in some cases at least certainly not much later. In chap. xvi. 10 we have a state of things which had ceased to exist in the time of Solomon (1 Kings ix. 16); and Josh. xv. 63 was written before 2 Sam. v. 6. Some have seen in the Book of Joshua a continuation of the Pentateuch, making that volume strictly a Hexateuch. The Book of Psalms refers to Joshua, e.g. Ps. xlv. 2-4, lxxviii. 13-15, lxxviii. 54, 55, cxiv. 1-8, and so does Habakkuk, iii. 8-13. The book probably covers about 25 or 30 years.

JUDGES.

The Book of Judges, called in Heb. shofetim (comp. the shofets of Tyre and Carthage), carries on the history of Israel from the death of Joshua. It consists of three parts: (a) a preface (chaps. i.-iii. 4); (b) the main history (iii. 5.-xvi. 31); and (c) a supplement (xvii.-xxi.). The main history records in some detail six critical events in the history of the period—the deliverance from Chushan-rishathaim by Othniel, the deliverance from the Moabites by Ehud, that from the revived Canaanite power in the north by Deborah and Barak, from the Midianites by Gideon (whose son Abimelech established a temporary monarchy), the deliverance from the Ammonites by Jephthah, and the struggle of Samson with the Philistines. The supplement consists of two episodes, that of Micah and the Danites, and the shameful deed of the men of Gibeah, which nearly led to the extermination of Benjamin. The Book of Judges shows a growing weakness and increasing disorganization among the people, with a moral and religious decadence, unchecked even by the good but weak High Priest Eli, ending in disaster and the most marked punishment, short of the Captivity, the forsaking of Shiloh (see Jer. vii. 12). Samson is then raised to reform morals, re-establish religion (aided by a special gift of prophecy), and to restore the national independence. There is nothing to show by whom the book was written; but chap. i. 21 must have been written before the seventh year of David, 2 Sam. v. 7; and chap. xvii. 6, &c., perhaps indicates acquaintance with Saul. Samuel, therefore, may have compiled Judges; but chap. xviii. 30 has led some to

"Words," from its opening, "These are the words." It consists of three addresses by Moses to the people in the 11th month of the 40th year of the exodus (chaps. 1.-xx.), and of certain final acts and words of Moses: e.g. the appointment of his successor (xxi.), his Song (xxii.), Blessing (xxiii.), his death and burial (xxiv.). The first address, an exhortation based upon a historical retrospect, occupies from chaps. i. 6 to iv. 40; the second, a repetition of the main principles of the Covenant, extends from v. 1 to xvi. 19; the third, containing the solemn sanctions of the foregoing, from xvii. 1 to xxx. 20. The object of Deuteronomy is to supplement the previous law: it is an authoritative republication of it to a new generation by the law-giver himself (chap. xxxi. 9, 24). Some laws are new, e.g. chaps. xii. 6-14 (comp. Ex. xxi. 24), xiii. 1-18, xviii. 20, xx. xxi. 1-9, xxiv. 18, &c.; some laws are also abrogated which are no longer appropriate, e.g. chap. xii. 15 repeals Lev. xvii. 8-10. There are verbal changes even in the Decalogue, e.g. in the 4th and 10th commandment. A special interest attaches to the distinction between a true and false prophet (chap. xiii.), to the regulations for the monetary law (xvii. 14, 20), and the prediction of a second prophet and lawgiver like Moses (xviii. 15-18; cp. Acts iii. 22; vii. 37), and chap. xxviii., which seems to foretell the whole course of Jewish history.

think it was compiled much later. This verse may refer to the Philistine captivity implied in chap. xvi. 31. The events in xvii.-xxi. are supposed to have occurred early in the history, because the grandson of Moses (the probable reading, not Manasseh) is named (chap. xviii. 30), and the grandson of Aaron (chap. xxi. 25). It is doubtful whether the rule of the various judges recorded was contemporary or consecutive; if the latter, we have in this book the history of some 410 years, which seems borne out by chap. xi. 26, Acts xiii. 20 (where the common reading is, however, incorrect); if the former, perhaps not more than 150, which is favoured by the genealogy of David (1 Chron. ii. 10-16) and of Zadok (1 Chron. vi. 4-8). The chronology of this book is one of the most difficult questions in Biblical criticism. The history of Judges is referred to in Ps. lxxviii. 60, lxxxviii. 9, and Hosea ix. 9, x. 10.

RUTH.

Ruth is so called because it relates her history, and the introduction of this Moabitess into the line of the Promised Seed as an ancestress of David and of our Lord (comp. also Tamar and Rahab). The book does not follow Judges in the Heb., but was so placed in the LXX translation. The Talmud ascribes it to Samuel. In its present form it was clearly written after David became famous, chap. iv. 22. The law contained in Deut. xxv. 7-9, which had already become modified in the time of Ruth, seems to have been obsolete when her history was written (chap. iv. 7).

SAMUEL.

The Books of Samuel are so called in the Heb., but in the LXX they are called the 1st and 2nd Books of the Kings, though they only contain the history of Saul and David. The name of Samuel, however, is not more appropriate, inasmuch as his death is recorded in the 25th chapter of the first book. The division between the 1st and 2nd books of Samuel is purely arbitrary, and indeed in the Heb. MSS. the two books are one. They cover a period probably of about 130 years. This again marks a crisis in the history of Israel. The disorganization which prevailed under the Judges reached a climax; the pure theocracy had apparently failed, and a mixed theocracy was substituted for it by the appointment of a king, who was, however, to consider himself strictly as God's viceroy. The first king, Saul, did not satisfy this condition, and the crown was therefore transferred to David and his descendants. The judgeship of Eli and the destruction of Shiloh by the Philistines occupy chaps. i.-iv.; the recovery of the ark, and of some degree of prosperity under the judgeship of Samuel, chaps. v.-xii.; the reign of Saul, with the youth and flight of David, fill the rest of 1 Samuel. The second book describes the reign of David (1) at Hebron for 7½ years, in conflict with Ish-bosheth (i.-iv.); (2) in Jerusalem, for 33 years, as undisputed monarch, victorious over his enemies, though with his reign embittered by the revolt of Absalom. There is some difficulty about the chronology of the reign of Saul, only the beginning and end of which seem to be related (see Bases of Chronology). The sources of these books were probably the book of Jasher (2 Sam. i. 18), the Psalms of David (2 Sam. xlii. 1), the chronicles of King David (2 Chron.

2 Sam. v. 8, xxi. 8 (Michal for Merab); xiv. 13 (comp. 1 Chron. xii. 12). The only clue to the date of Samuel, which is indefinite, is the allusion (1 Sam. xxvii. 6) referring to some time after Rehobam. Other parts, however, may be of earlier date.

KINGS.

The Books of Kings (so called in Heb.) are by the LXX. called the 3rd and 4th Books of Kings. They are one in the Heb. MSS., and the division is purely arbitrary. They contain the history of the Jewish nation from the closing years of David till the end of the monarchy, and the departure to Babylon, a period of about 430 years. This includes (1) the undivided monarchy under Solomon, which, with the preceding reign, marks the greatest height of power and splendour in the Hebrew nation, though the causes of disruption were already at work (1 Kings i.—xii.); (2) the divided kingdoms of Israel and Judah, (a) at first hostile to each other, from Rehobam to the death of Ass king of Judah, and from Jeroboam to the death of Omri king of Israel (1 Kings xii.—xvi. 28), (b) then allied under the dynasty of Omri in the northern kingdom, and Jehoshaphat and his successors in the southern (1 Kings xvi. 29—2 Kings xi. 20), and (c) finally, for the most part, hostile again under the dynasty of Jehu and succeeding kings in the north, and the kings from Joash onwards in the south to the taking of Samaria in a.c. 721, which closed the successive captivities of the ten northern tribes (2 Kings xii.—xviii.); (3) the separate existence of the southern kingdom, assailed alternately by Egypt and Assyria and the Chaldean king of Babylon, Nebuchadnezzar, who, having conquered Nineveh for his father, had absorbed the Assyrian empire, till the destruction of Jerusalem by Nebuchadnezzar in a.c. 586 (2 Kings xviii.—xxv.). The Books of Kings supply us with the only materials we have for the history of Israel, which is passed over in the Chronicles in silence. The latest event recorded, the accession of Evil-Merodach, son of Nebuchadnezzar, gives us the date 561 a.c. for that of the composition of the book as it exists. Much of it was probably written earlier. The Talmud and some moderns have ascribed the authorship of the book to Jeremiah, perhaps not without some probability. The sources of Kings were the Book of the Acts of Solomon (1 Kings xi. 41), the Book of the Chronicles of the kings of Israel (1 Kings xiv. 10, &c.), and of Judah (1 Kings xiv. 29, &c.). In addition to the history of the kingdoms of Judah and Israel, we have also that of the prophets Elijah and Elisha. For the chronology of these books, see Bases of Chronology.

CHRONICLES.

The Books of Chronicles, like those of Samuel and Kings, were one book in the Heb. to the time of St. Jerome. Their original name is the Acts of the Days or Times. In the LXX., it is Paraleipomena, things omitted. The chronicler recapitulates the history of Samuel and Kings, besides giving genealogies of the nation not elsewhere to be found. These were copied from existing registers (1 Chron. ix. 1). Writing after the Return, he was anxious to represent the Law and the worship of the restored Temple as the central bond of the nation, hence its prominence in, and the generally Levitical tone of, his narrative. According to the Jewish tradition the Chronicles are the work of Ezra. The book was certainly written after the Captivity: e.g. 1 Chron. iii. contains a genealogy of the descendants of Zerubbabel. The writer made use of and quotes twelve or fourteen authorities, which he mentions by name. The history contains many omissions: e.g. David's adultery with Bathsheba and murder of her husband, the slaughter of the sons of Saul at the demand of the Gibeonites, the rebellions of Absalom and Adonijah, Solomon's foreign wives and idolatry; and many additions, chiefly religious (e.g. Levitical details in the bringing of the ark to Jerusalem, and at the consecration of the Temple, the orders of the Levites and their gathering). The writer of Chronicles does not concern himself with the history of Israel, no doubt for the reason that, from his ecclesiastical point of JOB.

The Book of Job is remarkable as differing from all other books of the Bible in having no reference to the Covenant People or their history. Its origin and date are matters of much obscurity, about which very opposite opinions have been held: some regarding the book as older than Genesis, and others as later than the showing that the books were originally one, and now probably by one and the same author.

EZRA.

The Jews and early Christians treated the Book of Ezra as one with that of Nehemiah, and the tradition is on internal grounds probable. Ezra himself was a priest descended from Aaron (ch. vii. 5), a "ready scribe" (i.e. skilful expounder) "in the law of Moses," and was a principal actor in the events described in the latter part of his book. The first part (chaps. i.—vi.) relates (a) the history of the return of a remnant of the Jews (belonging chiefly to the tribe of Judah, with Levi and Benjamin) from captivity under Zerubbabel prince of Judah, and Joshua the High Priest, in the first year of Cyrus, 536 a.c.; (b) a series of hindrances to the work of restoration, carried on for some years by the neighbouring tribes; (c) the final completion of the Temple, and re-establishment of its services, in a.c. 521, the prophets Haggai and Zechariah having roused the people from the despondency and sinful apathy which God had punished by drought and famine. The second part records, after an interval of 57 years, Ezra's own mission to Jerusalem under Artaxerxes Longimanus, in the years 458—457 a.c., with the reforms instituted by him, especially in cases of intermarriage with foreign men. Those who returned from exile were called returnees (from the tribe of Judah bearing the most prominent part); Jews; the mass of the 12 tribes not seeking itself of the permission to return formed the Dispersion (see Esther; James i. 1, &c.). It is to be noted that the passages chaps. iv. 7—vi. 18, vii. 12—26, are given in the original Aramaic.

NEHEMIAH.

Nehemiah is expressly said to have written the book that bears his name, a fact which distinguishes it from all other historical books of the Bible. It has four sections: chaps. i.—vii. containing a narrative of Nehemiah's mission in 445—444 a.c., but apparently written 15 years later (chap. v. 14), the chief result of his mission in the rebuilding, in spite of active opposition, of the walls of Jerusalem; chaps. viii.—x. differ from the previous section in being written in the third person (some have thought this piece to be the work of Ezra); this section records the joint work of Ezra and Nehemiah in the religious re-organisation of the people; chaps. xi.—xiii. contain sundry lists of the principal men in the priesthood and in the laity. In the last section (chaps. xiv. 27—xiii.) the author reverts to the first person; and was probably written by Nehemiah about a.c. 410. Another view is that Nehemiah wrote the whole of greater part of sections 1 and 4, but that the latter work was put together along with Chronicles and Ezra by a somewhat later writer. The internal criticism follows:—(1) Neh. xii. 23 (cp. v. 19), carries us down to about 350 a.c.; (2) Neh. xii. 22 (cp. again v. 19), brings us date to Alexander the Great, in whose time Judas was high priest; (3) the title "king of Persia" (Ezr. i. 1, ii. 6, 7), which presupposes the fall of the Persian empire; and (4) Neh. xii. 46, 47, in which "the days of Nehemiah" are referred to as belonging to the past. Chap. ii. is very important as shewing the national condition of the national history in the 5th century a.c.

ESTHER.

The Book of Esther is one of the five Megillot, to be read at the feast of Purim, of which it recounts the origin. The date and authorship of the book are uncertain. Its history illustrates the growth of the Megillot (see Ezra), and its condition—material, social, and religious. It is commonly supposed that Ahasuerus is the Persian Xerxes, whose character fitsly corresponds. Esther is probably a Persian name meaning "star," but the Hebrew word is Hadassah, which signifies "myrtle." It has often been remarked that the name of God does not occur in the book, neither is there any direct allusion to religion, though the doctrine of a providential arrangement of events is presupposed throughout. It is probably on this ground that it was one of the last books admitted into the Jewish Canon.

The Poetical Books.

Captivity. The name occurs nowhere else in Scripture, being etymologically distinct from "Job" Gen. xxi. 1 and "Jobab" Gen. xxvii. 32, with which it has recently been confounded and identified. Entirely unfamiliar with the history of Job (Rack, xiv. 14, and recently was Jeremiah (comp. Jer. xv. 10, x. 14 with Jer. 1). And perhaps the largest consensus of opinion

PROVERBS

The Book of Proverbs is known in Hebrew, misley, which has the same meaning, however confined to "proverbs" in the main, but contains also connected poetical pieces of the heading (1-7), viz. ECCLESIASTES ECCLIESIASTES. Eccliesiastes is called in Heb. koheleth, a word which is very difficult to translate, and is inadequately rendered "Preacher." It is a feminine participle, and means perhaps "calling together an assembly," thus referring to wisdom. The book purports to be written by Solomon (i. 1), that as Solomon is spoken of as dead (i. 12) it would seem that this was only a poetic assumption. The character of the language, as well as the circumstances described and the use of thought, have led most modern commentators to refer it to the last century of the Persian empire (440-336 B.C.). The intention of the Persian empire to refer it to the last century of the Persian empire appears to be to show the unsatisfying nature of all worldly things, and to lead men to the practical conclusion to "fear God and keep His commandments." It was this conclusion alone, and the unsatisfying nature of the Persian empire, which made the Jewish canon. The name Jeremia is worthy of Jerome, which attempts have been made to trace a progressive development of thought in the book; indeed, after the 2nd chapter, the work has every appearance of being based on incomplete and disarranged notes. Eccliesiastes is one of the five Rolls, and is read at the feast of Tabernacles.

SONG OF SOLOMON. The Song of Songs is the first of the five Rolls, and is read by the Jews at the feast of Tabernacles.

SONG OF SOLOMON.

The Song of Songs is the first of the five Megillot or "Scrolls," and is read by the Jews annually at the Passover. It is the interpretation of this book is a matter of extreme difficulty, and a variety of opinions have been held. It is the nature of a dialogue between two lovers, and there is a chorus of Daughters of Jerusalem who, from time to time, join in it. The English reader finds difficulties in understanding this poem from two lovers, and the word "Love." In chaps. ii, 7, iii, 5, viii, 4, the sentiment is not a person. In chap. i, 15, 16, the bride, beloved to the Bridegroom, is the object of the poem. In chap. i, 15, 16, the meaning has been thought that there is a deeper and more exquisite meaning than that there is a deeper and more exquisite of poems. The literal one underlying and more supposed that; viii, 11; iii, 9; iv, 1, 8, 13, it has, and from the author belonged to the northern people, and from the allusion to Tirzah as still the residence (vi. 4; comp. i Kin. xvi 9).

PSALMS

The Prophets.

ISAIAH is the first of the Prophets rightly so called, of whom we reckon 4 greater and 12 less. If we calculate his prophetic life from two years before the death of Ahaz (chap. vi. 1) to the third year of Manasseh (chap. xiii. 1) according to a tradition, he was slain in the trunk of a mulberry tree, he was born of about 700 to 800 B.C.; and it must have been about 60 years, so that even if he did not survive his personal history, except the name of his father, he must have lived to a great age. We know the fact that he was married (chap. viii. 3), and mainly because the same seems to be wholly laid in a time when the return from captivity is near (Cyrus is mentioned by name, xlv. 28); and on similar grounds the authorship of Isaiah has been denied also in the case of chaps. xiii. xiv. 1-23, xli. 1-10, xlv. xxvii. xxxiv. xxxv. Arguments from style and language have been used on both sides of the controversy. One of the main arguments for the Isaianic authorship of the disputed passages is the literary relation which they present to the writings of Zephaniah and Jeremiah (compare e.g. Isa. xviii. 8, Jer. with Zeph. ii. 15; Isa. xlv. 12-13, xli. 7, xli. 7 with Jer. x. 1-10, &c.).

Isaiah's chief merit is his many-sidedness. He exerts in various styles, and combines the moral qualities of several less eminent prophets, especially Amos and Hosea. He deepened the prophetic idea of the Day of the Lord, and gave a new turn to the current expectations of the Messiah. He is the first to hint at the Virgin Birth (vi. 14); and while describing the glories of the Messianic Kingdom (ix. 1-7) and its beneficent effects (x. 1-9, ix. 15-22, xli. 1, 3) he also gives to the "servant of Jehovah" (perhaps originally the people of Israel in its ideal aspect) a peculiar character of mildness (xli. 1), and speaks of him as making atonement for sin by humiliation and suffering (liii.); moreover he looks forward in a striking manner to the ultimate inclusion of the Gentiles (xi. 10-16, xix. 23-25, xlii. 6, xlix. 6, 22, 23, ix. 1-16). These remarkable anticipations of Christianity have obtained for Isaiah the name of the Evangelical Prophet.

The first part of the book (i.-xxxix.) contains (1) a collection of prophecies relating to Judah, when Alaz its king was threatened by the confederated forces of Rezin and Pekah—the distress and Messianic salvation (i.-ix. 6); (2) prophecies against foreign nations, partly those which occupied the horizon in the reigns of Ahas and Hezekiah (Samarita, Assyria, Philistia, Moab, Damascus, Ethiopia, Egypt, Arabia, Tyre), and partly those which were to occupy it at a later date, e.g. Babylon, which is also alluded to under the name "desert of the sea" (Is. 7-xxvii. 13); (3) a further collection of prophecies relating to Israel—pointing the moral of the fall of Samaria (xxviii.-xxxv.); (4) a historical supplement (xxxvi.-xxxix.). The subjects of the second part may be said to be (1) the Deliverance which God is about to work for His people through the instrumentality of Cyrus (xl.-xlviii.); (2) the Atonement which the sufferings of the "servant of Jehovah" should accomplish for the nation (xlix.-lvi.); (3) the restored and reformed Jerusalem, into which, after due penitence and the execution of its divine judgment, even the heathen should be gathered (lviii.-lxix.).

JEREMIAH.

Jeremiah prophesied from the 13th year of Josiah, 629 a.c., down to the destruction of Jerusalem, 586 a.c. and later, for a period therefore of more than 40 years. He was of priestly family, and was called when a youth (chap. i. 6, 7). He seems to have dwelt at Anathoth (chap. xi. 18-23) at first, and afterwards in Jerusalem, where he was when the city was taken (chap. xxxvii. 28). It is not improbable that he was the son of Hilkiah the high priest (2 Kings xxii. 8). Tradition asserts that he was stoned by the Jews at Tahpanhes in Egypt (chap. xlv. 1). The book may be divided as follows:—(1) chaps. i.-xxiii., prophecies mingled with history, from the calling of the Prophet onwards, and consisting chiefly of threatenings of judgment and punishment upon the people who have broken the Covenant which God had made with them—the possession of the Temple should not help them any more than that of Shiloh had done—yet with a final prospect of salvation and the institution of a new Covenant, based on moral regeneration; (2) chaps. xxiv.-xlv., historical narrative, chiefly of the siege of Jerusalem and the sufferings of the prophet during it, with prophecies after the taking of the city, the last chapter referring to Baruch; (3) prophecies to foreign nations, some untrustworthy allies, some hostile to Israel, and others, like Israel, the prey of the Chaldeans, viz. Egypt, Philistia, Moab, Ammon, Edom, Damascus, Kedar, and Elam (chaps. i. 5, xiv. 1-2); (4) a historical appendix by another hand (lii.). In chap. xxxvi. 2, 3, we find mention of a roll which was burnt by the king. This probably contained what we now have in chaps. i.-xix., or the bulk of it. At all events, chap. xxi. belongs to the time of Zedekiah, the last king of Judah; chaps. xxii. xxviii. belong to the reign of Jehoiakim, who was made king by Pharaoh-Nechoh after the death of Josiah; chap. xxix. to Zedekiah's reign; chaps. xxx. xxxi. to Jehoiakim's. In chap. xxvii. 1, Jehoiakim is probably a mistake for Zedekiah (see ver. 3). Chaps. xxvii.-xxxv. belong to Zedekiah's reign, chaps. xxxvi.-xxxvii. to Jehoiakim's, chaps. xxxviii.-xlv. to Zedekiah's, and later, chaps. xlv.-lxix. to Jehoiakim's, chaps. i. ii. to Zede-kiah's. This will show the confusion of arrangement which characterizes Jeremiah's prophecies as they have come down to us, a confusion which is yet further increased in the Septuagint version. The prominent idea in Jeremiah is the Covenant broken, but to be renewed. The personal character of the Messiah retires somewhat into the background (see, however, the prophecy of the "Branch" in chap. xxiii. 1-8). The style of Jeremiah is more diffuse than that of Isaiah, but characterized by great tenderness.

LAMENTATIONS.

Lamentations is one of the five Meqilloth (or Rolls, and is read by the Jews on the ninth of Ab, the day on which the 1st Temple was destroyed. The book is traditionally ascribed to Jeremiah (though the internal evidence for this is by no means decisive), and was called forth by the destruction of Jerusalem. The first four chapters are acrostic poems (see Proverbs, sect. 6); chaps. i. ii. iii. have each 22 verses, according to the number of the Hebrew letters; chap. iii. has 65 verses, but every three verses begin with the same letter, they are, however, shorter than the others; chap. v. has the same number of verses as the other three, but the arrangement is not alphabetical. In the first chapter the sacred poet describes the miseries the city had undergone, in the second he dwells on them in connection with the nation's sins, in the third his plaint becomes apparently more personal, though the speaker is really not the poet himself, but the ideal righteous but suffering Israelite, in the fourth he depicts the degradation of Zion on account of sin, and in the fifth he prays that her reproach may be taken away, and that she may renew her days as of old.

EZEKIEL.

Ezekiel was the son of Buzi, a priest probably of the family of Zadok, of whom, however, nothing is known. He was the younger contemporary of Jeremiah, and like him prophesied before and after the destruction of Jerusalem, though he was in the Land of the Captivity, and not with Jeremiah in Judea and Egypt. This must always be borne in mind in reading Ezekiel. He was one of the leading Jews at Jerusalem who, together with the king Jehoiachin, were carried away by Nebuchadnezzar 586 a.c. The place assigned to him was in Mesopotamia, on the river Chebar, the modern Kahbar. He prophesied from about 594 till 572 a.c., which is the latest date given, viz. the 27th year of Jehoiachin's captivity (chap. xxx. 17). The book has four main divisions:—(1) chap. i.-xxiv., prophecies mainly directed against Israel, condemning the perfidy of the alliance with Egypt after accepting vassalage under Babylon, and announcing the approaching fall of Jerusalem; (2) chaps. xxv.-xxix., prophecies against foreign nations, Moabites, Edomites, Philistines, who had triumphed maliciously over Israel's calamities, against Tyre and Sidon, and also against Egypt and Pashroa, Israel's useless allies: these are not in order of time, but the dates are given; (3) xxxiii.-xxxix., the reproof of unfaithful shepherds, the vision of dry bones, the overthrow of Gog, &c., &c.; (4) the vision of the temple and its measurement, a symbol of the national theory. A chief characteristic of Ezekiel's writings is their Apocalyptic or visionary nature: in this respect they resemble Daniel, Zechariah, and the Revelation of St. John. These writings doubtless did much to work the reform which was accomplished during the Captivity—the old tendency to idolatry giving place to a staunch and loyal monotheism. Ezekiel insists strongly upon the observance of the Law, ceremonial as well as moral (in this showing perhaps his priestly descent; he is "the most priestly among the prophets"). At the same time he lays stress upon the necessity for personal righteousness, and upon personal responsibility. The Messianic expectation takes with him the form of "David, the Good Shepherd" (xxvii. 23, xxxvii. 24), who shall reign over a restored and morally renewed people. The style of this prophet is marked by a frequent use of symbols.

DANIEL.

The Book of Daniel, though claimed by us with the greater prophets, is placed in the Jewish Canon between Esther and Ezra. As early as the age of Porphyrus, c. 270 A.D., this fact was treated as an indication of its having been written after the age of prophecy had even in the time of Antiochus Epiphanes, though the fact of its being placed before Ezra would seem to contradict the latter inference. Daniel was taken captive in the third year of Jehoiakim (or about 605 a.c.), and carried to Babylon, where he attained to great eminence under successive monarchs, and died probably about 528 a.c. This book is written partly in Hebrew and partly in Aramaic, the latter part being chaps. ii. 4-vii. It is partly historic, narrating chiefly the rise and influence of Daniel at the Babylonian court, and the capture of Babylon by the Medes (chaps. i.-vi.), and partly prophetic or apocalyptic, containing a forecast of Jewish history based upon the prophecies of Jeremiah (chaps. vii.-xii.). The second part consists of a remarkable series of visions, in which the Messiah is (according to A.V., which, however, many Hebrew scholars regard as incorrect) for the first time mentioned by name in connection with the prediction of the 70 weeks (ix. 25, 26); in these chapters also occurs the first mention of the title "son of man" (vii. 13). It is to

The Prophets.

The Minor Prophets are so called from the smaller bulk of their writings, which form a single volume in the Hebrew. They are twelve in number, and extend over a period of about 400 years, nearly equal to that from Chancery to Wordsworth. Arranging them roughly in chronological order, their succession would be:—Before the Captivity, Joel, Jonah, Amos, Hosea, Micah, Isaiah, Zephaniah II. (3), Nahum, Zephaniah, Habakkuk, Jeremiah; during the Captivity, Obadiah (7), Ezekiel, Daniel, Isaiah II. (34) after the Captivity, Haggai, Zechariah I., Malachi, II. (34). Hosea, and perhaps Nahum belonged to the northern kingdom; all the rest were Judaeans; Amos, though born at Tekoa, a city of Judah, addressed his prophecies partly to the northern tribes (Amos vi. 10-17). Jeremiah, Ezekiel, Zechariah, and possibly Joel and Habakkuk were of priestly or Levitical, Isaiah and Zephaniah probably of royal, descent; Amos was a shepherd, without regular prophetic training (Amos vii. 14, 15).

HOSEA.

Hosea, the first in order of the Minor Prophets, was an elder contemporary of Isaiah. His mission, which was to the Ten Tribes only, continued till somewhat later probably than the capture of Samaria, in 721 B.C. He was also contemporary with Amos and Micah. The leading idea of this prophet is the Divine love for Israel, which will survive even the chastisement brought down by its sins. In the first part of the book (chaps. i.-iii.), Israel's sin is set forth symbolically as adultery against God; the second part (chaps. iv.-xiv.) consists of warning and hortatory addresses. The style and language of Hosea are very obscure. He prophesied the destruction of Samaria, the capital and last remnant of Jeroboam's nation, chap. xiii. 16; the rejection of the Ten Tribes until their repentance and turning to God in a long distant future, when they should share in the ingathering of the Gentiles, chaps. i. 10, ii. 23 (see Rom. ix. 25, 26); the return of the children of Israel to David their king, chap. iii. 5; and the destruction of Judah. The book is a mine of allusions to the earlier history and the books of Moses, e.g. chaps. iv. 15; v. 8, see Judg. v. 14; chaps. x. 9, xl. 8, xii. 3-13; xiii. 5, Ex. iii. 15, &c., &c.

JOEL.

Joel was a prophet to Judah (chaps. i. 1, 15, 17, 23, 32, iii. 1-5, 16-21), familiar with the Temple and its services, and the valley of Jehoshaphat (chap. ii. 2, 12). His date is uncertain. Many think that Joel prophesied as early as the time of Jonah, 875-850 B.C. This is inferred from the absence of allusion to the pressure that afterwards came to be felt from Syria and Assyria. Others, however, would place him later, about 800 B.C. In either case he would be the earliest of the Prophets whose writings have come down to us. On the other hand, an influential minority of critics regard Joel as one of the post-Captivity prophets, basing this view on the internal evidence of the book itself, such as the exclusive importance attached to the priests in chap. i., and the apocalyptic features of chap. iii. Some of his last words are taken up by Amos (chap. iii. 16, see Amos i. 2). The book contains three main prophecies:—The plague of locusts, chaps. i. and ii.; the gift of the Holy Ghost, chap. ii. 28; the judgment in the valley of Jehoshaphat, chap. iii. 2. Interpreters are greatly divided as to whether by locusts the prophet meant a plague of real locusts or the Assyrian Invasion, or possibly prophesied the second under some particular visitation of the former.

AMOS.

All we know of Amos is derived from his writings in chaps. i. and vii. He prophesied during part of the time that Uzziah and Jeroboam II. were contemporaries in Judah and Israel respectively, i.e. between 810 and 784 B.C.; he was, therefore, an older contemporary of Hosea and Isaiah. Amos opens his message (chap. i. 2) with the words of Joel (ii. 16), shewing thereby that Joel preceded him. Nothing is known of the earthquake in the time of Uzziah, except that it is alluded to in Zech. xiv. 5, and that it appears to have supplied the imagery in Mic. i. 4, Nah. i. 8, Isa. vi. 10-21, and many parts of Amos. Amos is remarkable for the severity of his moral tone, and his prophecy has been well described as "a succession of earthquake shocks." The mission of the prophet was to Israel, but he prophesied also against Judah and the surrounding nations, whose sins would call down upon them punishment. He concludes a series of denunciations and symbolic visions by a prophecy of the restored theocracy of the Messianic time. This book contains numerous references to the books of Moses.

(The Twelve Minor.)

OBADIAH.

Of Obadiah we know absolutely nothing, not even the time when he lived. He is probably not the same as the Obadiah mentioned in 1 Kings xviii. His position among the Minor Prophets is in favour of an early date, and it is possible that Joel ii. 32 refers to the last verse of Obadiah, in which case he must, of course, have been contemporary with Joel. So much of Obadiah is found in Jer. xlii., that it seems antecedently more probable that Jeremiah should have quoted from Obadiah, than that Obadiah in his very brief prophecy should have incorporated so much of Jeremiah. Still some have thought that the denunciation of Edom, corresponding as it does closely with Ps. cxxxvii. 7, Ezek. xxxv., points to the period of the exile. The prophecy consists chiefly of this denunciation, but ends with a prospect of Messianic deliverance and triumph.

JONAH.

All that we know of Jonah is derived from the book that bears his name, and from the statement in 2 Kings xiv. 25, which shows that he, at least, was a prophet that arose out of Galilee (see John vii. 52). By the reference in Kings we may place him early in the reign of Jeroboam II., 824-783 B.C.; he was probably one of the earliest of the Minor Prophets. The book contains an account of the mission of Jonah to Nineveh—afterwards the bitter foe of Israel, by whom Samaria was to be destroyed and Judah attacked under Hezekiah—his voyage and miraculous preservation, his preaching of repentance in Nineveh, and the lesson taught him by the incident of the gourd. Some have thought that the story of Jonah is to be regarded as an allegory or parable. The principal argument against this view is the reference to it by our Lord (Matt. xii. 40, xvi. 4, &c.). The book seems intended to teach a two-fold lesson, (1) the power of repentance, (2) a tolerant and generous spirit towards non-Israelitish peoples.

MICAH.

Micah was contemporary with, though younger than Isaiah, as may be seen by the date given (chap. i. 1). His name is a shorter form of Micaiah (1 Kings xvii.), and is given in full in Jer. xvi. 18. He seems to allude to the significance of his own name, i.e. "Who is like unto the Lord" (chap. vii. 18). Like the rest of the earlier prophets, he denounces judgment first against Samaria and then against Jerusalem. After the judgment will come a restoration and the reign of the Messiah, who shall arise out of Bethlehem. Micah insists strongly upon the moral requirements of the covenant (vi. 6-8), upon the pacific character of the Messiah's kingdom (iv. 3, 4), and upon the mercy of God in forgiving sin (vii. 18). The passage, chap. iv. 1-3 has either been copied in Isa. li. 2-4, or has been taken up by both prophets from an older writer. In chap. vi. 4, 5, there is a striking reference to the history of Balaam, as recorded in Num. xxi.-xxiv. Micah begins his prophecy with the words uttered by his great namesake, Micaiah, 150 years before (comp. chap. i. 2 with 1 Kings xvii. 28), and recurs to them more than once: viz. as chaps. iii. 1, 9, vi. 1. His prophecy ends with a clear reference to the promises in Genesis, shewing that they had for centuries been the hope of Israel. Micah is referred to in Matt. ii. 6; x. 35, 36; Mark xiii. 12; Luke xli. 63; John vii. 42.

NAHUM.

Nahum is called the Elkahite, but whether from a town named Elkah in Galilee (comp. Capernaum—the village of Nahum), or from an Elkah near Mosul, is not known. Neither is his date certain. Chap. i. 4 is appropriate to an inhabitant of Palestine (comp. i. 15). The only clue to the date is in the allusion to the destruction of No-Amon, i.e. Egyptian Thebes, in chap. iii. 8; this probably occurred in the conquest of Egypt by Esarhaddon, so that Nahum would be a contemporary of Manasseh. The main object of the prophecy is to threaten the vengeance of Jehovah against Nineveh. Nineveh was destroyed 607 B.C.

HABAKKUK.

The fall of Nineveh was succeeded by the domination of Babylon under Nebuchadnezzar, and it was against this power that Habakkuk prophesied, predicting its fall, which took place in 539 B.C. Nothing whatever is known of his personal history. It is probable that he prophesied towards the end of the reign of Josiah, or at the beginning of that of Jehoiaikim. This short book has two parts, consisting (1) of a dialogue which the prophet holds with God, chap. i. 1-17; and (2) of a prayer or hymn, which he writes for use in the Temple worship. So much at least is generally inferred from iii. 19, though the extreme obscurity of the language (reminiscent of Arabian poetry) renders it most improbable that it was intelligible to the people. In the former is found the famous maxim of St. Paul, "The just shall live by faith," or, as Habakkuk himself expresses it, "The righteous shall live by (or in) his faithfulness" (his trustworthiness in all the relations of life), while in the latter the prophet reviews the past history of his nation, and derives from it lessons of confidence and strength in God, notwithstanding any calamities that may befall the nation or himself.

ZEPHANIAH.

Zephaniah carries back his genealogy to one Hiskiah in the fourth generation, who is thought by some to have been the king Hezekiah. He prophesied in the reign of Josiah, probably between the 17th and 18th year, i.e. about the time that Jeremiah's mission began, but before the destruction of Nineveh, 607 A.C. (chap. ii. 13). This prophet has no definite prediction of the Messiah, but he foresees the time when the Gentiles shall serve the Lord with one consent (chap. iii. 9, 10), and the extinction of idolatry (chap. i. 4, &c.). His prophecies are directed against Judah and Jerusalem, the judgment that shall light upon whom should pass first over Philistia, Moab, Ammon, Ethiopia, and Nineveh, i.e. Assyria; but he concludes with the promise of brighter times for the daughter of Zion.

HAGGAI.

Haggai was the 1st of the prophets after the Captivity, and contemporary with Zechariah and Zerubbabel. His prophecy, short as it is, is of the greatest importance, and should be read (like Zech. i.-viii.) in close connexion with the history of the times. The several dates of his prophetic messages are accurately fixed, even to the day on which they were delivered. His mission lasted from the 1st day of the 6th month to the 24th day of the 9th month of the year 520 A.C., or the second year of Darius Hystaspes. In this brief space he was the bearer of 4 distinct messages from God to the governor and the people who were engaged in rebuilding the Temple (chaps. i. 1; ii. 1, 10, 20). The work was begun in the second year of Cyrus, 538 A.C.—was then, for some years, abandoned in despair (Isa. iv. and v.)—but resumed at the exhortations of Haggai and Zechariah, and completed in the sixth year of Darius, 516 A.C. (Esra vi. 14, 15). Haggai foretold the future greatness of the second Temple in spite of its apparent inferiority to the first (ii. 3-9).

ZECHARIAH.

Zechariah began his mission about two months later than Haggai, and the last date found in his book is in chap. vii. 1, the 4th year of Darius, so that his prophetic activity lasted for about two years. The decay of prophecy is very visible in the undated part of the book, and his emphatic reference to "the former prophets" (i. 4-6; vii. 7, 12) shows the writer's consciousness of the growing decline of the prophetic position and influence. The book consists of—(1) a preface (chap. i. 1-6), followed about three months afterwards by a succession of visions, chaps. i. 7-vi. 15; (2) a series of prophecies without visions, chaps. vii., viii.; (3) prophecies introduced as "the burden of the word of the Lord in the land of Judah," chaps. ix.-xi.; (4) prophecies introduced as "the burden of the word of the Lord for Israel," chaps. xii.-xiv. It has long been a matter of question whether the last 6 chapters of Zechariah belong to him. Some think that chaps. ix., x., xi. belong to an earlier period, because of the frequent mention of Ephraim as though he was still a people (comp. Isa. vii. 8); and that chaps. xii., xiii., xiv. were written, at all events, after the death of Josiah (see chap. xii. 11), but whether before or after the Captivity is uncertain. It is remarkable that these chapters, though addressed to Israel (chap. xii. 1), are chiefly occupied with Judah and Jerusalem. Chaps. ix.-xi. have been ascribed by some critics to Zechariah the son of Jebochiah mentioned in Isa. viii. 2. The peaceful character of the Messianic reign is strikingly brought out in chap. ix. 9, 10; chaps. xi. 12, xii. 10, xiii. 7 are also typically applied in the New Testament.

MALACHI.

Malachi, evidently the last of the prophets, from the correspondence of his subject matter with that of Jer. xiii., is thought to have been contemporary with Nehemiah. His style is poetic, like that of the other post-captivity prophets, and has one singular characteristic which reminds of the later Rabbis and of the Christian Rabbi—St. Paul, viz. the use of dialogues as a means of instruction. The Temple Service was in existence, chap. i. 10, iii. 1, 10. The nation had a political chief (chap. i. 8), bearing the same title that Nehemiah bore, Neh. xii. 26. Some believe the name Malachi to be not a proper name, but a pseudonym—"My (i.e. Jehovah's) Messenger or Angel." The subject of his prophecy is the judgment which shall be wrought by the Messenger of the covenant, the second Elijah, forerunner of the Messiah. Malachi is quoted in St. Matt. i. 2, ix. 11, 12, Luke i. 17. Rom. ix. 13.

The New Testament.

The New Testament, or Covenant, derives its name from Luke xiii. 20 (comp. 1 Cor. xi. 25; Heb. ix. 15-22; in other passages the reading is doubtful), where our Lord speaks of Himself as concluding a "new covenant" (A. V. testament) by His death. The more common figure in the Gospels is that of the "kingdom of heaven" (St. Matthew), or "kingdom of God" (St. Mark and St. Luke), which He came to found: the theocratic kingdom of the Old Testament becomes the Messianic kingdom of the New. The New Testament contains at once the history and conditions of this covenant or kingdom. It is, however, differently composed from the Old Testament. It does indeed begin with a group of histories (the Gospels and Acts), but its doctrinal teaching is conveyed no longer by prophecies or psalms, but by a series of letters from the leaders of the Church addressed to a number of different Christian communities. This is a natural consequence of the fact that Christianity ceased to be confined to a single territory and people, and became a missionary religion with outposts scattered throughout the world. The instruction put on paper for the use of these outlying communities has become the permanent law of Christians. Of the whole body of Epistles thus collected, thirteen are by the hand of a single writer, the Apostle St. Paul; one, though anonymous, has been attributed to him, probably without sufficient reason (Hebrews). The remaining seven are classed together as the Catholic or General Epistles. They are so called because the longest and most important of them were addressed, not like the majority of St. Paul's Epistles to a particular Church or individual, but to a number of churches. The larger Epistles all being of this character, were distinguished from St. Paul's by the name Catholic or General; and the seven smaller Epistles of St. John came to be classed with them, though the name was not strictly applicable to them. In later times the name "Catholic," applied to a writing, was almost equivalent to "canonical." The New Testament closes with a work which is only partially paralleled in the Old Testament, though it has several more complete counterparts among the Apocryphal writings—an "Apocalypse," or description under symbolic forms of the final triumph of the Messianic kingdom.

But in order to understand the organic growth of the New Testament literature, it is necessary to look upon it in another light. Christianity sprang out of Judaism. It fulfilled the hopes raised by the Old Testament, but it fulfilled them in a way that no Israelite expected, and gave to them at the same time an entirely new development. Hence it was not surprising that the Jews as a body refused to embrace Christianity, and that those who did embrace it were some time before they could reconcile themselves to all its principles save one—namely, that Christ came as the Jewish Messiah, but His work on earth was utterly different from what it was expected that the Messiah's work would be. Even the Apostles themselves were overwhelmed by its seemingly dissimilar close. Only the startling miracle of the Resurrection awoke them to a sense of its true significance, and that The Gospels.

The Gospels of St. Matthew, St. Mark, and St. Luke are frequently classed together as the "Synoptic Gospels," from a Greek word meaning capable of being seen at once, or of being arranged in parallel columns. This name is given to them from the amount of common matter found in all three. Some think that this large common element in them represents the oral teaching of the Apostles during the time that they lived together in Palestine. Others believe that this oral teaching had been already committed to writing by St. Mark at the time when the other two Gospels were written, and that St. Mark's Gospel lay before the other two Evangelists. These two appear to be the most probable of many theories of the relation of the first three Gospels to each other. The first two Gospels were probably written before, and the third not very long after, the destruction of Jerusalem. The fourth Gospel was thought at a very early date to be intended as supplementary to the other three, and this would certainly seem to have been one of the objects (though hardly perhaps the main object) present to the mind of the writer. It was the latest written of the four. Recent discoveries and investigations have made it certain that all four Gospels were current before the middle of the second century. Indeed, at a date little later than this, a harmony of them appears to have been published under the name of "Diatessaron," or "Four-fold Gospel," by Tatian, a disciple of Justin Martyr. About this time the Gospels seem to have been translated into Latin, soon afterwards into Syriac, and then into the Egyptian dialects. By the end of the century they occupy a position very similar to that which we now describe as "Canonical." But the strongest evidence for the truth of the Gospel narrative is to be found in the Gospels themselves. It is impossible to separate the miracles from the non-miraculous portions, even if it were possible to explain Christianity without miracles. The narrative taken as it stands forms a consistent and coherent whole, and explains the facts so as nothing else can explain them.

It has been usual to assign to the four Evangelists the symbolic figures described in Rev. iv. 7. Of the different modes of distributing these the best is perhaps that of St. Augustine, who assigns to St. Matthew the Lion, as representing the royal dignity of Christ; to St. Mark the Man, as contrasting most carefully His human nature; to St. Luke the Ox, as the sacrificial victim; to St. John the soaring Eagle, which pierces the clouds and gazed directly upon the sun. The more common order gives to St. Mark the Lion, and to St. Matthew the Man.

ST. MATTHEW.

Papias, bishop of Hierapolis, who lived in the early part of the 2nd century, relates that "Matthew composed the oracles in the Hebrew (i.e. the later Hebrew, or Aramaic) tongue, and every one interpreted them as he was able." Valuable as this statement is, both on account of its date and from the fact that Papias seems to have got his information from persons who had been in contact with St. Matthew himself, there are several points in it which are still matter of much obscurity. It has been proved that the word translated "oracles" may refer to the whole Gospel as we now have it, including both discourse and narrative; but there are still some who think that Papias is speaking of a collection of discourses only, which at an early date became united with a body of narratives resembling, if not identical with, our present Gospel of St. Mark. Irenaeus, the celebrated bishop of Lyons, who wrote about 180 A.D., also says that the Gospel was originally written in Hebrew, and adds that it was written "while Peter and Paul were preaching at Rome and founding (i.e. organising) the Church." This would be about 64-67 A.D. The earliest witnesses concur in stating that Hebrew, or Aramaic, was the original language of the Gospel; but, if so, it must have been very soon translated into Greek. After the taking of Jerusalem in A.D. 70, the number of Hebrew-speaking Christians bore a small proportion to those who spoke Greek. Hence the Greek form of the Gospel survived, while the Hebrew form fell out of use. It is a further question of much intricacy, what was the relation of St. Matthew's original Hebrew Gospel to a so-called "Gospel according to the Hebrews" which was current in the 2nd century, and of which fragments have come down to us. These fragments, in their present shape, cannot be, though they may perhaps be based upon, the original Gospel of St. Matthew.

Of St. Matthew himself little is known. His call is described in Matt. ix. 9; from which it would appear that he had been a collector of customs at Capernaum. The call of Levi the son of Alphaeus is described in very similar terms, and at a corresponding place in the narrative, by St. Mark and St. Luke (Mark i. 13, &c.; Luke v. 27, &c.); so that the inference lies near at hand, that, like St. Jude and St. Paul, St. Matthew also bore two names, the second, "Matthew" ("Gift of God"), being assumed after his conversion. He appears to have remained at Jerusalem until the general dispersion of the Church there on the outbreak of the Jewish war; and, according to Eusebius, it was just at this time, when about to "go forth to other nations," that he wrote his Gospel, and left it as a legacy to his fellow countrymen whom he was leaving. The date thus assigned to it would tally well with that already given by Irenaeus. As to the scene of his labours there is no trustworthy tradition, but there is sufficient authority for believing that he died a natural death. St. Matthew wrote for Jewish Christians, and belonged to the number himself. Accordingly we find him laying especial stress on the fulfilment of prophecy by Jesus as the Messiah, the Son of David, and Founder of a New Kingdom, the Kingdom of Heaven. He quotes largely from the Hebrew text of the Old Testament. It is the manner of St. Matthew to group together large collections of discourse, e.g. the Sermon on the Mount (chaps. v., vi., vii.), the discourse on the mission of the Twelve (chap. x.), the group of parables (chap. xiii.), the denunciation of the Pharisees (chap. xxiii.), and the eschatological discourses (chaps. xxiv., xxv.). The narrative does not seem to follow any strict chronological order; in the latter portion of the Gospel it adheres closely to the order in St. Mark.

- VII. The Crucified Messiah risen (xxviii.).

[N.B.—It is impossible in these short limits to give a complete analysis of the whole Gospel. All that has been attempted above has been to bring out a few of the more salient points in their relation to the leading themes and characteristics of the Gospel. The main outline of the arrangement of subject matter in the first three Gospels appears to be the same.]

Peculiar to St. Matthew are the following:—Miracles—the cure of two blind men, and the stater in the fish's mouth. Parables—the tares, the treasure, the pearl, the dragnet, the unmerciful servant, the labourers in the vineyard, the two sons, the marriage feast, and the talents. Portions of discourse, especially in the Sermon on the Mount, and in chapters xxiii. and xxv., also the blessing pronounced on St. Peter and the last commission to the disciples. Narrative—chaps. i. and ii., St. Peter walking upon the water, the temple-tax, and incidents connected with the betrayal, crucifixion, and resurrection.

ST. MARK.

It is probable that St. Mark, the author of the second Gospel, is the same as the John Mark mentioned in Acts xii., xv., and as the Mark who appears at a later date as the companion of St. Peter and St. Paul. If so he was the cousin of Barnabas (see Col. iv. 10, corrected).

early journey, but in the following chapters, especially in chapters 1-13, this is after landing in Pamphylia (Acts xiii. 13). This is the cause of a dispute between St. Paul and St. Barnabas, and led to their separation, Barnabas siding with his kinsman. St. Mark, however, is found again in company of St. Paul at the time of his first Roman imprisonment. At the same place (if 1 Peter was written from Rome) he subsequently joined St. Peter, and it is a universal tradition that the materials for the Gospel were drawn from St. Peter's public teaching. After the martyrdom of the two great Apostles, he is said to have gone to Alexandria.

Papies, the writer quoted above, is the first to give direct testimony to St. Mark's Gospel. He says that Mark having become the interpreter (i.e. secretary) of Peter wrote down accurately, though not in order, the things that were said or done by Christ. Here, too, a statement respecting the "order" of the narrative is obscure; for the order of St. Mark's Gospel is in agreement with that of the other two Synoptics—in the rarer part especially with St. Luke, in the latter part specially with St. Matthew. But it is probable that one of these Gospels follows, as St. John did, an order that is strictly chronological. The remainder of Papies' statement agrees with all the oldest authorities.

It is probable that St. Mark's Gospel was written much about the same time, or but very little later, than St. Matthew's. It was written for Gentile Christians, as appears from the care with which Aramaic expressions are explained (v. 41; vii. 11, 34), and not improbably in the West, in view of the Christians of Rome (comp. v. 21 with Rom. xvi. 13). St. Mark relates few details; minuteness of detail is a characteristic of his Gospel, and he brings out at once the Divine power of the Son of God (in his full account of the details of miracles), and the complete humanity (as evidenced by his gestures, &c.) of the Son of Man. From this point of view we may describe the contents of his Gospel as a story of—

The Works and Words of the God-Man:—

- (i.) at the Jordan (i. 1-13);
- (ii.) in and near Capernaum (i. 14-iv. 34);
- (iii.) on both sides the Sea of Galilee (iv. 35-vii. 23);
- (iv.) on the northern circuit (vii. 24-31);
- (v.) at the Sea of Galilee again (vii. 32-viii. 26);
- (vi.) in the north, near Caesarea Philippi (viii. 27-ix. 29);

[The Transfiguration.]

- (vii.) on the Last Journey to Jerusalem (ix. 30-x. 53);

- (viii.) at Jerusalem and Bethany (xi. 1-xv. 8).

[The last week, the Passion, and Resurrection.]

Within this geographical outline, St. Mark, like the other Evangelists, describes the gradual course of Our Lord's public ministry, its happy and tranquil beginning, the gathering storms of opposition, the clearly marked end, and its tragic and solemn realisation. It is to be observed, that the last section of the Gospel (ix. 29-31) is wanting in the two oldest MSS., and is clearly a very early addition by another hand. St. Mark's Gospel, while presenting in its fullest form the story common to the first three Gospels, has little that is peculiar to itself. The following sections are, however, not found elsewhere:—The parable of the seed sown secretly (iv. 26-29), the healing of the deaf and dumb man at Bethsaida (viii. 22-26), the young fugitive (x. 21, 23); and to this list should be added some details (ix. 9-21).

ST. LUKE.

Luke is referred to by name as the author of the third Gospel by Irenaeus and the remarkable fragment called the Muratorian Canon. His was the one Gospel used by Eusebius of Caesarea about 140 A.D. There can be little doubt that St. Luke is the "beloved physician" mentioned in Col. iv. 14. Indications of special medical knowledge have been found both in the third Gospel and in the Acts. A tradition, about which there is more doubt, would make him a native of Antioch, and another, which is quite late, and untrustworthy, describes him as a painter as well as a physician. He appears to have accompanied St. Paul on his second missionary journey from Troas to Philippi, on his third from Philippi to Rome, and on the voyage from Caesarea to Rome, and also still—or again—in St. Paul's company when he wrote the Epistles to the Colossians, to Philemon, and to Timothy. He expressly distinguishes himself (i. 2) as those who were "eyewitnesses and ministers of the word." From this we should infer that St. Luke sometimes made use of Aramaic documents. He seems also to have had special information in matters relating to the court of Herod Antipas (see vii. 3; xiii. 8-12; xxiv. 10). It is natural that, from the close connection between the Evangelist and St. Paul, the influence of the Apostle should be traced upon his Gospel. Thus some of the ancient Fathers supposed that when St. Paul spoke "my Gospel" (as in Rom. ii. 16) he meant that accorded to St. Luke. This is not tenable; and yet there is a real and clearly marked resemblance between the writings of St. Luke and St. Paul. A slight, but not unimportant instance of this is seen in the fact that the word "justify" (which plays such an important part in the Epistles of St. Paul) occurs five times in St. Luke, and not at all in St. Mark or St. John. To the same effect would be the many instances in which stress is laid on forgiveness in answer to faith alone, especially on the part of those who were regarded as outcast and degraded (e.g., vi. 30-50; 1-32; xviii. 9-14; xix. 1-10; xxi. 39-43; compare Rom. iv. 5; 1 Cor. xv. 9, 10, &c.). Again St. Luke, more than either St. Matthew or St. Mark, points forward to another great principle of St. Paul's teaching—the universality of the Gospel as no longer the privilege of single nation, but thrown open to all mankind. Thus traces the genealogy of our Lord, not to Abraham, but to Adam; he records carefully allusions to ministrations of the law in the Old Testament (iv. 26, 27); he collects sayings which reflect credit upon Samaritans (x. 33-37; xvi. 11-19); and besides other detached sayings of similar tenor (e.g., ii. 32; xv. 31-32), he alone of all the Evangelists mentions the mission of the Seventy, who certainly typify the 70 nations into which the Jews spread the world to be divided. In one place, at least, the resemblance between St. Luke and St. Paul becomes verbal—in the parallel accounts of the institution of the Lord's Supper (Luke xx. 19, 20; 1 Cor. xi. 23-25); while, however, there is some doubt as to the exact text of St. Luke's narrative. As to the date at which the Gospel was written, it may be inferred from the language Irenaeus that it came after St. Mark's and the deaths of St. Peter and St. Paul. This would place it somewhat after A.D. 65. St. Mark's Gospel is probably shortly before, the date of Jerusalem; and in this view the best modern authorities seem to agree. There is, however, another tradition to the effect that the Gospels "containing the genealogy were written first." From the fact that St. Matthew and St. Luke have in common a certain amount of material discourses, which is not found in St. Mark, it has been thought that St. Luke made use of the original collection of discourses to which Papies has supposed allude. But here again we enter upon the field of rather doubtful conjecture, which has obtained more foothold in Germany (though among sound and sober scholars than it has in England. In addition to the characteristics mentioned above, it may be noted that St. Luke's Gospel approaches most nearly as a composition to the apocryphal histories; it alone opens with a formal preface; alone connects the sacred narrative with general secular chronology; and of all the Gospels, if not of all the writings in the New Testament, it is written (with the exception of special portions spoken of above) in the purest Greek style. The contents of the Gospel may be described as the Life upon earth of the Saviour Mankind, including—

I. Preparation, Nativity, and Childhood of the Saviour (i.-ii.).

II. Inauguration of His Ministry (iii.).

III. Ministry in Galilee (iv. 1-ix. 50). [Following the main, with some additions and omissions, to same outline as St. Mark.]

IV. The Last Journey to Jerusalem, with samples of the Saviour's teaching (ix. 51-xviii. 43).

V. The Work of Salvation completed by Passion, Death, Resurrection, and Ascension (xix.-xxiv.).

The most marked peculiarities of St. Luke are the following: Miracles—the miraculous draught of fishes, the widow's son at Nain, the infirm woman (with curvatura of the spine), the dropsical man, the ten lepers, Malchus the servant of the high priest, the good Samaritan, the importunate friend, the rich fool, the barren fig-tree, the lost piece of silver, the prodigal son, the unjust steward, the rich man and Lazarus, the unjust judge, the Pharisee and the publican. Narratives—the whole of chaps. i., ii., as a great part of the long section ix. 51-xviii. 14, the weeping over Jerusalem, the sending of Jesus to Hieru-the daughters of Jerusalem. "Father, forgive them" (which, though no doubt true, is of questionable genuineness as a part of the original Gospel, the penitent thief rather "robber" or "brigand"), the walk to Emmaus, the Ascension.

ST. JOHN.

The Gospel of St. John is one of those books acknowledged universally by the ancient Church, but disputed in modern times, the evidence for which has been made stronger and clearer by recent researches. It may now be said to be certain that the Gospel was used by Justin Martyr, and that it was combined in a Harmony with the other three by his disciple Tatian in the middle of the 2nd century. Along with this there are numerous internal indications which show, in gradually narrowing circles, that the author of the Gospel was (1) a Jew, (2) a Jew of Palestine, (3) an eyewitness of the events, (4) an Apostle, and (5), though nowhere directly named, as tradition affirms, St. John. John was the son of Zebedee and Salome, and probably the younger brother of James. His family were well-to-do fishermen on the sea of Galilee. His father had "hired servants" (Mark i. 20); his mother was among those who ministered to our Lord of their substance (comp. Luke viii. 3; Mark xv. 40, 41); and he himself was "known to the high priest" (John xviii. 15). His mother would seem to have been the sister of Mary, the mother of our Lord (John xix. 25). St. John was a disciple of the Baptist before he joined Christ (John i. 37-40). He received his final and public call on the sea of Galilee (Mark i. 20). The earlier connexion explains the fact that St. John records (chaps. ii.-v.) events before the beginning of the Galilean ministry, which are not related in the other Gospels. St. John was the disciple "whom Jesus loved", and as such was admitted to a peculiar closeness of intimacy with our Lord (Mark v. 37; Matt. xvii. 1; xvi. 32; John xix. 27). The mother of our Lord was committed to his charge; and after the Ascension he remained in Jerusalem as one of the "pillars" of the Church there (Acts ii. viii. 14-25; Gal. ii. 9). On the final dispersion of the Apostles (A.D. 65 or 66) he went to Ephesus, where it is probable that he took a leading part in the permanent organization of the Church, and died at an advanced old age, not before 98 A.D., the last of the Apostles. The date of the Gospel is, upon the most probable view, towards the end of the Apostle's life, about 85-90 A.D. (See note on the The Revelation below). The Apostle's object in writing is clearly expressed in xii. 30, 31: "These [signs] are written that ye may believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God; and that believing ye may have life in His name." He thus at once shows that Jesus is the Jewish Messiah, to whom the previous history of the Chosen People pointed, and also the Son of God, the Incarnate Word through whom God reveals Himself to all mankind. Incidentally the further purpose is served of counteracting the heretical teaching which began to gain ground towards the end of the first century, and of supplementing the narratives of the older Gospels. Both these objects were attributed to the Evangelist at an early date, and both appear along with the main object of the Gospel when we come to consider its plan. This may be said to be as follows:—

- I. Prologue. The Incarnate Word, at once very God, in opposition to Ebionite heresy, which took a low view of Christ's Divinity, and Very Man ("made flesh"), in opposition to Docetic heresy, which explained away His humanity (i. 1-18).
- II. Public Manifestation of the Word (i. 18-xii. 50).
 - a. The Witness (1) of the Baptist (i. 19-34), (2) of the first disciples (i. 35-51), (3) of various works and signs, in Jerusalem and Judea (ii. 1-ii. 38), in Samaria (iv. 1-45), in Galilee (iv. 45-66), in Jerusalem again (v. 1-47).
 - b. Belief and unbelief, or the Witness received and rejected, (1) after the feeding of the 5,000 (vi. 50-71), (2) at the Feast of Tabernacles (vii. 5, 30-32, 40-43; viii. 30, 31, 45, 51), and at the Feast of Dedication (ix. 31-41; x. 19-21, 39-42), (3) after the raising of Lazarus (xi. 45-57), (4) mixed opinions and final verdict upon the public Ministry (xii. 1-50).
- III. The Last Discourses, or Manifestation of the Word to the Inner circles of the Disciples.
 - (1) The love of Christ and of his disciples (xiii.-xv.)
 - (2) The promise of the Comforter (xvi.)
 - (3) The priestly prayer (xvii.)
- IV. Manifestation of the Word consummated in Death and Resurrection (xviii.-xix.).
 - (1) Betrayal and double trial (xviii. 1-xix. 16).

- (2) Crucifixion and burial (xix. 17-42)
- (3) Resurrection, three times attested (xx.)
- V. Epilogue or Appendix.

From the above sketch it will be seen what large portions, especially of the Judean Ministry, St. John adds to the previous narratives. He is also careful in bringing out notes of time, such as the three passovers (ii. 13; vi. 4; xiii. 1), and other feasts which our Lord attended (v. 1; vii. 2; x. 20). In common with the other three Evangelists he has the feeding of the 5,000, the triumphal entry into Jerusalem, many points in the history of the Passion, and the appearance to the Eleven; in common with St. Matthew and St. Mark he has the account of the walking upon the water after the raising of the dead. Note also such minute points of contact as John vi. 7 = Mark vi. 37, "two hundred pennyworth of bread"; John x. 5 = Mark xiv. 6, "three hundred pence"; St. John has no parables, but in chaps. x. and xv. the Good Shepherd and the Vine he has a form of discourse approaching that of parable, but perhaps more accurately described as "allegory." The institution of neither of the two sacraments is related, but the deeper significance of both is alluded to in the discourses iii. 3-4, vi. 22-26.

THE ACTS.

The Acts of the Apostles is the natural link between the Gospels, which record our Lord's life, and the Epistles which show the result of that life. The clear evidence for the use and canonical acceptance of this book dates from the latter half of the 2nd century. It bears, however, strong internal marks of genuineness. That it was written by the same author as the third Gospel has been elaborately demonstrated, and is now unquestioned. It appears also that it was written by an actual companion of St. Paul, for in chap. xvi. 10-12, and in chap. xx. 5 to the end of the book, the narrative is couched in the first person, "We sought to go.... waiting for us at Troas," &c. The only other possible theory, that a Journal kept by one of St. Paul's companions has been worked into the narrative, will not bear examination. But of all the companions of St. Paul, St. Luke is the one who best satisfies the conditions of the problem; and he is named as the author of the book by an unwavering tradition. Sources of the Book.—The close relation of St. Luke to St. Paul naturally gave him access to excellent materials, especially in that part of the history in which St. Paul was concerned. In the earlier part of the Acts he seems to have made use of documents more Helvetic in their character. Thus, as in the Gospel, he seems to have been specially well informed on the history of Herods (see chap. xii. 11, xiii. 1, xiv. 12, &c.). The design of the writer is to describe the spread of the Gospel "in Jerusalem, and in all Judaea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth" (chap. i. 8). This outline is filled up by a history in two main divisions. In the first the scene is laid chiefly in Jerusalem, the work is amongst Jews, and the leading actor is St. Peter. In the second the Gospel is carried among the Gentiles, to Asia Minor, Greece, and Rome; and the leading agent in these missionary labours is St. Paul.

For the relation of the narrative of the Acts to the development of doctrine in the Church, and to the composition of the several books, see the Introduction; see also Historical Epitome. When and where the book of the Acts was written must be matter of mere conjecture. We only know that it must have been written after St. Luke's Gospel. It is addressed, like the Gospel, to one "Theophilus," of whom nothing is known except that he was a man of rank.

St. Paul's Epistles.

Enough will have been said above of the function which these Epistles play in the economy of the New Testament, of their polemical object, and of their chronological succession. It only remains to present them in a convenient grouping, and to point out the character of their external attestation. Chronologically St. Paul's Epistles fall into four groups; the first consisting of 1 and 2 Thessalonians, both written on the 2nd journey, in 52, 53, A.D.; the second or great group consisting of four Epistles, 1 and 2 Corinthians, Galatians, and Romans, written upon the 3rd journey, in 57, 58, A.D.; the third, called "the Epistles of the Imprisonment," including Philippians, Ephesians, Colossians, and Philemon, written from Rome in A.D. 61, 63; and the fourth, or "Pastoral Epistles," written probably after the first release, in 65-67. The subjects of the Epistles correspond to a considerable extent with this grouping:—1 and 2 Thessalonians treat most prominently of the Lord's Second Coming; the great group of justification by faith and the method of salvation; the Epistles of the Imprisonment of the doctrine of the Person of Christ; and the Pastoral Epistles, as their name implies, of the Pastoral office. But along with this 2 Corinthians, Galatians, Philippians, and 2 Timothy also contain much personal matter, either drawn from the Apostle by controversy or imparted to those to whom he knew it would be welcome; and besides the Pastoral Epistles, 1 Corinthians is also full of valuable instructions relating to Church order and discipline. The theory or doctrine of the Church, as distinguished from practice, forms an important ingredient in the Epistle to the Ephesians. In technical language the Epistles may be classified thus:—

SOCKETOLOGICAL.	CHRISTOLOGICAL.	ESCHATOLOGICAL.	ECCLIASTICAL.	PERSONAL.
Romans. Galatians.	Philippians. Ephesians. Colossians.	1 Thessalonians. 2 Thessalonians. 1 Corinthians xv.	[Ephesians]. 1 Corinthians. 1 Timothy. 2 Timothy. Titus.	1 Corinthians (part). 2 Corinthians. Galatians. Philippians. 2 Timothy.

All these Epistles of St. Paul are reckoned by Eusebius among the "acknowledged books." Of some (Romans, 1 Corinthians, Ephesians) there are clear traces, in the single uncanonical Christian writing which falls in the first century, the so-called 1st Epistle of Clement of Rome. Ten of them (i.e. all but the Pastoral Epistles) were used by the heretic Marcion, not later than 140 A.D., with a text which in several places can be shown to be already corrupt, and for the remaining three there is good evidence. The whole body of 13 Epistles is distinctly recognised in the Muratorian Fragment, about 170 A.D.

ROMANS.

The first in order and importance, though not in date, of St. Paul's Epistles is that to the Romans. No doubt has ever been cast upon its authorship. The time and place at which it was written are clearly indicated by allusions in the Epistle itself compared with the narrative of the Acts. St. Paul was on his way to Jerusalem, bearing with him contributions from the Churches of Macedonia and Achaia (Rom. xv. 25, 26; Acts xxiv. 17), and purposing, after he had been to Jerusalem, to make his way to Rome (Rom. i. 10; xv. 24; Acts xxi. 21). This tallies with the circumstances of the third missionary journey, and other allusions make it probable that the Epistle was written from Corinth, where the Apostle spent three months (Acts xx. 3). Phoebe, the deaconess of Cenchreae, the port of Corinth (Rom. xvi. 1), was in all probability the bearer of the Epistle. It was natural that the Apostle, having finished his work on the shores of the Aegean, should be anxious to visit the metropolis of the Roman Empire, where a Church had been already founded, though scarcely as yet organised. Among the multitudes who flocked to Rome from the East there would certainly be some Christians, and if we may judge from the greetings in chap. xvi. probably not a few converts of St. Paul himself. It is possible, too, that some of the Roman pilgrims who were present on the day of Pentecost may have carried back with them the seeds of the Gospel. In this way loose collections of Christians would gather together, some from the Jewish synagogues, others from the Gentile population. The latter seem to have been more numerous. And it may be inferred from the list of names in the last chapter that they belonged chiefly to the middle and lower classes—freedmen and slaves. That St. Paul should write to them in Greek rather than Latin is consistent with the fact that Greek was very largely spoken among these classes. Thus it would appear that the Church at Rome was a Greek-speaking Church until the middle of the 3rd century. The Apostle takes the opportunity of writing to a Church of so much importance, which he had not yet seen, to set forth the broad outlines of the Christian scheme in its application as once to Jew and Gentile, and in all its profound significance as a new dispensation designed by God to effect that in which previous systems had failed, viz. to open out a way to righteousness and salvation for men. The way is faith in Christ's death, and sanctification through His indwelling Spirit. Incidentally also the Apostle discusses the problem which could not but force itself upon a thinking Jew, the setting aside of the exclusive privileges of his countrymen, and their apparent rejection to make room for the Gentile.

Analysis of the Epistle.

I. Introduction (i. 1-15).

II. Doctrinal (i. 16-xi.).

(1) The main thesis, "Righteousness by Faith" (i. 16, 17). Its necessity proved (a), by an appeal to fact, the utter moral corruption both of Gentiles (i. 18-32) and Jews (ii. 1-29); (b) by Scripture (iii. 9-20) (iii. 1-8, a digression taken up in chap. ix.).

(2) Repetition and expansion of the main thesis: Righteousness by faith made possible by the propitiatory death of Christ (iii. 24-26). Excludes all boasting (iii. 27-31). Abraham himself had it (iv. 1-25). Its blissful consequences (v. 1-11).

The first and the second Adam (v. 12-21).

(3) Progressive righteousness through union with Christ (vi. 1-14). The Christian's release (vi. 15-vii. 6), and conflict (vii. 7-25). Life in the Spirit (viii. 1-17). Creation's yearning and the Christian's hope (viii. 18-30).

(4) Israel's rejection (ix. 1-xi. 36). Its justice (ix. 1-23). Its cause (x. 1-21). Consolatory reflections on the prospect of Final Restoration (xi. 1-36).

III. Practical and Hortatory (xii. 1-xv. 13).

The Christian's duties (xii. 1-21). Church and State (xiii. 1-7). The Law of Love (xiii. 8-14). Toleration (xiv. 1-xv. 3). Unity of Jew and Gentile (xv. 4-13).

IV. Personal (xv. 14-xvi. 16).

Final Warning and Doxology (xvi. 17-27).

From the number of salutations to persons in some way or other connected with Asia Minor, some have thought that the last chapter has been misplaced, and that it belonged originally to a letter addressed to Ephesus; but there is no sufficient ground for this assumption in the text, and Rome was a meeting-place for men of all nationalities. It is interesting to remember that the Epistle to the Romans exercised a commanding influence on the genius of St. Augustine and of Luther, and that it, with the Epistle to Galatians, more than any other book, supplied the groundwork of the theology of the Reformation.

CORINTHIANS.

The two Epistles to the Corinthians are also of absolutely undoubted genuineness. In the case of the first Epistle this fact derives an especial importance from the —19). Corinth, a famous city of Greece, near the Isthmus which connects the Peloponnesus (Morea) with the Continent, and possessed of a port on either side, Cenchreae on the east, and Lechaum on the west, had been sacked and burnt by Mummius B.C. 146, but rebuilt by Julius Caesar A.C. 44. Thanks to the natural advantages of its position, standing as it did on a double highway from east to west and from north to south, it soon recovered its former splendour, and in St. Paul's time had been thriving for nearly 100 years. The population (about 400,000) was heterogeneously composed, partly of the descendants of the Roman veterans of Caesar's colony, partly of commercial immigrants from the shores of the Mediterranean, to whom much of the proverbial licentiousness of the place would seem to have been due, and partly of native Greeks. These last would seem to have succeeded in impressing their old national characteristics of intellectual restlessness, vanity, and disunion upon their neighbours, as these qualities were conspicuous in the Church as described in the Epistle. The Church at Corinth had been founded by St. Paul himself during his 18 months' stay in Greece (Acts xviii.), in the years 63, 64, A.D. He had been succeeded by Apollos, and Apollos apparently by some Judaizing teachers, through whose influence the Church had been split up into sections, calling themselves by different names. At the same time moral and practical disorders were spreading rapidly in the Church. To check these, and at the same time to reply to certain enquiries which had been made in a letter from the Corinthian Church, St. Paul wrote his first Epistle from Ephesus in the Spring of A.D. 57, and in the interval between Acts xix. 22 and 23.

Besides its bearing on such important topics as the character of the Gospel preaching, the Lord's Supper, Christian Love or Charity, and the Resurrection, the First Epistle presents a graphic picture of the internal condition of a Gentile Church in the early stages of its existence.

It would appear from incidental allusions in the two Epistles that St. Paul had written another Epistle, now lost, before the first of those that have come down to us [see I Cor. v. 9, Revised Version, where the reference can hardly be to any part of the extant Epistle]; and that he also paid an unrecorded visit to Corinth some time during his three years' stay at Ephesus (see 2 Cor. xii. 14; xiii. 1, &c.). St. Paul left Ephesus about Pentecost A.D. 57, in much anxiety of mind as to the reception of the letter which he had just written. He journeyed slowly by the long land route through Troas and Macedonia, until his suspense was at last relieved by his meeting with Titus, whom he had sent before to Corinth, at Philippi. In his joy at the good news which Titus brought, and to counteract the machinations of his Judaizing detractors, he now wrote the Second Epistle in the autumn of the same year, A.D. 57.

2 Corinthians reveals to us more probably than any other Epistle of the inner mind and life of the Apostle, and that in passages of the most splendid and glowing eloquence.

GALATIANS.

The close resemblance between Galatians and Romans makes it probable that the two Epistles were written nearly at the same time. In that case, the Galatians would fall in the winter of 57, 58, A.D., when the Apostle was on his way through Macedonia into Greece. We think, however, that it was written early in St. Paul's stay at Ephesus, recorded in Acts xix. The Galatians were Gauls by origin, derived from those who pillaged Delphi in the 3rd century B.C., and crossed from thence into Asia Minor. Like the Gauls of Europe, they were readily susceptible of good impressions, but easily vacillating; and they had caught from their Phrygian neighbours a tendency to sensuous rites and charms. The Galatian churches were founded by St. Paul in his second missionary journey (A.D. 51), when he was detained among them by illness (Gal. iv. 3, Revised Version). He had paid them a second visit when he again set out from Antioch in A.D. 54. On this occasion he found it necessary to administer a rather sharp warning, which gave offence (iv. 16), and after his departure he had to make great strides, persuading the Galatians to adopt circumcision and other Jewish practices with a view to better their own religious position. This drew from the Apostle a letter in which he boldly vindicated his own Apostolic authority and reaffirmed the doctrine of justification by faith and of spiritual religion against the imposition of the Mosaic Law and a religion of externals.

 - (4) His conduct in the controversy with Peter at Antioch (ii. 11—14): the subject of which controversy was the suppression of the Law by Christians (ii. 15—21).
- III. Dogmatic Apologia: Inferiority of Judaism to Legal Christianity, to the Doctrine of Faith (i. 1—vi. 31).
 - (1) The Galatians bewitched into retrogression by a spiritual system to a carnal system (ii. 1—10) against the witness of Abraham himself (ii. 2—4) that faith alone can save (iii. 10—14).
 - (2) The promise made to Faith is unaffected by the Law (iii. 15—18), of which the true freedom is disciplinary (iii. 19—20) and tutelary (iv. 1—5) and its ritualism in itself mean and vain (iv. 8—11).
 - (3) Past zeal of the Galatians contrasted with their present coldness (iv. 12—20).
 - (4) Allegory of Isaac and Ishmael (iv. 21—31).
- IV. Hortatory Application of the foregoing (vi. 1—10).
 - (1) Christian liberty excludes Judaism (v. 1—6).
 - (2) Liberty not licence, but love (v. 13—15): the love of the flesh and of the Spirit (v. 16—25).
 - (3) The duty of sympathy (vi. 1—5) and brotherly love (vi. 6—10).
- V. Autograph Conclusion, directed against the Judaizers (vi. 11—18).

The autobiographical portion records from within events which in Acts xi. 29, 30 and xv. 1—35 are seen from without, and, as might be expected, throws a new and striking light upon them. In the doctrinal part may be traced the scattered thoughts which are gathered together in a more systematic form in the Epistle to the Romans.

EPHESIANS.

The words of address, "to the saints which are at Ephesus," are omitted in the two oldest MSS., and some other authorities. From this, coupled with absence of the usual salutations, which would be the more remarkable in a Church to which the Apostle was so well known, many have inferred that the letter was originally addressed not to a single church but to a group of churches, and that it afterwards took its name from the chief of these—Ephesus. St. Paul's first visit to Ephesus is recorded in Acts xviii. 19–21. It was very short, and his work was carried on by Apollos (ver. 24–26) and by Aquila and Priscilla (ver. 27). After visiting Jerusalem and Asia Minor he returned thither (Acts xix. 1), and remained three years (Acts xx. 31). On his last visit to Jerusalem he sailed by Ephesus (Acts xxi. 17). Some time later he left Timothy in charge of the Church there (1 Tim. i. 3). The object of the Epistle is general, the only special circumstance alluded to being a mission of Tythicus (chap. vi. 21; comp. Col. iv. 7–9), and St. Paul's own imprisonment (probably) at Rome (Acts xxviii. 20). It was during this imprisonment, about A.D. 63 or 65, that the Epistle was written, along with the Colossians and Philemon. The main topic may be said to be the Doctrine of the Church in all its manifold variety summed up in Christ.

Analysis of the Epistle.

I. Prefatory Salutation (i. 1, 2).

II. Doctrinal: the Church of Christ.

- (1) Its foundation in Divine Election (i. 3–14).
- (2) Its privileges as partaking in the Christian scheme (i. 15–23).
- (3) Contrast between the present and past state of its members (ii. 1–13).
- (4) Gentile and Jew united in one Church through Christ (ii. 14–22), a mystery newly revealed (iii. 1–12).
- (5) Prayer and Doxology (iii. 13–21).

III. Practical and Hortatory.

- (1) Unity of the Church (iv. 1–6), in diversity of gifts (iv. 7–12) matured with Christ for its Head (iv. 13–16).
- (2) The Old and New Man (iv. 17–v. 21).
- (3) Relation of husband and wife, a type of Christ and the Church (v. 22, 23); other domestic relations (v. 1–9).
- (4) The Christian panoply (vi. 10–20).

IV. Personal Matter.

- (1) Tythicus's commission (vi. 21, 22).
- (2) Farewell (vi. 23, 24).

There is a close resemblance between the Epistle to the Ephesians and that to the Colossians, due apparently to the fact that they were both written and despatched at the same time. This resemblance extends not only to the ideas, but to the expression which in several places (e.g., Eph. i. 7–Col. i. 14; Eph. i. 10–Col. i. 20; Eph. iii. 9–Col. i. 25, 26) is repeated almost verbatim. But though the same ideas run through both Epistles, they are regarded from different points of view. In the Ephesians the Church is the primary object, and the thought passes upwards to Christ as the Head of the Church. In the Colossians Christ is the primary object, and the thought passes downwards to the Church as the body of Christ.

PHILIPPIANS.

Philippi, the scene of the famous battle (A.D. 42) which decided the fate of the Roman Republic, occupied a position of importance on the great military road which connected Rome with the East. St. Paul arrived here with Luke and Silas upon his second missionary journey, and after a short but eventful stay (Acts xvi. 12–40) left behind him the nucleus of a Church, which he visited again in going and returning from Corinth (Acts xv. 1–40). The Philippians were especially forward in contributing to his support (2 Cor. xi. 9; Phil. iv. 15, 16, 18). The Epistle was in any case written during the Roman imprisonment, A.D. 61–64, but opinions differ as to whether it was written in the earlier or the later portion of that imprisonment. The frequent similarity both in thought and expression to the Romans is an argument for placing the two Epistles as near to each other as possible; and at the same time the other group of Epistles (Ephesians, Colossians, and Philemon) seems to shew signs of a later origin. We shall, therefore, probably not be far wrong if we suppose that this Epistle was written about the autumn of A.D. 61. It is decidedly personal in its character, and reflects vividly the alternations of feeling in the Apostle's mind as he looks upon the circumstances of his own imprisonment or upon those of the Philippian Church. For himself he awaits tranquilly, either event—for "to live in Christ, and to die gain." For them he is grateful for their aims, and speaks warmly in their praise. The one drawback is a certain tendency to party-spirit in the households of Eudodia and Syntyche. The whole tone of the Epistle is buoyant and cheerful. It has been rightly observed that the keynote is given in the often-recurring word "Rejoice." In its structure it is broken and unsystematic, and it seems to have been originally intended to end at the beginning of chap. iii.

Analysis of the Epistle.

I. Introduction.

Opening salutation, thanksgiving, and prayer (i. 1–11).

II. Personal.

Account of his own circumstances, and of the progress of the Gospel at Rome (i. 12–26).

III. Hortatory and Doctrinal.

Exhortation to unity and humility (i. 27–ii. 4), based upon the humility of Christ (ii. 5–11); general exhortation (ii. 12–18).

IV. Personal.

Respecting his own intended movements and those of Timothy and Epaphroditus (ii. 19–30).

V. Hortatory, with Doctrinal Parenthesis.

Conclusion begun but interrupted by a double warning against (i) Judaic formalism (iii. 1–10) and (ii) Antinomian licence (iii. 17–21). Renewed exhortation (iv. 1–9).

VI. Personal.

Acknowledgment of aid received (iv. 10–19). Farewell (iv. 20–23).

Theologically the Epistle to the Philippians forms a connecting link between the great group of Epistles and the other Epistles of the imprisonment, as these again serve to connect it with the Pastoral Epistles.

COLOSSIANS.

The Epistle to the Colossians was written and sent at the same time as those to the Ephesians and Philemon, i.e., as some think, during the earlier, and as others think, during the later part of the imprisonment at Rome, either in 61 or 63 A.D. Colosse was situated, along with Laodicea and Hierapolis, in the fertile valley of the Lycus, a river which waters southern Phrygia. The Church there was apparently not founded by St. Paul (ii. 1), though he probably had some communication with it during the three years which he spent at Ephesus. It was in danger from Judaizing teachers (ii. 16), similar to those against whom the Philippians had been warned. The Judaism taught by them was, however, of a later and more speculative type than that which had been met with in Galatia; it was allied at once to the tenets of the Essenes (see Jewish Social), laying stress upon angel-worship and asceticism, and also to the speculations which, at a later date, were called Gnosticism. The Apostle meets these errors by taking his stand upon the doctrine of the Person of Christ. He shows how Christ is the one Mediator between God and Man, so excluding angel-worship; and that assimilation to Him is the one great source of sanctification, so excluding asceticism and ceremonialism.

Analysis of the Epistle.

I. Introduction.

Opening salutation, thanksgiving, and prayer (i. 1–13).

II. Doctrinal.

- (1) Christ, our Redeemer (i. 14), the Image of God (i. 15), is at once the Head of Creation (i. 16, 17) and of the Church (i. 18), in whom the whole Godhead dwells (i. 19).
- (2) To Him the Colossians owe their reconciliation (ii. 20–22), in which they should stand fast (ii. 23), a mystery of which St. Paul himself is an anxious and earnest minister (i. 24–ii. 6).

III. Polemical.

- (1) Hence the Colossians are warned to cling to Christ (ii. 6–10) and the spiritual circumcision (ii. 11, 12).
- (2) Ordinances He has done away (ii. 13, 14), and over angels He has triumphed (ii. 15).
- (3) Therefore the Colossians must not submit either to ceremonialism (ii. 16, 17) or angel-worship (ii. 18, 19).
- (4) They have died with Him to ordinances (ii. 20–23), and must rise with Him to a heavenly life (iii. 1–4).

IV. Hortatory.

- (1) All evil passions should be killed (iii. 5–11), and all the graces of the Spirit put on (iii. 12–17).
- (2) Domestic (iii. 18–iv. 1) and other duties cultivated (iv. 2–9).

V. Personal.

- (1) Fuller explanation to be given by Tychicus (iv. 7-9).
- (2) Salutations (iv. 10-15), a message (iv. 16, 17).
- Farewell (iv. 18).

The resemblance between this letter and the Ephesians has already been noticed. Tychicus, himself probably an Ephesian, was the bearer of both. An enigmatic reference in Col. iv. 17 to "the Epistle from Laodicea" is now thought by many to refer to our present Epistle to the Ephesians.

THESSALONIANS.

The two Epistles to the Thessalonians are the first in time of St. Paul's Epistles, and have much of the simplicity of character which might have been expected from this fact. St. Paul paid his first visit to Thessalonica (modern Saloniki), the capital of Macedonia, and a flourishing and important city, at the head of the Thermaic Gulf, where the great road to Italy first strikes the sea, after leaving Philippi in A.D. 61. The excitement which his preaching caused is described in Acts xvii. 1-9. In spite, however, of the tumultuous opposition of the Jews, which necessitated his hasty departure to Berea and then to Athens, he succeeded in founding a Church among the Gentile community. That Church inherited the persecutions from which the Apostle had himself suffered, and soon after his arrival at Corinth, while the impression of their zeal was still fresh upon him, in A.D. 63 he sent them a letter of encouragement and advice. The one doctrinal topic on which he touches is the Lord's Second Coming, the uncertain date and suddenness of which supplied a strong motive for watchfulness. Timothy and Silas are joined with St. Paul in the address of the Epistle.

Analysis of the First Epistle.

- I. Narrative and Personal (i. 1-iii. 13).
- (1) Grateful acknowledgment of the success of his preaching at Thessalonica (i. 2-10).
- (2) Reminder of the circumstances and character of that preaching (ii. 1-12).
- (3) Renewed thanks for the conversion of the Thessalonians, and their endurance under persecution (ii. 12-16).
- (4) The Apostle's anxiety for them, and despatch of Timothy (iii. 17-iv. 10).
- A prayer (iii. 11-13).
- II. Hortatory (iv. 1-v. 24).
- (1) Warning and Exhortations (iv. 1-12).
- (2) The Lord's Second Advent—
 - a. In this the dead also shall partake (v. 13-18).
 - b. It shall be sudden and unexpected (v. 1-3).
 - c. An argument for watchfulness (v. 4-11).
- (3) Concluding exhortations, prayer, and directions (v. 12-28).

The Second Epistle to the Thessalonians was written at no great distance of time from the First, while the Apostle was still at Corinth, and while Silas and Timothy were still with him. The occasion of the Epistle seems to have been three-fold. (1) The persecutions still continued, and St. Paul writes to sustain his converts' resolution. (2) It was necessary for him to correct certain mistaken inferences which had been drawn from what he had said about the Second Advent. (3) Hints are thrown out as if forged letters had been circulated as coming from him, or at least his authority claimed in some underhand and dishonest way (2 Thes. ii. 2; iii. 17).

Analysis of the Second Epistle.

- I. Opening Salutation (i. 1, 2).
- II. Correction on the Second Advent (i. 3-ii. 16).
- (1) Thanksgiving (i. 3, 4).
- (2) Encouragement to endure in view of the coming judgment (i. 6-10), and prayer (i. 11, 12).
- (3) The Advent not near (ii. 1, 2), for the Man of Sin (or rather perhaps "Lawlessness") must come first (ii. 3-5), and the Restraining Power be removed (ii. 6, 7), until the Lawless One is destroyed with his followers (ii. 8-12).
- (4) Further exhortation and prayer (ii. 13-17).
- III. Practical (iii. 1-16).
- (1) Prayer for himself and the Thessalonians (iii. 1-5).
- (2) Instructions as to the idle and disorderly (iii. 6-15), followed by prayer (iii. 16).
- (3) Autograph conclusion (iii. 17, 18).

In the passage relating to the Man of Sin it would seem that, as in all prophecy, the Apostle looked forward to the future in the light of the present. The Man of Sin would then be some culminating manifestation of influences antagonistic to the Gospel, such as he saw around him, at that time restrained by the law-shedding rule of the Roman Empire.

TIMOTHY AND TITUS.

The Epistles to Timothy and Titus, commonly known as the Pastoral Epistles, were classed by Eusebius (325 A.D.) among the "acknowledged books" of the New Testament, the only group of writers by whom they were rejected being the heretical Gnostics, Basilides, and Marcion in the 2nd century. The external evidence for them is good, and reaches back certainly to Polycarp in the early part of that century, and possibly further still to Clement of Rome. The genuineness of the Epistles has, however, been doubted, either wholly or in part, in modern times, on account of (1) the difficulty of fitting them into the historical framework of the Acts (e.g., none of the circumstances there described agree satisfactorily with the allusions in 2 Tim. iv. 9-21); (2) the advanced state of heretical teaching; and (3) the developed Church organization which the Epistles presuppose. All these difficulties, however, seem to be sufficiently met by the supposition (for which there is some independent evidence) that St. Paul was released from his first imprisonment in the early spring of A.D. 64, that he then went to Spain (Rom. xv. 28), that he afterwards returned to Asia Minor, that he then left Titus in charge of the Churches of Crete and Timothy at Ephesus, that he crossed over into Europe to winter at Nicopolis in Epirus, that he was there married and conveyed to Rome, where he finally suffered martyrdom near the spot which is still shown on the Ostian way. By placing the Epistles in this late period of the Apostle's life all the difficulties above mentioned seem to be adequately explained, for it is hardly possible that a group of writings can be later than this in which "bishop" and "presbyter" are still treated as convertible terms. That being so, the combined internal and external evidence for the genuineness of the Epistles must be taken as conclusive.

Timothy was the son of a Greek or Gentile father and a pious Jewish named Eunice. His home was at Lystra in Lycania, and he seems to have been converted by St. Paul on his first missionary journey and taken with him as a companion upon his second. From that time onwards he remained more or less closely attached to the person of the Apostle. He is joined with St. Paul in the greetings of no less than six Epistles (1 and 2 Thes. 3 Cor., Phil., Col., Philem.), which shows the place that he held among the fellow workers of the Apostle. The Epistles that go by his name were written to him while in charge of the Church at Ephesus as apostolic delegate. He was then brought in contact with heretical teachers, whose teachings appear to have resembled those which disturbed the peace of the Church at Colossae, having affinities on the one hand with the later Gnosticism (1 Tim. i. 4; iv. 7; vi. 20), and on the other hand with Judaism (1 Tim. i. 7; comp. Tit. i. 10-14). The "genealogies" or successive emanations from the primordial Being of the one, were combated with the legalism of the other. This false teaching Timothy is exhorted to put down to the best of his power, and he is at the same time to organize the Church carefully upon definite lines.

Analysis of the First Epistle to Timothy.

1. Salutation (i. 1, 2).
2. Timothy to reprove erroneous speculations (i. 12-17), by the same Gospel of which St. Paul himself is an unworthy minister (i. 12-17), and of which Timothy will be a faithful champion (i. 18-20).
3. Directions for public prayer (ii. 1-8), and for the appointment of women (ii. 9-15), for the appointment of bishops (=elders or presbyters, iii. 1-7), and of deacons (iii. 8-15).
- The Christian's Creed (iii. 14-16).
4. False asceticism (iv. 1-5).
- How Timothy is to conduct himself (iv. 6-15).
5. Widows (v. 1-16); elders (v. 17-19).
- Timothy as judge (v. 20-25).
6. Servants (vi. 1, 2); heresy and covetousness (vi. 3-10).
- Timothy's commission (vi. 11-10).
- The rich (vi. 17-19).
- Final charge (vi. 20, 21).

The Second Epistle to Timothy was the last of all St. Paul's Epistles, written in the short interval of suspense between his first trial and his final condemnation and execution. So far as Timothy was concerned, it may be said to take up the thread of the earlier Pastoral Epistles. St. Paul it breathes calm resignation and undimmed resolution in the face of death. The date was the A.D. 67 or 68.

Analysis of the Second Epistle to Timothy.

1. Salutation (i. 1, 2).
2. Timothy and his charge (i. 3-14).
3. Defection of Phylis and Hermogenes, and services of Onesiphorus (i. 15-18).
4. Various directions and admonitions (ii. 1-13). Timothy should avoid heresy, like that of Hymeneus and Philletus, and be careful of his own conduct (ii. 14-20).
5. The last times shall bring forth evil men (iii. 1-9), to whom Timothy presents a contrast, trained as he is on Holy Scripture (iii. 10-17). He must be firm in reproving (iv. 1-6). The Apostle's own course is run (iv. 6-8).
6. Personal messages and directions (iv. 9-18). Concluding salutations (iv. 19-22).

Titus was another of those personal companions who seem to have acted as a kind of secours-de-camp to the Apostle. He was a Gentile, which accounts for the fact that St. Paul (probably) refused to allow him to be circumcised (Gal. ii. 3), though he had this rite performed in the case of Timothy (Acts xvi. 3). He was sent confidentially at once as the bearer of 1 Corinthians, and to observe the effect of its contents. This mission he accomplished satisfactorily, and brought his report to St. Paul at Philippi (A. D. 47). He is next found in Crete, after an interval of some nine years, with a charge and in a position very similar to that of Timothy at Ephesus. Here St. Paul writes to him the third Pastoral Epistle.

Analysis of the Epistle to Titus.

1. Salutation (i. 1-4).
2. Qualifications of Elders (= bishops), (i. 5-9).
3. Bad character of the Cretans (i. 10-16).
4. Duty of various classes (ii. 1-10), in view of their Christian calling (ii. 11-15).
5. Other exhortations (iii. 1, 2), based upon the change wrought in them by Christ (iii. 3-7), which is very different from heretical fables (iii. 8-11).
6. Personal messages and salutations (iv. 12-15).

PHILEMON.

This beautiful little Epistle is a sort of appendage to the Colossians, and was sent at the same time with that Epistle to Philemon, a member of the Colossian Church. The bearer was Onesimus, a former slave of Philemon's, who had robbed his master and escaped to Rome. Here he met and was converted by St. Paul. And the Apostle took advantage of Tychicus's journey to send Onesimus with him, with a commendatory letter begging Philemon to receive him back again as a fellow Christian. This brief Epistle has three divisions. (i) Thanksgiving for Philemon's faith and zeal (vs. 1-7); (ii) St. Paul's request on behalf of Onesimus (vs. 8-21), and also for himself (v. 22); (iii) Salutations (vs. 23-25).

No more touching picture could possibly be given of the way in which Christianity affected the private life of the ancients, and especially the institution of slavery.

HEBREWS.

As to the authorship of the Epistle to the Hebrews opinions have varied in ancient and modern times, owing to its apparent difference from the undoubted Pauline Epistles. The usual internal evidence, e.g. a superscription and personal allusions and names (ex. chap. xiii. 23) is wanting. The external evidence, though clear as to the existence of the epistle at the end of the 1st century, is uncertain as to its authorship. One tradition was that it was written by St. Barnabas; another, that it was written (in the latter Hebrew) by St. Paul, but freely translated by St. Luke or St. Clement of Rome. In modern times many have thought that the indications of authorship meet best in Apollon (see Acts xviii. 24, 25); some have suggested Silas. The great critic Origen (185-253 A.D.) sums up the controversy, as it stood in his day, by saying, "that the thoughts are the Apostle's, but the diction and composition that of some one who recorded from memory the Apostle's teaching.... Who it was who wrote the Epistle, God only knows certainly." In any case the Epistle was accepted as canonical by the Eastern Church from the earliest times, though it was apparently rejected in the West. From the end of the 4th century it became generally recognised. There is the same uncertainty as to the persons to whom it was addressed. The two most probable views seem to be that by "the Hebrews" we are to understand the Jewish Christians of Palestine, or the Jewish Christian section in the Church at Rome. Ephesus has been suggested as the place of writing, but this is mere conjecture. The time was apparently before the destruction of Jerusalem, as no allusion is made to that event, and after the liberation of Timothy (chap. xiii. 23), who was probably a prisoner in the persecution under Nero; this would bring its date between 67-70 A.D., or during the siege of Jerusalem, to which there may be reference in chap. xiii. 14. The Epistle was written to dissuade Jewish Christians, who were exposed to trials of various kinds, from falling back and renouncing the faith of Christ. The writer, therefore, labours to prove the superiority of the New Covenant to the Old, by shewing from the "Scriptures," i.e. the Jews' Bible, the superiority of Jesus to the high priests and the transitory and inefficient nature of the provisions of the Old Law.

Analysis of the Epistle.

- I. Christianity is superior to Judaism in the Person of its Founder: all previous revelations culminate in Christ (i. 1-3).

- (1) He is superior to the Angels (i. 4-14). Therefore the salvation which He offers must not be let slip (ii. 1-4).

This superiority is not affected by His temporary humiliation (ii. 5-18), which had for its object:—

- (a) to raise and deliver men from death (ii. 10-15);
- (b) to fit Himself to be a sympathetic High Priest (ii. 16-18).

- (2) He is superior also to ministers like Moses and Joshua.

He is a Son, Moses a servant (iii. 1-6).

[Let the unbelievers of the New Testament take warning by those of the Old (iii. 17-19).]

The promised "rest" is still open, and applies specially to Christians (iv. 1-10).

[Who should see that they do not lose it (iv. 11-13), for they have a great and sympathetic High Priest (iv. 14-16).]

- II. Christianity is superior to Judaism in its High Priesthood; for Christ is superior to Aaron and the Aaronic priesthood.

- (1) Like them, He has sympathy with His people (v. 4-7).

Like them, He is called to His office (v. 4-6) after the order of Melchizedek (v. 6-10).

[This is advanced doctrine (v. 11-14), to which the Hebrews should press on (vi. 1-3).]

For the lapse there is no recovery (vi. 4-8), but for those who lapse not the promises are sure (vi. 9-20).]

- (2) The order of Melchizedek is greater than that of Aaron.

For to Melchizedek Abraham himself paid tithes (vii. 1-10).

And the Aaronic priesthood is superseded by Melchizedek's successor (vii. 11-19).

Who is appointed by an oath, a perfect and eternal High Priest (vii. 20-28).

- III. Christianity is superior to Judaism in the nature of its ministrations.

- (1) Christ is High Priest of the true sanctuary (viii. 1-5), and of a new and better covenant (viii. 6-13).

- (2) The old Covenant in its tabernacle and ceremonies of atonement bore in itself the signs of transitoriness and imperfection (ix. 1-10).

- (3) Christ is the reality of which these things were the types (ix. 11-14).

He sealed the New Covenant with His death and bloodshedding (ix. 15-22).

In every point His atonement is higher (ix. 23-28).

- (4) The very repetition of the old sacrifices showed their want of efficacy (x. 1-8).

Christ's sacrifice was complete and final (x. 9-18).

- IV. Hortatory inferences.

- (1) The Hebrews should avail themselves of the access thus offered them (x. 19-25).

For the penalties of apostasy (x. 26-31) are equal to the rewards of endurance (x. 32-39).

- (2) Heroes of Faith (xi. 1-40).

Encouragement to endure (xii. 1-13), and avoid Esau's fate (xii. 14-17).

The warning voice of Sinai speaks still (xii. 18-29).

- (3) Various admonitions (xiii. 1-8).

The Christian altar privileged above the Jewish (xiii. 9-15).

Other admonitions, prayer, and salutations (xiii. 16-25).

The General Epistles.

The title "General" or "Catholic Epistles" has been already explained. It applies most strictly to St. James and 1 St. Peter, which are addressed, the first to all the Jewish Christians of the Dispersion, and the second to the Jewish Christians scattered throughout Asia Minor. It is probable that 1 St. John and St. Jude also had a general destination, and 2 St. Peter appears to have been intended for the same readers as his First Epistle. The two small Epistles of St. John then came to be annexed to this class of "General Epistles," though not strictly belonging to it.

The external history of this group of Epistles differs considerably from that of the Epistles of St. Paul. Two indeed, 1 St. Peter and 1 St. John, were certainly ranked with the authoritative Christian writings early in the 2nd century, and were treated in the earliest Canon as "acknowledged books." About the end of the 3rd century, and it was not until the 4th century that they became established in the Canon. Previously to this date the use and acceptance of the different books seems to have been local rather than general. It is curious, however, to observe how the evidence of one Church seems to supplement that of another. Thus the earliest Western Catalogue, the Muratorian Fragment (A.D. 370), appears to regard St. Jude and 2 and 3 St. John, while the Syrian Epistle seems to have included St. James, but not these Epistles. 2 St. Peter is found in neither list. The following Table will show the bearing of the evidence upon the Epistle:—

	WESTERN CHURCH.		EASTERN CHURCH.
	AFRICA.	ITALY.	EGYPT.	PALESTINE.	SYRIA.	ASIA MINOR.
2nd century.	1 St. Peter. 1 St. John. St. Jude.	1 St. Peter. 1 St. John. 2 & 3 St. John. St. Jude.	St. James. 1 St. Peter. 1 St. John. 2 St. John (probably). St. Jude (probably).	Literature of small extent.	St. James. 1 St. Peter. 1 St. John.	1 St. Peter. 1 St. John.
3rd century.			2 St. Peter? 2 & 3 St. John. St. Jude.		2 St. Peter?	1 St. Peter?

JAMES.

There can be little doubt that the author of this Epistle is not, as a few writers have supposed, the son of Zebedee who was put to death by Herod Agrippa I. in 44 A.D., but that he is rather the James whom we find presiding at the Conference at Jerusalem in Acts xv., and again as the most prominent figure in that Church in Acts xxi. Ecclesiastical tradition describes him as the first "bishop" of Jerusalem; and it adds that he was distinguished from the other Apostles by his strict ascetic life and by his scrupulous observance of the Jewish law and attendance at the Temple worship. In this way he obtained the respect of the unbelieving Jews as well as of Christians, though he fell a victim to the more bigoted party about 62, 63 A.D. St. Paul in Gal. i. 19 speaks of him by another designation as "James, the Lord's brother." This has given rise to much discussion. The ancient Church regarded St. James as either the son of Joseph and Mary, or the son of Joseph by a former marriage. Jerome, however, throws out a new hypothesis which has obtained wide acceptance, that the James who wrote this Epistle is identical with James "the Less" (or rather "the little," i.e., in stature) and James the son of Alphaeus (who in his turn is identified with the Clopas of John xix. 25), thus making him a cousin of Our Lord. This view does, indeed, fall in with many of the indications, but is at the same time exposed to many difficulties, more especially the statement of John vii. 5, that the brethren of Jesus still did not believe on Him at a date after the appointment of the Twelve Apostles, and that of Acts i. 14, where they are treated as forming a class by themselves apart from the Twelve. It is difficult to reconcile this with the supposition that St. James was one of those originally appointed by Our Lord. St. James was the acknowledged head of the Jewish party in the Church, though there is abundant evidence to show that he gave no countenance to its extreme section. It was not, however, unnatural that his teaching should be wrested into seeming opposition to the freer Gentile Christianity of St. Paul. For instance, he contends that Abraham was justified by works, where St. Paul contends—and from the very same quotation (Gen. xv. 6)—that he was justified by faith. But, in fact, St. James and St. Paul are attacking, not each other, but the Pharisaic orthodoxy whether of Jew or Christian. They attack it from different sides. St. James says, Show that your belief is real by its fruits. St. Paul says, See that you give to right action a deeper personal basis and motive. Faith is used in different senses; in the one case of mere head belief, in the other of heartfelt devotion. The passage

Gen. xv. 6 appears to have been a common text in discussion in the Rabbinical schools. The general moral of St. James's Epistle is that of an earnest practical morality, related to the teaching of St. Paul upon the wise maxims of the Book of Proverbs are related to his prophetic visions and profound insight of Israel. It may be observed that the word "wisdom" is one of the key-words of the Epistle (i. 5-8; iii. 13-18). A number of parallels have been pointed out between the teaching of "the Lord's brother" and that of the Brother on the Mount, but, with the exception of v. 12, there are very close. The Epistle is not systematic in its structure. It is rather a string of aptitudes, rather than a single connected argument. This will be seen from the following table of contents:

- Chap. i. 1. Salutation. 2-4. Discipline of trials. 5-8. Pray for wisdom, nothing doubting. 9-11. Riches soon fade. 12-18. Temptation passed from the heart's own evil desires, and not from God, who gives only what is good. 19-25. Religion consists in deeds.
- ii. 1-9. Respect of persons. 10-21. The evil law to be kept. 24-25. Faith without works dead. 26-27. As seen in the case of James and Rahab.
- iii. 1-12. The tongue. 13-18. Heavenly wisdom peaceable.
- iv. 1-2. Earthly passions are the cause of strife. 3-7. The friendship of the world and of the flesh. 8-10. Need of humility and righteousness. 11. Judge not. 13-17. Man progress and progress.
- v. 1-6. Ill-gotten wealth. 7-11. Faith. 12. Oaths. 13-15. Anointing of the sick. 16. Confession. 16-18. Prayer. 19, 20. Conclusion.

On the two passages v. 14, 15, and v. 16 have been based the custom of "extreme unction" and "anointing with oil," in both cases without due regard to the context. The anointing mentioned is restricted to a view to recovery, and not upon the point of death, and the confession enjoined is private and voluntary.

ST. PETER.

The 1st Epistle of St. Peter is apparently referred to in the 2nd (2 Pet. iii. 1). There are many traces of its early in the 2nd century in the group of writers known to what are called the Apostolic Fathers. It is indeed possessed stronger attestation. A strong case is made for this strong attestation, together with the internal evidence which vindicate St. Peter's authorship, the Epistle has an especial interest as showing the close relationship cation between the different branches of the Church, and the influence of St. Paul's teaching even upon one who is commonly regarded as his chief rival. The Epistle appears to have been written from "Babylon" (1. Pet. v. 13), and though this may of course be the well known city of that name, still there is much reason to think that the tradition which dates from Clement of Alexandria, and even Papias, is correct, viz., that "Babylon" here, as in Rev. xiv. 8, is a disguised name for Rome. It would seem that such devices were adopted by Christians after the Neronian persecution for purposes of concealment. In any case the Epistle was written after St. Paul's Epistle to the Colossians (comp. Col. iv. 10; 1 Pet. v. 13), and between the date of that Epistle (A.D. 63) and the death of St. Peter in A.D. 67 or 68. The mention of St. Mark and of Silvanus (who is probably the same as the Silas of Acts xv. xvi. xvii. xviii., and the Silvanus of 1 Thess. i. 1; 2 Thess. i. 1; 3 Cor. i. 19) supplies an external link of connexion between the work of the two Apostles, just as the contents of the Epistle connect their teaching. The Epistle was evidently written in a time of persecution, and consists chiefly of exhortations suited to such a season. These are, however, intermingled with statements of Christian doctrine, the Incarnation, Atonement, and doctrine of the New Birth being clearly set forth. Like the Epistle of St. James, this too is addressed to Jewish Christians of the Dispersion, but specially to those of Asia Minor.

Analysis of the First Epistle.

- Chap. i. 1, 2. Salutation. 3-12. The future glory of which Christians are assured makes their present sufferings a light thing, (13-26) therefore they should live in all holiness, counting the cost of their redemption, as regenerate men.
- .. ii. 1-10. They should realise the high calling which they have embraced and unbelievers reject. 11, 12. Their lives should give the lie to Gentile calumnies. 13-17. They should be loyal citizens. 18-25. Good and patient servants, following Christ's example.
- .. iii. 1-6. Chaste and modest as wives. 7. Considerate as husbands. 8-19. Clear in conscience under suffering as Christ was (who after death preached to spirits imprisoned in Hades). 20-22. Rescued by baptism, like Noah from the flood.
- .. iv. 1-6. No longer libertines like the Gentiles, but Christians prepared for Christ's judgment. 7-11. In view of this judgment they should be charitable, hospitable, liberal. (12-19) rejoicing in the privilege of suffering for Christ.
- .. v. 1-11. Various exhortations. 12-14. Salutations.

The 2nd Epistle of St. Peter was the last book to take its place definitely among the New Testament Scriptures. The evidence for it in the first three centuries is slight and scattered, and in no one region does it seem to have been thoroughly established. Leading writers like Origen and Eusebius speak of its genuineness as doubted. Jerome attributes these doubts to the difference in style from the 1st Epistle, which he is inclined to explain by the supposition that St. Peter made use of different "interpreters" (see on St. Mark). If the Epistle is genuine some such hypothesis would appear to be by no means improbable. The passage 3 Pet. ii. 1-19 presents so close a resemblance to Jude 3-16, that it seems impossible to avoid the conclusion that the one was copied from the other. This too would be a more natural procedure if St. Peter allowed his thoughts to be put into words by a secretary. The main subject of the Epistle is a warning against certain false teachers who should combine libertinism of life with scepticism as to Christ's Second Coming.

Analysis of the Second Epistle.

- Chap. i. 1, 2. Salutation. 3, 4. Exhortation to progress in knowledge and growth in Christian grace. (12-18) impressed upon the readers by one who had himself seen the Transfiguration (19-21) and confirmed by Prophecy.
- .. ii. 1-9. There shall come false teachers, whose fate shall be like that of the rebel angels, of the world (except Noah) at the Flood, of Sodom and Gomorrah. 10-21. Insolent, licentious, treacherous like Balaam, barren of good, corrupters and corrupt.
- .. iii. 1-4. Further warning against those who appeal to the unchanged condition of things, to cast doubt upon the Lord's Second Coming. (5-10) which nevertheless is certain. (11-14) and a strong motive to holiness of life, (15, 16) as Paul, in his Epistles, also teaches. 17, 18. Concluding exhortations.

[N.B.—The portions in italics are common to the Epistle of St. Jude.]

If we could only depend upon the genuineness of the Epistle, the passage which refers to St. Paul's writings would be of great importance as the earliest which attributes to them the authority of Scripture.

ST. JOHN.

The evidence for the genuineness and canonicity of this 1st Epistle is strong, and goes back to Papias and Polycarp, writers belonging to the next generation to the Apostles, one of whom at least had been brought into direct contact with the Apostles. All three Epistles are included in the earliest lists of the canonical books about 170 A.D. There can be little doubt that the Epistles were written near to and soon after the Gospel. Not only is there the most striking general resemblance of thought and phraseology (in the constant recurrence of such expressions as "word," "light," "darkness," "life," "world," "abide," "know,"); but there are a number of passages in which whole sentences present the closest parallelism. Hence the conclusion at which we have already arrived as to the Gospel, carries with it a similar conclusion as to the Epistles. Place, Ephesus; time, about 85-90 A.D. The 1st Epistle in fact forms a sort of "companion to the Gospel." Assuming the great truths, of which the Gospel is the historical embodiment, it enlarges upon them in such a way as to bring them home to the readers. The Epistle has a more directly controversial object than the Gospel. The heretic Cerinthus had begun to teach a doctrine which, with some variations, was continually repeated in the early Church, viz., that the man Jesus was distinct from the Divine Person which resided in Him, and that this Divine Person first entered into the human form at the baptism, and departed from it at the crucifixion. In opposition to this the aged Apostle asserts expressly that Jesus Christ (the Divine-human personality combined) "came" both by "water" and "blood," i.e. that it was present in and subsisted through both the baptism and the crucifixion. The Apostle warns his readers that the denial of the Father and the Son is the spirit of Anti-Christ. With a lofty serenity, suited to his position at the close of the Apostolic Age, he bids them, in view of the Second Coming of the Lord, "purify themselves even as He is pure;" and he insists especially on the duty of the Christian to make his practice conform to his belief, by fidelity to the new commandment—the Law of Love. The Apostle's frequent insistence upon this point is touchingly illustrated by the anecdote preserved by Jerome, viz., that in his extreme old age, when strength failed him for longer exhortations, he had himself brought into the Church, and kept repeating to those around, "Little children, love one another." The style of the Epistle differs much from the progressive argument and keen dialectic of St. Paul. The central truths are assumed rather than proved. The exposition seems to revolve round certain fixed points, with repetitions which are not however mere tautology, but in each case add some new feature. A calm untroubled insight into the loftiest Christian truths (1 John i. 5, 7; ii. 2, 8; iii. 1-3, 14; iv. 9-18; v. 4, 5), drawn from intense personal devotion to Christ, which can hold no fellowship with unchristian teaching, but towards the brethren breathes the gentlest brotherly love, is characteristic of these Epistles.

Analysis of the First Epistle.

- Chap. i. 1-4. Firm historical groundwork of the Gospel.
- .. i. 5-11. Walking in the light of fellowship with God and Christ brings forgiveness and freedom from sin, (12-17) while it separates from the world, (18-28) and from Anti-Christian doctrine.
- .. iii. 1-18. The sublime prospect set before the Christian pledges him to a life of righteousness and brotherly love.
- .. iii. 19-iv. 6. And to unshaken faith in Christ. 7-21. Of which faith love of the brethren is the practical expression.
- .. v. 1-4. Faith, obedience, and love to God and man are inseparable. 5-12. The threefold witness. 13-21. Christian confidence.

The 2nd and 3rd Epistles are undoubtedly by the same hand as the 1st, though the writer calls himself not Apostle, but Presbyter (A. V. "Elder"). The main question as regards the 2nd Epistle, on which the whole interpretation turns, is the nature of the address in v. 1, 13, name, "Kyria.") Or have we here a personification of two Churches? Both views are possible; and there is considerable weight both of argument and authority for each, with perhaps a slight preponderance in favour of the second. In any case the Second Epistle repeats the lesson of the First—maintain the truth and walk in love. The 3rd Epistle is written to one Gaius (the more correct form of the name frequently written Caius), who may be the Gaius of 1 Cor. i. 14, Rom. xvi. 23, but this is of course only conjecture. The Apostle expresses his pleasure and satisfaction at the Christian conduct of Gaius, who exercised in eminent degree the virtue upon which such stress was laid in Apostolic times, the rendering hospitality to Christians belonging to other Churches. Gaius is warned against the self-seeking of Diotrophes, an opponent of the Apostle, who also commends Demetrius, the bearer of the Epistle.

ST. JUDE.

The identity of St. Jude is bound up with that of St. James, as whose brother he describes himself in v. 1. The probability therefore is, according to the view taken above, that he was not one of the original Apostles, but that he was a member of that family group called in Acts i. 13, and elsewhere, "the brethren of the Lord," at the head of which stood St. James. In that case he was not a believer during Our Lord's lifetime, but he seems to have become one along with his elder brother. Of the time and place where his Epistle was written nothing is known. It seems however, on the whole, most probable that it preceded St. Peter, the writer of which Epistle borrowed from it freely. It is claimed by Eusebius among the "disputed books," though it was distinctly acknowledged by Clement of Alexandria, Tertullian, and Origen, and has a place in the Muratorian Canon. The object of the Epistle is to warn the readers (who are not more nearly defined) of false teachers, similar to those contemplated in St. Peter. From this indication we should suppose that it was addressed to the Jewish Christians of Asia Minor; and when we bear in mind the poverty of expression, as contrasted with thought, which seems to have characterized the older Galilean Apostles, it will not seem so strange if St. Peter's secretary, or even St. Peter himself, thought fit to avail himself of the language of an Epistle of which he possessed a copy. There was no stigma attaching to such borrowing in these primitive times.

Analysis of the Epistle.

Pa. 1; 2. Salutation. 3, 4. Warning against false teachers, (5–10) who in their incredulity and licentiousness shall meet with the fate of the unbelieving Israelites, of the rebel angels, and of Sodom and Gomorrah. How different Michael the archangel! 11. Their prototypes are Cain, Balaam, and Korah. 12–16. They are greedy, barren of good, doomed to destruction, as Enoch prophesied. 17, 18. All this the Apostles foretold; it is all the more reason why the readers should stand firm in the faith, (22, 23) treating the schismatics with tenderness proportioned to their guilt. 24, 25. Doxology.

[N.B.—The portions in italics are common to 2 St. Peter.]

THE REVELATION.

The book called The Revelation, or Apocalypse, is the most enigmatic in the whole of the New Testament Canon. This applies even to its external history and the question of its date and authorship. The onomatopoeia indeed of the book, though at first generally admitted (it was commented upon by Papias, and quoted directly by Justin Martyr before the middle of the 2nd century), afterwards, as it would seem, came to be doubted on account of the handle which it appeared to give to Millenarian opinions. Doubts lingered on for some time, especially in the Churches of Palestine, Syria, and Asia Minor. The Western Church had unhesitatingly received the Apocalypse as St. John's, and as canonical from the first. The evidence for St. John's authorship is remarkably clear and explicit. A single writer, Dionysius of Alexandria (248–265 A.D.), trained in the critical school of that city, called attention to the difference in style and phraseology between the Apocalypse and the Gospel and Epistles, and threw out the suggestion that the Apocalypse might have been written by another explanation, however, which seems to be sufficient, is that the Apocalypse was written by St. John soon after his arrival in Asia Minor from Palestine under the immediate stimulus of the excitement caused by the approaching destruction of Jerusalem, while the Gospel and Epistles were written in a ripe and calm old age, after some 20 years of residence in a Great City. It has been thought, too, that when the internal indications of date come to be examined, they point clearly to the reign of Galba, the successor of Nero, and to the year 69 A.D. (the "7 heads" of chaps. xiii., xvi.—the first seven Roman Emperors, the fifth in xvi. 16—18, and the "number of the beast" in xiii. 18—1860 or 1860 C.E.S.A.B.). But these indications, attractive as they may seem, come into direct conflict with the external testimony, which is quite clear, to the effect that the exile of St. John to Patmos took place in the 10th year of Domitian, A.D. 85. How then the difficulty is to be resolved is as yet uncertain; it will be belated, however, that they consist not so much in the absence of evidence as in the very abundance of it, and in the necessity of fitting a number of highly complex phenomena into a fixed scheme.

A like uncertainty rests upon the interpretation of the book. There are three schools: (1) the Preterists, who see in it a series of ideal visions conjured up in the mind of St. John by the movements attending the siege and destruction of Jerusalem; (2) the Futurists, who would throw the description forward and expect its fulfilment at the end of the world; (3) the Historicists, who hold that the fulfilment is being gradually accomplished in the course of human history. The extent of supposing that the Apostle has clothed his description of the Messianic triumph in forms borrowed from the events of his own time, and yet to believe that no "word that passeth forth" from the Lord shall return to Him void. The imagery of the Prophets, especially Ezekiel, enters largely into the book.

Analysis of the Book.

I. The Prologue (i. 1–iii.)

1. Prophetic announcement (i. 1–3) and address (i. 4–8).
2. Vision of the Son of Man (i. 9–20).

4. The Messianic Reign.
The New Creation and the New Jerusalem (xxi. 1–xxii. 5).

III. Epilogue of Warning (xxii. 6–21).

The description of the "new heaven and new earth" finally closes the volume which had begun with a new creation.

THE MIRACLES AND PARABLES OF JESUS.

MIRACLE, lit. miraculum, i.e. a wonder-causing event, a marvel. Of the six Greek words used in the New Testament to describe the supernatural works of Christ on earth, the three most usual are applied also to those wrought by His Apostles, viz. (1) teras, A. V. wonder (always); (2) semeion, A. V. sign, miracle (esp. in St. John, i.e. signa, A. V. power, miracle (esp. in Acts and Epistles), &c. (1) teras (i.e. 'wonder', 'portent', 'displays a marvellous effect, and is always accompanied by another of these words, esp. by semeion, to indicate the 'wonder' itself, the end and purpose of the wonder' (e.g. in A. V. 'wonders and signs', Acts 2:22). (2) semeion, i.e. 'sign', describes a miracle as ordained by God to be a mark whereby to identify the Messiah, an attestation of His power, an earnest of the blessings He brought, a specimen of God's methods for bringing these blessings home to men, as well as a type (or 'parable in action') of His spiritual gifts. (3) Dynamis, i.e. 'power' (so rendered in A. V. generally in plural, 'mighty works') describes a miracle as a 'new and higher force', or 'power' of the world to come (b. 6:5), entered upon and working in this world;—an 'outcoming of the greatness' (megalotes, A. V. 'greatness', to 1. 49, Acts 2:11) of God's power and glory inherent in Christ and lent to His witnesses and subse- quents. Miracles are also described as (4) edotois, A. V. 'glorious things', Lk. 13:17, &c., i.e. as manifestations of God's power, the Father and Son; (5) paradoxa (A. V. 'strange things'; cp. 'new thing', Num. 16:20), i.e. as supernatural manifestations, amazing (cp. Lk. 5:26); and as (6) thaumasia A. V. 'wonderful' (Mt. 21:15; cp. Mt. 9:33; &c.), as amazing occurrences unprecedented in human experience (cp. Mt. 9:33), and (like paradoxa) ascribable to God only (cp. Mt. 9:33).

PARABLE is the Greek word parabole, which means juxtaposition, and so a comparison of objects, to show a likeness or similitude between them. The Jewish method of teaching by parables was apparently adopted by Lord when the Jews had rejected His direct teaching (Mt. 13:13); but also out of compassion made account of the infirmities of the listeners (cp. 2 Cor. 8:12). Proposed as a spiritual riddle to call the spiritual perception to exercise, the Parable—either attracted, interested, provoked, enquiry, and thus sowed seed in the memory for self-development by Christ Himself or by the Holy Ghost (cp. John 14:26);—or left the self-righteous and self-condemned to spiritual blindness (John 9:39-41; 12:45). Thus the parable lifted the audience, and 'brought' the willing hearers and led them on; like the Shechinah (Ex. 14:20), it was light and guidance to God's people, but darkness and a hindrance to His opponents: Mark 4:10-13, 33, 34; cp. John 3:19; 7:17; &c. Christ's Parables illustrate the nature and principles of the Gospel Dispensation (the Myopia in the words of the 'Kingdom of Heaven'). They have been divided into 3 groups, according to the part of the Gospel in which they were delivered: viz.—

PROPHECIES RELATING TO OUR LORD JESUS CHRIST.

BY THE REV. T. WOODHOUSE, M.A.

I. EXPRESSLY DECLARED IN HOLY WRIT TO HAVE BEEN FULFILLED.

(A) AS TO HIS COMING, BIRTH, INFANCY, AND YOUTH.

That Messiah should be born in Bethlehem.

Mic. 5. 2: "Thou, Bethlehem Ephratah, ... out of thee shall he come forth." Mt. 2. 5, 6.

Of a virgin.

Isa. 7. 14: "Behold, a virgin shall conceive and bear a son. . . Immanuel." i.e. God with us: Mt. 1. 22, 23.

Taken for refuge into Egypt.

Hos. 11. 1: "I called my Son out of Egypt." Mt. 2. 15.

Massacre of the Innocents.

Jer. 31. 15: "A voice . . . in Ramah, lamentation. . . ; Rahel weeping for her children." Mt. 2. 17, 18.

A special herald, messenger, or forerunner (a 2nd Elijah) to immediately precede Messiah's coming.

(1) Isa. 40. 3: "The voice of him that crieth in the wilderness, Prepare ye . . . a highway for our God." Applied to John the Baptist by himself, John 1. 23; Mt. 3. 3; Mk. 1. 3; Lk. 3. 4.

(2) Mal. 3. 1: "I will send my messenger, and he shall prepare the way before me."

Applied to John the Baptist by St. Mark (1. 2), his father Zacharias (Lk. 1. 76), by our Lord (Lk. 7. 27).

(3) Mal. 4. 5, 6: "I will send you Elijah the prophet before the . . . day of the Lord. . ."

Applied to John the Baptist by Christ (Mt. 11. 14; add 17. 12; Mk. 9. 13), by Gabriel (Lk. 1. 17).

(B) AS TO HIS PERSONAL MINISTRY.

The Place, Galilee.

Isa. 9. 1: " . . . the land of Zebulun and the land of Naphtali. . . see (i.e. of Galilee) beyond Jordan, Galilee of the Gentiles." Mt. 4. 14, 15, 16.

His teaching.

(1) His character and subject matter.

Isa. 61. 1, 2: "The Spirit of the Lord God is upon me; because the Lord hath anointed me to preach good tidings." [Lk. 4. 16-21.

Applied by our Lord to Himself:

(2) Its manner.

Isa. 42. 1-8: "Behold my servant

. . . judgment to the Gentiles. He shall not cry . . . he shall bring forth judgment unto truth;" Mt. 12. 17-

(3) His method, Parables. [20.

(C) AS TO HIS REJECTION BY THE JEWS, AND THEIR SUBSEQUENT REJECTION BY GOD.

(a) His teaching rejected.

Isa. 6. 9, 10: " . . . Hear ye indeed but understand not: . . . make their ears heavy, and shut their eyes; lest they . . . be healed."

Applied (sometimes with a variation in the wording) by our Lord (Mt. 13. 14, 15; Mk. 4. 11, 12; Lk. 8. 10), by St. John (12. 39-41), and by St. Paul (Acts 28. 25-27; Rom. 11. 8).

(1) Isa. 53. 1: "Who hath believed our report? . . . revealed?"

Applied by St. John (12. 37, 38), and by St. Paul (Rom. 10. 16).

(2) Ps. 118. 22, 23: "The stone . . . builders rejected . . . headstone . . . corner."

Applied by Jesus to Himself (Mt. 21. 42; Mk. 12. 10, 11; Lk. 20. 17), and by St. Peter (Acts 4. 11).

(b) To the Jews a stumbling-stone.

Isa. 8. 14: "He shall be for a sanctuary, but for a stone of stumbling . . . to both the houses of Israel. . ."

Combined with Is. 28. 16: "Behold, I lay in . . . foundation a stone. . ."

Applied by St. Paul (Rom. 9. 33) and St. Peter (1 Pet. 2. 6, 7, 8.) [ed.

(c) Their terrible lip-service rejection.

Isa. 29. 13, 14: "Forasmuch as this people draw near me with their mouth, and with their lips do honour me, but have removed their heart far from me. . ."

Applied by our Lord Himself (Mt. 15. 7-9; Mk. 7. 6, 7), and by St. Paul (Acts 12. 41; 1 Cor. 1. 19).

(D) AS TO EVENTS AND CIRCUMSTANCES OF OUR LORD'S LAST DAYS.

(a) His triumphal entry into Jerusalem.

(d) Abandonment by His disciples.

Zech. 13. 7: "Smite the shepherd, and the sheep shall be scattered."

Applied by our Lord Himself; Mt. 26. 31; Mk. 14. 27.

(e) His treatment as a criminal.

Isa. 53. 12: "He was numbered with the transgressors;" Mk. 15. 28.

(f) The division of His garments by lot.

Ps. 22. 18: "They part my garments among them, and cast lots upon my vesture;" Mt. 27. 35; Jhn. 19. 23, 24.

(g) Sufferings on the Cross-Thirst.

Job. 30. 21: "In my thirst they gave me vinegar to drink;" Jhn. 19. 28-30.

(h) Wounds (hands, feet, and side).

Zec. 12. 10: "They shall look on me, whom they have pierced;" Jhn. 19. 37.

(i) His bones not broken.

Exod. 12. 46: "Neither shall ye break a bone thereof;" John 19. 36.

(k) His death procured by Jews and Gentiles combined.

Ps. 2. 1, 2: "Why do the heathen rage. . . against His Anointed;" Acts 4. 25-27.

(E) AS TO HIS RESURRECTION AND ASCENSION, EXALTATION AND HATHENMENT.

(a) Ps. 10. 8-10: "I have set the Lord always before me: because he will: neither will thou suffer thine Holy One to see corruption."

Applied by St. Peter (Acts 2. 25-31) and St. Paul (Acts 13. 35-37).

(b) Ps. 110. 1: "The Lord said. Sit thou. . . right hand. . . footstool."

Applied by St. Peter (Ac. 2. 32-36). See also our Lord's words in Mt. 22. 44, 45; Mk. 12. 35-37; Lk. 20. 41-43

IV. PROPHECIES RELATING TO THE ADMISSION OF THE GENTILES TO THE GOSPEL COVENANT.

1. The New Covenant foretold.

Jer. 31. 31; "Behold the days come, saith the Lord, that I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel and house of Judah."

Quoted in Heb. 8. 8, &c., and commented on.

2. The Gentiles included in the covenant.

(a) By Moses: Deut. 32. 43; "Rejoice, O ye nations, with his people."
Quoted and applied by St. Paul: Rom. 15. 10.

N.B.—The same word means "nations" and "Gentiles."

(b) By the Psalmist: Ps. 117. 1; "O praise the Lord, all ye nations: praise Him, all ye people."

Quoted and applied by St. Paul: Rom. 15. 11.

(c) By David: Ps. 18. 49; "Therefore will I give thanks unto thee, O Lord, among the heathen."

Quoted and applied by St. Paul: Rom. 15. 9.

(d) By Isaiah (11. 10): "...there shall be a root of Jesse.... to it shall the Gentiles seek."

Quoted by St. Paul: Rom. 15. 12.

N.B.—St. Paul's quotation agrees exactly with the Greek version, but not with A. V.

(e) By Hosea (1. 10): "In the place where it was said unto them, Ye are not my people, there it shall be said unto them, Ye are the sons of the living God." [Rom. 9. 25.]

Quoted and applied by St. Paul: By Hosea (2. 23): "I will have mercy upon her that had not obtained mercy; and I will say to them which were not my people, Thou art my people." Cp. Isa. 54. 1, & Gal. 4. 27.

Quoted and applied by St. Paul: Rom. 9. 25.

3. The Jews reluctant to admit the Gentiles.

Foretold by Moses: Deut. 32. 21; "I will move them to jealousy with those that are not a people: I will provoke them to anger with a foolish nation."

Quoted by St. Paul: Rom. 15. 12.

4. Jews and Gentiles equally invited.

By Joel 2. 32: "Whoever shall call on the name of the Lord"

Quoted and applied by St. Paul: Rom. 10. 13.

5. Universal diffusion of the Gospel.

Foretold by David: Ps. 19. 4; "...their words to the end of the world."

Quoted and applied by St. Paul: Rom. 10. 18.

N.B.—St. Paul's quotation agrees exactly with the Greek version, but not with A. V.

6. Christ the Light of the Gentiles.

Foretold by Isaiah (49. 6, & 60. 1).
Quoted by Symeon (Lk. 2. 32) and St. Paul (Acts 13. 47).

7. Universal worship paid to God.

Foretold by Isaiah (45. 23): "Unto me every knee shall bow..."
Quoted and applied by St. Paul: Rom. 14. 11. Referred to in Phil. 2. 10. Cp. Rev. 5. 13.

ANALYSIS OF THE SERMON ON THE MOUNT.

MATT. V.—Vs. 1, 2. Our Saviour's teaching and miracles having attracted the earnest attention of the multitudes, He takes the opportunity of great numbers being present to explain to them the nature of "The Kingdom of Heaven", of which He had just begun to preach (ch. iv. 17).

Vs. 3—9. The character of the members of the kingdom; their inner life: their blessedness and glory.

Vs. 10—13. Their treatment by the world; their outer life; their present happiness, because suffering for righteousness' sake; and their future reward.

Vs. 13—16. Their duty towards the world: as the salt, to preserve it, by their silent influence, from corruption; as the light, to show it, by their open example, the way to God and the manner in which He may be glorified.

Vs. 17—20. The object of the kingdom with respect to the past—not to destroy the work of God which had preceded, but to fulfil it, to perfect and accomplish its design, to supply its defects. The consequent duty of Christians to do and to teach the commandments of the moral law, both in the letter and the spirit.

Vs. 21—37. The rules of the kingdom, exemplified by the spirit of the Ten Commandments; the 6th, 7th, and 8th being successively taken as illustrations. The 6th, interpreted by the Founder of the kingdom, forbids not only murder, but causeless anger, hatred, and abusive language; and enjoins charitable feelings, acknowledgment of faults, and reconciliation with adversaries. The 7th forbids lustful thoughts as well as lustful actions; and enjoins modesty and purity, and the destruction, at any cost of personal suffering, of that which offends, or is a cause of sin; it also by implication teaches the binding character of the marriage vow. The 8th forbids not only profane or false swearing by God's Holy Name, but also by anything that is called by His Name, or governed by His providence: while its spirit further teaches men to regard all oaths as springing from evil, and enjoins them to be content under ordinary circumstances (see Matt. xxvi. 63, 64) with simple assent or denial.

Vs. 38—48. The rules of the kingdom further exemplified by the Founder's notes upon other commandments of the Law. The law of retaliation was grounded upon strict justice: in the new kingdom justice is not destroyed, nor is just punishment by lawful authority done away, but the motive in inflicting it is not to be revenge, or the desire to return evil for evil; while in their private capacity, the members of the kingdom are taught to be gentle and forbearing, ready to do good even to those who injure them, as their Heavenly Father sheds His bounties upon the evil as well as upon the good. The aim of the members should be not to be governed merely by law, but by a spirit of love, a spirit above the judgment of the world; to imitate the principles of God's actions, and to strive after His perfections.

CHAP. VI.—Vs. 1—21. Religious exercises, interpreted according to the rules of the new kingdom.

Vs. 1—4. Almsgiving, not for ostentation, to obtain glory from men, but secretly, to obtain the approval of God; not the amount, but the motive to be chiefly considered.

Vs. 5—15. Prayer, equally without ostentation, and in secret; not the length or the number of the prayers, but the prayerful spirit of primary importance; heart-service not lip-service. (See Outline Lesson on Lord's Prayer.)

Vs. 16—18. Fasting, as the former exercises, without ostentation, and in secret; the object being the discipline of self, the subduing of the flesh to the spirit.

Vs. 19—21. Each of these having been extensively abused, and employed solely to obtain praise from men, the Saviour is induced to give as a guide to His kingdom the rule of looking at all things as they refer to another world; and since all men must have some highest design, some dearest treasure, the rule of placing that treasure where it will not be lost, viz. in heaven, and the consequent fixing of the best desires of the heart there also.

Vs. 22, 23. It is of no use attempting to have two treasures, to fix the heart in heaven and earth, for none can serve two masters; God and the world are opposed, and their service is incompatible. Still we cannot help thinking about the world where God has placed us, and our sustenance therein; and so He teaches us to trust Him for this; to have our treasure in heaven and God for our Master; and casting aside all over-anxiety, to believe that He who cares for the fowls of the air and the lilies of the field, will care for us.

CHAP. VII.—Vs. 1—5. Mutual duties of the members of the kingdom. Lenient and charitable judgment of others, with severe and searching judgment of ourselves.

V. 6. At the same time some judgment of the characters of others is necessary, especially with teachers; inasmuch as, with regard to sacred and holy things, we must be very careful that they are not abused by being offered to and insulted by those who are unworthy.

Vs. 7—11. Our Lord here reverts to the subject of Prayer, and encourages us, by the example of earthly fathers, to ask boldly and trustingly of our Heavenly Father.

V. 12. And adds that we should treat others as by our prayers we show that we would have God treat us, viz. give to them good things, such as, were the circumstances reversed, we should receive as good at their hands.

Vs. 13, 14. The Sermon is drawing to a close: the final exhortations are general and important. To forsake the broad way, to keep steadily in the narrow way.

Vs. 15—20. To beware of those who teach otherwise than He Himself had taught; to judge of their teaching by the fruit it produces in their own lives, and in the conduct of those who act in accordance with their principles.

Vs. 21—23. To do God's will, and not merely to call upon Him: to keep the actions ever in harmony with the prayers; and still more, to judge our hearts by their motives, their desire to please God.

Vs. 24—27. The intended effect of the Sermon—to cause those who heard the Saviour's sayings to act upon them, and so to build their faith upon a rock which no storm can shake; upon that Rock, which is Christ Himself.

NOTES ON THE LORD'S PRAYER.

(Matt. vi. 9-13; compare Luke xi. 1-13.)

"After this manner".—Matt. vi. 9. "When ye pray".—Luke xi. 2.

(A) THE INVOCATION. (B) THE SIX PETITIONS. (C) THE DOXOLOGY.

(A) The Invocation, or calling upon, or mode of address.

(a) "Our". Members of Christ and of one another (Rom. xii. 5). One family. Intercessory prayer (1 Tim. ii. 1); active work for each other (Gal. vi. 2, 10). Kindly feelings (1 Pet. iii. 8). Even while praying in secret, much more in the family and congregation, realise the communion of saints.

(b) "Father". Children of God (Rom. viii. 16); Jesus our elder Brother; joint heirs with Christ. God's love, a Father's love; ours, that of children. His, wondrous (1 John iii. 1), undeserved (Rom. v. 8), rejoicing in forgiveness; ours, dutiful, instinctive, rejoicing in obedience, with a childlike confidence that our Father will give good things to them that ask Him (Matt. vii. 11).

(c) "Which art in heaven"; in the greatness of Thy majesty, but ever near that the contrite and humble may have constant communion with Thee (Isa. lviii. 15). Our Father's glory should temper our love with awe, and teach us to approach Him, though with boldness, yet with reverence and godly fear (Heb. xii. 28; Eccles. v. 2). We should strive to make heaven, where our Father is, our own true home, and even here live as citizens of heaven (Phil. iii. 20).

(B) The Six Petitions. The order should be noticed: first, prayer for the glory of God's holy name, &c., before a word is said of our own wants, temporal or spiritual. God's glory our first desire; our welfare only in subservience. Our Lord's own example (John viii. 56; xvii. 4).

(a) "Hallowed be Thy name". Hallow—make holy, sanctify. Name often signifies not only the person, but anything belonging to or called after him; thus the 3rd Commandment enjoins the honouring not only of God's holy name, but also of His Word. Similarly this petition asks, "May we and all persons esteem and treat as holy the name of God, and all things called by His name, as His Word, House, Day", &c.

(b) "Thy kingdom come". (1) The kingdom of Christ in the world; (2) of the Holy Spirit in our hearts; (3) of glory at the end of the world. We pray that (1) the knowledge of Christ may spread, (2) He may become by the Spirit more and more the king of our own hearts (holy and Christian lives), (3) He may soon come in the clouds of heaven and reign for ever (Rev. xxi. 20). We ought to be prepared for the coming we pray for, and therefore for our own death.

(c) "Thy will be done in earth, as it is in heaven", i.e., by the angels, and all the heavenly host. Constantly (Rev. iv. 8); cheerfully, zealously, with praise (Rev. v. 11); and ministry to others (Heb. i. 14). The chief discipline of man to learn to do and cheerfully to bear the will of God (Matt. xxvi. 39; Heb. v. 8); not only in the conduct, but in the heart; not only in what we do, but in what we believe, and think, and feel; every thought to be brought into obedience to the will of God.

(d) "Give us this day our daily bread". "Give", even daily bread to be sought as the gift of our Father; "this day", or "day by day", leaving to-morrow (Matt. vi. 34) in God's hands (the manna in the desert); a lesson of trust and continual prayer; "bread", "all things needful both for our souls and bodies"; "those things which are requisite and necessary as well for the body as the soul". This petition concerns chiefly the present.

(e) "Forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive them that trespass against us". "Forgive"—loose from guilt, and remit penalty. "Trespasses"—debts or sins. We owe God complete obedience; when we transgress, we contract a fresh debt, which cannot be paid, but only forgiven. "As", not in proportion as, or we should first be sorry, but like as (a comparison of kind, not degree); Parable of unmerciful servant. Only the forgiving will be forgiven (Pa. xviii. 25). On this point is our Lord's only comment (Matt. vi. 14, 15), thus enhancing its importance. This petition concerns chiefly the past.

(f) "Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil". "Tempt"—try, put to the test; God leads us into temptation (Matt. iv. 1) in order to try our faith (Gen. xlii. 1) and strengthen it by exercise (James i. 12). The devil tempts us in order to ruin us (1 Pet. v. 8); in this sense God tempts no man (James i. 12). We must not go willingly into temptation, or we cannot honestly use this petition, or expect God's help. Knowing our weakness, we pray not to be tempted, but still if God does see fit for us to be tried, then we pray Him to deliver us according to His promise (1 Cor. x. 13; 2 Pet. ii. 9); to "save and defend us in all dangers, ghostly and bodily", "to keep us from all sin and wickedness", from all evil, and from the evil one: "our ghostly enemy". This petition concerns chiefly the future.

(C) The Doxology, or ascription of praise. "For thine is the kingdom, the power, and the glory, for ever and ever. Amen". The Doxology is not found in St. Luke (comp. 1 Chron. xix. 11). Gives the grounds of our confidence in prayer, and our encouragement in praying, and at the same time is an ascription of praise. Our Father is our King: if we serve Him, He will act royally to us; His is the power, therefore He can help us; and it is to His glory when we pray to Him, therefore He will listen favourably and answer graciously. "Amen"—"so be it" (at the close of a prayer); "so it is" (after an assertion of a truth). [G. & G.]

PALESTINE, viz. the Land of Possession, as distinguished from the Land of Promise (Gen. xv. 18), was bounded on the W. by the Great Sea, i.e. the Mediterranean; on the N. by Lebanon, which separates it from Phœnicia; and on the E. by Mts. Hermon & Bashan, and the desert, to the R. Arnon. Thence, the S. boundary ran along the E. shore of the Dead Sea, and from its S. end across the wilderness of Zin past Kadesh-barnea, to the "River of Egypt," i.e. the Wady-el-Arish. It was named Palestine, or Syria-Palestina, from the Philistines, who occupied the rich maritime plain between Joppa & the Desert of Shur;—Judæa, from Judah, which after the captivity represented the Hebrew nation;—& the Holy Land, because there Christ was born, preached, & taught, confirming His "good news," i.e. the Gospel, by miracles; and laid down His life for mankind. It is about the size of Wales or Portugal, being less than 140 miles in length, and from 70–80 miles in breadth (including the smaller section E. of Jordan). It consists of a mountainous region (with few distinct ranges) which broadens & lowers southwards from Lebanon & Hermon, & is bisected by the extraordinary depression of the Jordan valley. The W. section is broken transversely by one plain (Esdrælon), & again lowers to form the 'South,' between Judah & the Wilderness.

The climate of Palestine is, during a great part of the year, very hot. The east winds are peculiarly dry, though they are sometimes tempestuous; and those which are westerly are attended with rain. The first rains, as they are called, generally fall about the beginning of November; and the latter rains in the month of April. See Calendar, and especially the Note on the Seasons.

Geology.—The surface rocks of Palestine—except a small volcanic section in the N.E. between Hermon and the R. Yarmuk, which extends W. across the L. of Tiberias to Tabor—are of a soft limestone containing many fossils, and remarkable for numberless caverns and excavated cisterns, and for fountains issuing as small brooks from the solid rock. In spite of the destruction of the forests, and diminution of cultivated and other vegetation, the water-supply yet justifies Moses' description (Deut. viii. 7). The whole country is seamed with perennial streams or winter torrents. See Table of Rivers and Lakes.

The JORDAN (i.e. Jarden or Yarden—"flowing down"), is unique in the depth of its channel, and its unparalleled meanderings and rapidity; in the desert character of its valley, and its extremes of climate. It forms a natural barrier between the E. highlands of Gilead and the Western hill countries of Canaan (Palestine's 2 parts), between which communication is maintained along the ravines formed by its tributary streams. It lies sunken within an older and ampler bed, and is over-arched by oleanders, acacias, thorns, and similar shrubbery; above the older bed, the cliffs of the plateaux, which the river divides, rise abruptly like two walls. The valley thus enclosed, concentrates the full radiance and reflection of an Eastern sun rarely mitigated by any cloud, though chilled at times by the icy N. winds off the snows of Lebanon and Hermon; it is parched by the S. wind from the deserts of the south, yet sheltered from the moist sea-breezes from the west that elsewhere so temper the climate of the Holy Land. Hence the Jordan valley possesses in its lowest depth (2–1 mile wide, and 50–100 ft. below the upper plain or terrace) a climate and vegetation bordering on the tropical. Above, between the jungle and the cliff, the more ancient bed out of which the present channel has been hollowed, is left like a sterile terrace on either side of the more recent and deeper channel; and has been gradually cut up into alternate current-belt and stony alluvial slopes by streams, which, often as it wide, have washed out for themselves beds nearly a mile in width; leaving in their irregular course quaint little hills to mark the former level of the "Upper Plain." The depression and consequent usefulness of Jordan for the most practical of purposes in the E., viz. irrigation of land suffering from an excess of sun-power, is recorded in its Arab name, Esh Sheria, "the watering place" and in Namaan's contemptuous remark (2 Kings i. 22) as the general sterility of the valley in its native state, "The Desert." The highest sources of Jordan are near Habbaya, 1,700 ft. above the sea-level (which is rather less below L. Huleh, i.e. W. of Merom); it then descends like a mill-race (682 ft. in 13 miles) into L. Tiberias (the W. of Tiberias; see Table of Lakes), through a pass over a narrow gap in the highlands. After leaving Tiberias it is as remarkable for its windings as for its fall. In 40 miles, as the crow flies, its actual course measures 120 miles, and its fall is 610 ft. (Kitchener, R.E.), the river being but a succession of rapids, practically unnavigable. It first passes through a plain averaging 3 miles in width, rising past the E. (4 miles below the Lake) the R. Yarmuk from Gadara and the plain of the Hauran. Two miles west the great road from Syria to Egypt, i.e. from Damascus via Gadara, Bethshan and Megiddo, crosses it by a bridge; and 8 miles further on, the river passes between Bethshan, now Beisân, a natural fortress commanding the valley of Jezreel, and Abelmeholah (the mother of S. dance) Elisha's home. Hence it traverses a long level plain 8–9 miles wide to Tell Sakni (? South of Tell viii. 5–17) where is a ford. It then passes between a gorge barely 1 m. wide, debouching upon the plain of Wady-Faria, which joins the Jordan from the W. just below the Wady Zerka (Jabbok) which enters from the E.; the two with their ravines and fords forming the central route between Gilead and Mt. Ephraim (Judah), which here crosses a plain 10 m. wide, bounded S. by the lofty peak of Kurn Surtabeh. This great landscape of the Jordan valley, projecting from the W., measures 20–21 miles, and stands sentinel at the head of a gulfed plain 2,000 ft. below. Across this final plain of Jordan, which like its continuation, the basin of the Dead Sea, averages 12 miles in width—Jordan receives several tributaries—notably (from the W.) the Wady Karmel, we pass to the heights of Bethel—and the Wady Kish (Jud. xvi. 1 ? Cherith), the pass to Jerusalem. Between these torrents lies the nearly desert site of the camp of Jericho. And here are the 2 famous southern fords. The wide, great yellowish plain, the Jordan—hardly ever above an accessible—has worn a deep channel traceable only from some neighbouring height by the green line of the canopy of its jungle "like a gigantic serpent" (Stanley), at length its cream-coloured waters issue from a barren whitish Delta, and penetrate far into the clear blue of the Salt Sea.

The Dead Sea was named in classical times the Lake Asphaltites or Lake of Asphalt, from the earthy substance of bitumen which yet rises occasionally to its surface, and like the natron of Mesopotamia, used to be employed for embalming the dead. Its bed being often 250 ft. below the sea-level, this depression is the deepest in any continent; and having no outlet, the water is an intense salt that nothing can live in it, and swimming is nearly impossible by its buoyancy. The driftwood that the Jordan is soon bleached & petrified. The lake is about 40 miles long, & 10–11 miles in extreme width. On the W., the river mountains of the Wilderness of Judah, on the E., the ravine-pursed wall of the plateau of Samaria, rise abruptly from it, while at the S. end (beyond a level plain) a line of cliffs close the basin; all barren alike. In the S.W. corner, the Jebel Uduim, an isolated range of rock salt, rises in fantastic pinnacles. The Lake was formerly supposed to cover the oasis of the 4 cities, Sodom, Gomorrah, Admah, & Zebolim (Bela or Zoar being spared), but this is unsupported by Biblical or scientific evidence. No sign of any such recent geological change is to be found. Some place these cities in the plain at the S. end; some (especially Grove) in the plain at the N. end of the Lake. (See Table of Lakes).

Jericho, or the city of palm trees, was an oasis in the final plain of Jordan, irrigated from the mountains of Judaea by aqueducts, &c. whose ruins are yet traceable, and by its famous springs now marked by the only vegetation that breaks the dreary expanse. Its nearly tropical climate and adequate water-supply made it a perfect garden (comp. Gen. xiii. 10), famous for its balsam and other products, whence a revenue resulted worthy of Cleopatra's acceptance from Mark Antony. Herod bought it from Cleopatra, and built a winter palace there (see Josh. vi.; 1 Kings xvi. 34; Luke xviii. 36-xix. 27).

The sea coast of Palestine is singularly deficient in ports, but small hollows with moles added, and creeks sufficed for early navigation. The only bay is that of Akko (the Accho of Judg. i. 31; and Ptolemais of Acts xxi. 7), formed by the single promontory, Mount Carmel. The Hebrews could not take Accho from the Phœnicians. The city stands in a fertile plain connected by a narrow pass with the great transverse plain of W. Palestine, Esdraelon, and is traversed by the rivers Belus and Kishon. The Knights of St. John settling at Akko gave it the name of St. Jean d'Acra. Napoleon termed it the key of Palestine.

Cesarea, a city and port built by Herod the Great, halfway between Carmel and Joppa, was the capital of the Herods, and of the Roman governors of Judaea.

Joppa (now Jaffa) in Dan, yet is the port of Jerusalem. Thence Jonah sailed for Tarshish; here the pilgrims disembark. It is an unprotected roadstead, and landing is often impossible.

The Plains.—Between the coast and highlands a strip of plain intervenes, divided (Deut. i. 7) into "The Seaside"—between Mount Lebanon and Carmel—assigned to Asher, but retained by the Phœnicians; and "The Vale." The latter, extending from Carmel uninterrupted to the neighbourhood of Gaza, is divided in the Bible into (1) Sharon to the N. and (2) Philistia to the S. of Joppa. Sharon is the narrower (av. 10 m. wide) and more undulating, and formerly (Josephus and LXX.) shared the wooded character of Carmel and of the valleys between it and the vale of Shechem. Into Sharon descend the passes of Manasseh from the plain of Esdraelon (see below), the commanding links in the chief military and commercial routes between the valleys of the Euphrates and Nile. Philistia is broader (av. 15-16 m.), and nearly level, and forms in its season a continuous cornfield, the brown soil being apparently inexhaustible. As the district best known to travellers and merchants, especially through its ports, Joppa and Cesarea, Philistia gave to the W. division of the Holy Land the name Palestine, now extended to the whole.

The plain of Esdraelon (i.e. Jezreel) alone divides the W. Highland, and thus connects the plain of the coast with the Jordan valley and the plateau E. of it. The spring pasturage and water-supply of Esdraelon—now called Merj-ibn-Amir, or the Meadow of the Prince—formerly attracted the nomad "children of the East," i.e. the pastoral tribes of Ammon and Moab, as it yet attracts their successors the Bedouin. The level surface of this unique highway made it the natural battlefield of nations whose strength lay in chariots of iron, and from such associations St. John quotes the Hill of Megiddo (Ar-Mageddon) as the type of the never-ceasing battle between good and evil. But little elevated above the sea level, its S. end is swampy; but surrounded by hill countries, it is scored by winter torrents that a single storm can fill, though the Kishon, in which all unite, is in summer but a string of pools; its bed, hollowed in the alluvial soil, is treacherous, and the fords shift with every flood (Judg. v. 21, 22).

W. of the watershed—which crosses the plain (15 m. wide) from N. to S. past Endor—Esdraelon forms a triangle with its apex in the pass below Carmel by which Kishon enters the plain of Accho (Acra), the N. side being about 13 m. and the S. about 18 m. in length. E. of the watershed, Tabor, Moreh (Little Hermon), and Gilboa (see Mountains and Hills) divide the plain into three branches, by which famous routes lead (1) N.E. to Tiberias, W. of Merom, and Damascus; (2) E. down the valley of Jezreel, past Beth-shean to Aphek, or to Gadara in Decapolis, the centre of the Roman roads; and (3) by Engannim, S. to Shechem, Bethel, Jerusalem, and Hebron, along the rising watershed.

The Hill Countries.—For the plateaux E. of Jordan—the forest and pasture lands of Palestine—see Bashan and Gilead (Mountains and Hills). The W. highlands comprise the "mountain" (1) of Naphtali, (2) of Ephraim, (3) of Judah (Deut. xxxiv. 2). The 1st, with "the trough" (Stanley) of Esdraelon, formed Galilee; the 2nd, Samaria; the 3rd, Judaea; of the N. T. The ranges of Upper (4,000 ft.) and hills of Lower Galilee (1,600 ft.) resemble Gilead in water-supply and forestal character, but contrast strongly with the bare white hill-country S. of Esdraelon. This plateau rises steadily to Hebron (3,000 ft.), with an horizontal profile as seen from the sea coast, though really studded with rounded hills and riven E. & W. by torrents, whose heads—often overlapping—leave only a sinuous and narrow backbone on the Jordan side of the centre. As the Jordan sinks while the plateau rises, the E. ravines are the deeper, and increase in wildness S. till the Kedron between Jerusalem and the Dead Sea falls 4,000 ft., and W. of the Dead Sea the "Wilderness of Judaea" becomes a labyrinth of savage gorges, aptly called "the rocks of the wild goats" (1 Sam. xiv. 2)—the time-honoured retreat of outlaws and hermits.

The Towns and Villages stand on natural or artificial eminences, even on the plains. In Galilee and Samaria, they occupy knolls. In the characteristic basin-like plains which diminish S. in extent and number; in Judaea, they often stand on the ends of the ridges (or projections of the highland) between the ravines; of such, Jerusalem is a type.

Nazareth, on the S. edge of the hills of Galilee which overlook the plain of Esdraelon, lies on one of a series of converging slopes likened by a mediæval traveller to the petals of a rose.

N. of Sharon is Samaria (now Sebastiyeh, from Sebaste, the name given to it by Herod, and the Beth-khumri = House of Omri, of the Assyrian monuments)—the capital substituted for Shechem and Tirzah by Omri, Ahabs' father. Its isolated ridge rises from a fertile basin, and is covered with ruins and gardens. About 8 miles to the S.E. is Shechem, the present Nablous, upon the watershed between the parallel ridges of Ebal and Gerizim (see Table of Mountains and Hills). It has always been famous for its springs, and divides the palm of beauty and fertility with Samaria. Tirzah formerly surpassed both.

Jerusalem is nearly encircled by ravines, so as to seem situated in an amphitheatre; little remains of the city as it appeared in Christ's time, the situation being changed; for mount Sion, the highest part, was cut down by the Maccabees, & is almost excluded; while the places adjoining Calvary are nearly in the centre. The city occupies a rocky plateau about 3 m. round, on the end of a ridge which was protected by walls only; by this ridge, i.e. from the N., Titus, and (apparently) his predecessors, captured the city.

Bethleem, i.e. house of bread, also called Ephrata, now Beit-lahm, is a small village on a highly-cultivated ridge 6 miles from Jerusalem, and E. of the main route thence to Hebron.

palah. It was the royal city until the citadel of Jebus was taken by Joab, and Jerusalem became "the city of David."

The South Country.—S. of Hebron, the plateau descends in a series of terraces to that of the Wilderness of Paran (av. 2,000 ft.), forming the pastoral "South" Country Heb. Negeb (Gen. xiii. 1, &c.); between the mountains of Judah and the edge of the Desert of Paran. The Negeb occupies a middle position both topographically and physically between the rich soil of central Canaan, and the sandy wastes of "that great and terrible wilderness." In the Bible it is subdivided into (1) "the South of the Kenites," S.W. of the Dead Sea (Judg. i. 16);—(2) "the South of Judah," nearly—Simeon's allotment (2 Sam. xxiv. 7);—(3) "the South of the Cherethites" (i.e. Philistines, 1 Sam. xxx. 1, 14, 16), S.W. of Beersheba to the river of Egypt, i.e. the Wady el Arish,—a fine pastoral region which constituted the Philistine kingdom of Gerar in Abraham's time; it is remarkable for many ruins and old wells (Triatram). After the Captivity the whole Negeb was overrun by the Edomites, & was merged in their kingdom known by the Grecised name of Edom, i.e. Idumæa. Conquered & forcibly proselytised by John Hyrcanus in A.C. 125 (1 Macc. v. 65, 68), Idumæa was ruled by Jewish governors, one of whom, Antipater, a native, became by the favour of Julius Caesar the first Roman Procurator of all Judæa. Hisson was made by Augustus the first "king of the Jews" since Nebuchadnezzar abolished David's throne.

The Wilderness of the Wanderings & the Sinaitic Peninsula.—The desert of Et Tih, i.e. of the Wandering, an arid and nearly waterless mass of limestone, is the "great and terrible wilderness" of Deut. i. 19, across which the Israelites seem to have made their first and direct approach to Canaan in the 2nd year after leaving Egypt, i.e. by Kadesh, as far as "the mount of the Amorites."

It is bounded by mountain ranges on its other sides also: esp. S.W. by the range of Shur, the boundary of the wilderness of that name traversed by the high road from Palestine to Egypt; and S. by the range Et Tih, which divides it from the belt of sandstone, Debbet er Ramleh (i.e. sand). Beyond this belt—which is "a rocky but not a sandy desert," and luxuriant with pasture in the spring—the triangle of the Peninsula of Sinai (between the Gulfs of Akabah and of Suez) is filled by the "terrible granite groups" of the Tûr (=rock)—broken into horns and aiguilles, and likened "to a stormy sea suddenly petrified"—which is known in the Bible as Mounts Horeb and Sinai. The latter has been identified by the recent Ordnance Surveyors with Jebel Mûsa—and its spur Ras Sufsafah, at the head of Wady er Raha (the sleeve-like extension of the Wady esh Sheyk), with the "Mountain of the Delivery of the Law."

The Arabah, Edom, Zin, &c.—The great depression which divides the country perpendicularly from Antioch to the E. gulf (Akabah) of the Red Sea, and contains the system of the Jordan, reaches its lowest depth in the Dead Sea. The basin of this sea is closed by a line of low cliffs (? the ascent of Acrabbim, Josh. xv. 3), about ten miles S. of its Southern end. Thence the Arabah rises for about 75 miles to a watershed 751 ft. above the Red Sea (Wilson, R.E.), and about 25 miles from the head of the Gulf of Akabah. The ancient character of this watershed satisfies modern geologists that the Dead Sea had never any outlet into the Red Sea. The precipitous sides of the Arabah are a continuation of the mountainous region which forms the "retaining walls" of the Jordan valley. On the W. the horizontal, blanched, and bare plateau of limestone bounds the "South Country" with which two chief passes communicate, and the wilderness Et Tih. On the E. the range of Edom (=Red), the mount Seir of seamed N. of its watershed, but to a torrents converging into the Inber el Jib, which enters the Dead Sea from desert of loose gravel and stones, beds & studded with water-borne little known, being only traversed routes; but the W. edge, which, will land probably formed the Wilderness barren, and would have supported and their cattle. To the N. W. of 37), and on the S. bank of the brook the Arabah and the Dead Sea, rose above Petra. (See Table of Mountains.)

The Arabah was traversed by the Is first failure to enter Canaan, as far as G. of Akabah; (ii.) when they returned of Zin, i.e. Kadesh (Num. x. their final march from mount Hor Red Sea" round the land of Edom from the S.E. by the gap provide conquests of Sihon the Amorites in mon and Moab, the kindred nation forbidden to attack (Deut. ii. 5, 9, 19 —16 miles wide opposite Petra, but near the gulf. [Ed.]

The Hebrew year, according to the Hebrew year was divided according to natural phenomena exclusively, and to Agriculture, because the Hebrew year was divided according to the new moon, but the first month was fixed (after the Exodus and by the necessities of the Passover) by the ripening of the first corn (barley). Watchmen announced to the priests at Jerusalem the first appearance of the new moon (Jer. xiii. 1, which, being duly attested, was proclaimed by a blast of trumpets, and beacon fires. N.B. Three ears, from at least of the N., central, and S. districts of Palestine, were required for the determination of the Passover month.)—The lunar month averaging 29½ days, a year of 12 months of 30 and 29 days alternately naturally resulted; but this involved a variation of 11 and 23 days alternately in 19 years. To reconcile the lunar year with the year of the seasons, a 13th month must be inserted about once in three years. This the Jews probably intercalated before the first month; i.e. in what would seem a backward season,—for they saw at Veador, or the 2nd Adar; but it is not mentioned in the Bible. Thus their practice approximated roughly to the Metonic cycle (adopted by the modern Jews about A.D. 300), in which a year of 13 months is inserted in (intercalary) out of a cycle of 19 years. In the subjoined Calendar, it is assumed, as usual, that the first month of the Hebrew ecclesiastical year, Abib or Nisan, answers nearly to half March and half April; the earliest possible commencement of the lunar year being on our 6th March.

English Months.	Jewish Months.
Dec. January	Tebeth. 29 days. 4 of Civil year. X. of Sacred year. (Esth. ii. 16.)		Mid-Winter.	N., N.W., N.E. Coldest month. Rain, hail, snow (Josh. x. 11) on higher hills, and occasionally at Jerusalem. Jan. and Feb., called by Arabs "the fathers of rain."	Flocks leave the hill high-lands for the Jordan valley, and its cultivation begins in groves and pasture "saris with anemones, poppies, and ranunculus"—Oranges opening. The lowest districts become green with corn.
Jan. February	Sebat. 30 days. 5 C. XI. S. (Zech. i. 7.)		Winter.	N., N.W., N.E. Weather gradually becomes warmer. Towards end of month the "cool season" begins (the most pleasant).	In warmer and sheltered localities almonds and peach trees begin to bloom. Oranges ripe.
Feb. March	Adar. 29 days. 6 C. XII. S. (Esth. iii. 7; ix. 26.)	"The First Sabbath"—the first S. of this month. 14 and 15, Feast of Purim or Lots, in commemoration of the deliverance recorded in Esther, which is then read in the synagogues.	Cold & rainy season, or spring.	W. Thunder and hail frequent, sometimes snow. The latter rains begin, on which plenty or famine, the crops and pasture depend.	In the valley of the Jordan cultivation draws to an end, and barley ripens.
Mar. April	ABIB. =green (ripe) ears. 30 days. I. of Sacred year. 7 of Civil year. (Ex. xii. 2; xiii. 4.) Also Nisan.	The "first second Sabbath" of Luke vi. 1—the 1st S. of this month. 14. The Passover. 16. First fruits of barley harvest presented, i.e. a wave-offering of the first ripe Omer (sheaf or handful) of barley, made before reaping began (Deut. xvi. 9; Lev. xxiii. 10—14; 2 K. iv. 43). 15—21, seven days of unleavened bread.	Harvest begins.	S., sometimes Si- rocco, a dry hot wind from S. E. (deserts). Fall of the latter or spring rains (Deut. xi. 14). The melting snows (Lebanon) and rains fill its channel, and Jordan overflows in places its "lower plain." (Jos. iii. 15; cp. Zech. x. 1).	Barley harvest begins in sub-tropical plain of Jordan and in the Jordan valley; wheat coming into ear; lands brilliant with shad- verdure and flowers.
Apr. May	Zif (blossom). 29 days. II. S. 8 C. (1 Kings vi. 1.) [Ujar].	14. Second or Little Passover for those who could not keep the first (Num. ix. 10, 11).	Summer.	S. Showers and thunderstorms very rare (1 Sam. xii. 17, 18). Almost uninterrupted cloudless, till end of summer.	Principal harvest small in lower districts. "Barley harvest" general (Ruth i. 2). Wheat ripening on the highlands. Apricots ripen. In Jordan valley hot winds wither and burn up the vegetation.
My. June	Sivan. 30 days. III. S. 9 C. (Esth. viii. 9.)	6. Feast of Weeks, or Harvest, or First-fruits (of grain, i.e. a wave-offering of 2 first leavened loaves from the new wheat: Lev. xxiii. 17). The Pentecost of the N. T. (Gk. = "Seven weeks;" Deut. xvi. 9.)		Usually N.W., also E. and Khamseen or parching wind from S. deserts. Air motionless and brilliantly clear.	Wheat harvest begins in the land districts. Also grapes. Grapes begin to ripen. End of the Jordan valley harvest in May—July.

July	[Tammuz.] 29 days. IV. S. 10 C. (Zech. viii. 19.)			Hot season. Usually N.W., also E. and Khamseen (a dry, hot, & depressing wind) from S. Air motionless and brilliantly clear. Heat becomes intense. Heavy dews still fall.	Wheat harvest on highest di- tricts. Various fruits rip- ing. Springs and vegetation dry everywhere. The nomads (E- douins) leave the steppes for mountain pastures. Else- where the country parches dry and hard. "a dreary waste of withered stalks and burnt up grass" (the "stubble," A.V.
August	[Ab.] 30 days. V. S. 11 C. (Exra vii. 9.)			E. Ditto.	Principal fruit month. Grapes, figs, walnuts, a olive, &c. The vintage begins (Lev. xxvi. 6.)

Winter begins (John 10. 22.)	Snow on the mountains; stormy. In December, Janu- ary and February greatest amount of rain in the year.	The trees bare. The pla- na and deserts, which the sun and drying winds have parched, gradually beco- me green pastures.

The Seasons.—The harvest in Egypt occurs from one month to six weeks earlier than in Palestine—i.e. the flax a day harvest in March, the wheat and spelt harvest in April. The sub-tropical regions of the Jordan Valley, especially the nearly tropical region of Jericho and the Dead Sea, correspond nearly to Egypt and parts of India, climate, seasons, and vegetation. The harvests of the highland plains of Palestine (averaging 2,000ft. above S.E.) are about a month later; the coast plains of Philistia occupy an intermediate position. Everywhere the barnacles the wheat harvest by about 3 weeks, and the crop is reaped about 4 months after sowing. Palestine occides by nature a series of climates so extraordinary that an overruling Providence could easily cause the stages riculture to overlap from sheer abundance (cp. Amos ix. 13). Its climate varies from the sub-Alpine to the sasical as the joint result of elevations and depressions of the surface (equivalent, if taken together, to a maximum 2,000ft.), and of ravines infinitely varied in depth, aspect, and shelter. The rainfall, though probably less irreg-lar than the forests yet stood, & when the soil was retained by terraces and tilled by a teeming population, would suit irrigation if duly husbanded in cisterns and channels; and its regularity was guaranteed to Israel, if faithful, parching winds from the E. deserts, which yet yellow the exposed wall and evaporate the vital warmth till de-perence, had their counterpoise in the moist sea breezes which pass the Jordan. And until May the shepherds yet pass "from winter to summer in an hour," and elsewhere give his flock from month to month suitable mature and pasturage by moving from the valley to the glen, and thence to the lofty steppe, and back again.

Other Divisions of Time—the Week, the Sabbatical Year, and the Jubilee.—The WEEK of 7 days is traceable in the record of the Creation and the Deluge (Gen. viii. 10), and it is mentioned in the agreements between Laban and Jacob (Gen. xxix. 27). The consecration of the 7th day as a day of rest is expressly attributed by Moses to God Himself (Gen. ii. 3), who in the Mosaic law developed the institution by appointing years of rest to be observed by His people after their settlement in the Land of Promise. At the end of every week of years, i.e. every seventh year—or “year of release,” now termed a SABBATICAL YEAR—the Hebrews and their land were to “keep Sabbath,” the soil remaining untilled, the vine unpruned (Lev. xiv. 2–7), the oliveyard undressed, while the self-produced crops were abandoned to the poor, to the stranger, and to the wild animals. Debtors were to be released (made to rest) from their debts (Deut. xv. 1–18), and domestic slaves of Hebrew blood from their servitude, unless they chose deliberately to remain in slavery (Exod. xxi. 1–11; Jer. xxxiv. 14). The law was to be publicly read (Deut. xxxi. 10–13): the leisure of the year would promote its study, religious progress, and education. Towards the close of the 7th Sabbatical year, or week of week-years, i.e. on the great Day of Atonement (10th of 1st month of the civil, and 7th of the sacred year, see Calendar) the YEAR OF JUBILEE began. Its first 3 months consisted (less 10 days) with the last 3 of the outgoing Sabbatical year, and it ended on the Day of Atonement of the year following. To the observances of the Sabbatical year were added (1) the restoration of all lands and houses to unallotted or Levites’ houses even in walled towns (Lev. xiv. 30, 33), free of all debt or mortgage, to the heirs of the original allottees at the time of Joshua’s Settlement; (2) the release of all bondmen of Hebrew blood, and especially of those who had sold themselves and families (with or without their land), or had been seized for debt, and become agricultural slaves or serfs (Lev. xiv. 39; 2 Kings iv. 1). The alienation of land, &c., was thus absolutely limited to a period of 49 years. No mention is made of debt or debtors in connection with the Jubilee, probably because both should have disappeared in the preceding 9 months of the 7th Sabbatical year. The Jubilee year ended just before the commencement of the uncertain and often long-protracted seed time of Palestine (see Calendar). Thus the Hebrews were ever reminded that the land was God’s, and they but His tenants; oppressors were checked and pauperism limited; the accumulation of land in a few hands was prevented, and the integrity of the tribes and their allotments assured; while the necessity of proving tribalism and kinship at intervals of half a century tended to ensure the accuracy and preservation of the family genealogies, by which the descent of the Promised Seed of the woman and the fulfilment of the promises to David by the coming of the Redeemer (Messiah) must be recognised in the fulness of time. THE DAY AND ITS DIVISIONS.

I. In the Old Testament. II. In the New Testament.

The natural day, from sunrise to sunset, which varies in England from about eight to sixteen hours according to the season of the year, is more uniform in the lower latitude of Palestine, where it varies from about ten to fourteen hours. The calendar day, or civil day, extending always and everywhere through the twenty-four hours, may commence variously. When reckoned, as with us, from midnight to midnight, it has the advantage of including the entire daylight in one business day; whereas by any other computation, as from noon to noon, from sunrise to sunrise, from sunset to sunset, common events would far more frequently have double dates. The following texts are adduced to show that the Hebrews reckoned from sunset to sunset:—“The evening and the morning were the first day” (Gen. i. 5); “from even unto even shall ye celebrate your sabbath” (Lev. xxiii. 32); “unto 2,300 days” (Dan. viii. 14; marg. “evening-morning”).

The sub-division of time into exact intervals requires mechanical inventions. When we consider how obvious is the determination of noon by the shadow, and bear in mind such easy contrivances as the out-flow of sand or water, or the sinking of a perforated vessel placed in a vessel of water, it is hard to think that so intelligent a people as the Israelites had no simple mechanism for measuring time. An agricultural race would be satisfied with very rough calculation, and every household might measure by the intervals most convenient to itself. The premisses of time is felt only in the activities of an artificial civilisation, whence alone would arise the necessity of public standards and uniform measures. This would account for the general absence of precise divisions of time in the O.T., while the incidental reference to the dial or sun-dial of Abaz (2 Kings xi. 11; Jer. xxxviii. 3), the nature of which would only a matter of conjecture, leads us to infer that time-measures of some kind were in use. Otherwise, unless roughly by the stars, the midday point could not be determined. The “hour,” necessarily an artificial space of time, appears to occur only in the O.T., “attended for one hour” (Dan. iv. 16); but the Hebrew word thus translated (shāhah) signifies no more than an indefinite interval. The descriptive terms, dawn, morning, noon, heat of day, cool of day, evening, twilight, night, are of common occurrence and always intelligible. Attention has been made to arrange the Hebrew originals in a graduated scale, with very doubtful success, and with no real gain to any of the narratives. Thus, “heat of the day” (Gen. xviii. 1; 1 Sam. xi. 11) is placed about 9 a.m., and “cool of the day” (Gen. iii. 8) before sunset. But even if reliance could be placed upon such interpretations, they would not help the English reader, as the A.V. does not translate the Hebrew uniformly; one word being rendered both as twilight and dawn, another both as morning and dawn. While the ever-varying day furnishes so many descriptive and natural terms, the dead level of night can only be artificially divided, and for this the relays of guardians or watchers of the public safety would furnish a scheme. Doubtless the temple was placed under nightly watch, and it is considered that Ps. cxxxiv. contains the salutations that passed at the reliefs. “Night watches” thus became a current expression, and hence the question in Isa. xxi. 11, “Watchman, what of the night?” In the O.T. three distinct watches are discernible: (1) “the beginning of the watches” (Lam. ii. 19), supposed to have ended at midnight; (2) “the middle watch,” supposed to have commenced at midnight; (3) “the morning watch” (Ezek. xix. 24), considered to have ended at sunrise. Such watches of the night would correspond generally with the three main divisions of the day recognised in Ps. lv. 17. At evening, morning, and at noon will I pray.

II. In the New Testament we recognise Roman computation in Time as well as in Money, Weights, and Measures, and here at length the word “hour” occurs with the proper meaning: “At three and twelve hours in the day” (John xi. 9). We may conclude, from the known usage of that period, that the natural day is the one meant; the hour, therefore, would vary in length with that of the daylight to be sub-divided. To compute any given hour of a Jewish day in modern terms is thus a matter of some complication, as only one hour of the Jewish day, that of sunset, would always correspond with one hour of our day. The Jewish 6th hour would end at our 12 at noon; but the Jewish 1st hour, which began at sunrise, would correspond with our 6 a.m. only at the equinox, when alone the Jewish 12th hour at sunset would coincide with our 6 p.m. The following hours are named in the N.T.:—The third (Matt. x. 3; Mark xv. 25; Acts ii. 15); sixth (Matt. ix. 45; John iv. 6; xix. 14; Acts x. 9); seventh (John xi. 39); ninth (Matt. xx. 5; xxvii. 45, 46; Acts xiii. 1; x. 3); tenth (John i. 39); eleventh (Matt. x. 6), &c. the last of the working day. A single passage indicates that the night also was divided into hours, “the third hour of the night” (Acts xxiii. 23), the usual notation being by “watches.” The ordinal number prefixed (which was never the case in the O.T.) shows that the N.T. watches—whatever the O.T. might have been—were four in number, corresponding with the Roman reckoning; and the following are mentioned—second and third (Luke xxi. 38), fourth (Matt. xix. 18). In only one passage the night season is described in another set of four terms, evening, midnight, cool-evening, morning (Mark xiii. 35), which are thought to have corresponded respectively with twilight to 9 p.m., 9 to 12, 12 to 3 a.m., 3 to day-break.

THE HEBREW METHOD OF RECKONING.—The Scripture method of computing time is to reckon a part as the whole. Thus the 3rd month of Jehoiakim’s reign is reckoned as belonging to his 4th year (Jer. xiv. 1), i.e. two full years and the fragments of two others. In like manner may be explained the expressions used of our Lord’s resurrection, “the third day” (Mt. xvi. 21; Luke xxi. 21); “after three days” (Mt. xxvii. 64; Mark viii. 31); “three days and three nights” (Jn. xii. 40). He was laid in the grave on Friday before the Sabbath commenced (Luke xiii. 64), &c. before sunset, and he was raised on Sunday morning about dawn (John xx. 1); so that whether the day was reckoned as beginning at sunset or at midnight, he was equally in the grave part of the day preceding the Sabbath, all the Sabbath, and part of the day following the Sabbath, i.e. three days according to Hebrew computation. The equivalence of the expressions “on the third day” and “after three days” may be illustrated by 1 Kings xx. 22. “Three days and three nights” was another Hebrew form of speech meaning the same thing, as appears from 1 Sam. xxi. 12, 13; Job i. 16; &c. [Ed.]

COINS, WEIGHTS, AND MEASURES OF THE BIBLE.

COINS.

INTRODUCTION.—No real coins, i.e. pieces struck under an authority, are mentioned in the O. T. previous to the Captivity, although various allusions of earlier date—e.g. the "wedge (Heb. lingua) of gold of 50 shekels weight" found by Achan at Jericho (Josh. vii. 21); the "piece of money" to be offered to Samuel by Saul's attendant (1 Sam. ii. 36); and the "pieces of silver" in Ps. lxxviii. 50—indicate, as the prescribed payments under the Mosaic Law imply, a currency of pieces of rough silver of fixed weight, like the bars of copper and iron which circulated in Britain in the time of Julius Cæsar. Of the actual coins mentioned in the O. T., the first are "drams" of the time of Cyrus, B.C. 538 (Ezra ii. 69), probably the gold staters (i.e. standard coins) of the reformed coinage of Croesus, king of Lydia (B.C. 560). The second in order of time are "drachs" of the time of Artaxerxes Longimanus, son of the Ahasuerus of the Book of Esther, i.e. Xerxes (Ezra vii. 27; Neh. vii. 72). These would be the Daric staters or standard Persian gold coins of the reformed coinage of Darius, son of Hystaspes (B.C. 521—485) which circulated extensively in Persia in Artaxerxes' reign. In 1 Chron. xxix. 7, the historian of David's reign, probably Ezra, seems to have replaced the old chronicler's word by "drachs", a term current among the Jews in Babylonia, his contemporaries. The first Jewish coins date from the special commission granted to Ezra by Artaxerxes (B.C. 458) "to do what seems good with the rest of the silver and the gold" (Ezra vii. 18), now regarded as virtually a permission to the Jews to coin money. Accordingly, the earliest extant Jewish shekels and half-shekels of silver are attributed to Ezra (about B.C. 458) instead of to Simon Maccabeus. And the "shekels of silver" mentioned in Nehemiah (v. 15; comp. x. 32), may be the Persian silver siglos [not siklos] of 20 to a Daric, and stamped like it with an archer [DRAK].

In the Apocrypha, the drachs mentioned are a fraction of the Attic talent, which [TALANT, II.] Alexander the Great's succession rendered nearly universal. In B.C. 180, Antiochus VII. (Sidetes), of the Græco-Syrian dynasty, granted special permission to Simon Maccabeus to coin money with his own stamp (1 Macc. xv. 6). The silver shekels and half-shekels formerly attributed to Simon being assigned to the time of Ezra, there remain for the reign of Simon only the copper pieces ($\frac{1}{4}$ shekel, $\frac{1}{2}$ shekel, and $\frac{3}{4}$ th of shekel), dated in the fourth year.

The Asmonean dynasty continued to issue a copper coinage, gradually showing Greek tendencies to the time of Antigonus, the last prince, and the numerous coinage of Alexander Jannæus (B.C. 105—78) doubtless circulated even in N. T. times. The Idumean princes, commencing with Herod I. (surnamed the Great), continued a copper coinage with Greek legends, which circulated in Judæa (as well as a coinage minted by the Roman governors or procurators of the province of Judæa, A.D. 6—59) till the death of Agrippa II. (Acts xxv. 13; xvi. 2, seq.) in A.D. 100. In the N. T. period, therefore, the coins current in the Holy Land would be of gold, silver, copper, and bronze ("brass", Matt. x. 9)—partly Jewish (especially the bronze and copper coinages of Alexander Jannæus [MITR] and of the Herods), but chiefly Greek and Roman. Of these foreign coins, some would be imperial, i.e. of Alexander the Great and his successors, and of the Cæsars, viz. Augustus, Tiberius, Caligula, Claudius, and Nero—others would be local, i.e. of the great commercial cities of Syria and Phœnicia, and of the Roman procurators of Judæa. The current gold coin was the Roman aureus, equivalent to 25 denarii [PENNY], and worth about 21 ls. The bulk of the silver currency consisted of tetradrachms, i.e. 4-dram-pieces or staters of the Attic standard [PIECE OF MONEY, TALANT, II.] struck at Antioch on Orontes, Tyre, &c., but chiefly of Roman denarii [PENNY] of $\frac{1}{2}$ the weight of the stater. As Jewish money only could be brought into the Holy Place, the presence of "money changers" in the outer courts of the Temple was necessary to convert this motley currency into Jewish coin. The following coins are mentioned in the O. T. post-captivity books, in the Apocrypha, and the N. T.:

DRAKHM in 2 Macc. iv. 19; x. 20; xii. 43; Tobit v. 14, is the earlier Attic drachm (B.C. 338), worth nearly 10*d.*; the later, about 8*d.*, English. See Penny and Piece of Silver.

DARAM in Ezra ii. 69; viii. 27; Neh. vii. 70—72; 1 Chron. xxix. 7, is the A. V. translation of the Hebrew words Adarkon and Darkemon, by which a standard gold coin, viz. the Persian daric, is intended. If daric be derived from dara, the Persian for a king, whose figure as an archer (comp. "the bow of Elam" = Persia, Jer. xlix. 25) was impressed on the coin, it would correspond in name to the English "sovereign", though to the guinea or 2*2s.* in value. See Introduction.

FARTHING is the A. V. translation of two Greek words in the N. T., viz. (1) Assarion (Matt. x. 29; Luke xii. 6), the Greek version of the Roman as or assarion, probably representing a Greek coin of bronze ("brass", Matt. x. 9) minted at the Syrian Antioch, and worth $\frac{1}{16}$ of a denarius [PENNY], or about 3 farthings English; (2) Kodrantēs (Matt. v. 26; Mark xii. 43), the Greek version of the Roman quadrans, i.e. the 4th part of the as, i.e. about $\frac{1}{4}$ of an English farthing. See Mite.

GOLD is not mentioned in the O. T. as a coin, for by the "[pieces] of gold" in 2 Kings v. 5 a weight is probably intended, as in similar passages relating to silver. In the N. T. (e.g. Matt. x. 9) the gold aureus of the Roman Empire would be meant, worth 25 denarii [PENNY], or about 21 ls.

HALF SHEKEL, Heb. bekeš (Exod. xxx. 13, 15) = 1*s.* 4*d.* Eng. Extant specimens weigh about 110 grains.

MITTE (Matt. xii. 43; Luke xii. 69; xxi. 2), the A. V. translation of the Greek word lepton, a small Greek copper coin worth half the original quadrens [FARTHING 2]. But the "mites" must have been Jewish coins, as no other could be brought into the Holy Place. Probably they were 2 of the small coins struck by Alexander Jannæus, of which extant specimens range from 30—15 grains in weight; two of the latter—if a distinct coin, and not worn specimens of the former—would equal a quadrens, and be worth $\frac{1}{4}$ of an English farthing each.

PENNY is the A. V. translation of denarius, denarius in Matt. xviii. 28; xxii. 19, &c. The Roman denarii formed the bulk of the silver coins current in Palestine during the N. T. period. See Piece of Money. A denarius (value 8*d.*) was the regular pay of a day labourer in our Lord's lifetime (comp. Matt. xx. 9—13), as in the Middle Ages. It was also the tribute [TRIBUTE MONEY] payable by the Jews to the Emperor after Judæa became a Roman province. Nero reduced its value to 7*d.*

PIECE OF MONEY, in Matt. xvii. 27, is the Greek stater—standard coin, i.e. the Attic tetradrachm, or Græco-Syrian piece of 4 drachms (=denarii or "pence"), which, with the denarii [see PENNY], composed the silver currency of Palestine during the 1st and 2nd centuries A.D. Being equal to the shekel, this stater represented the sacred tribute [TRIBUTE MONEY] for two, our Lord and St. Peter.

PIECE OF SILVER in the Old Testament represents "shekel of silver" in weight, except in 1 Sam. ii. 36; Ps. lxxviii. 30; Josh. xxiv. 32; Job xlii. 11, where (see Introduction) it may mean uncioned money. In the New Testament it is the A. V. translation of the Greek (1) drachme, i.e. the Attic drachm (Luke xv. 8), equivalent in St. Luke's time to the Roman denarius [PENNY], and to the quarter shekel, and worth 8*d.*—8*d.* English; (2) argurion, in the price (a) of our Lord's betrayal in Matt. xxvi. 15, &c., where the "30 [pieces] of silver", usually taken to be denarii or "pence", are probably shekels (see the parallel, Zech. xi. 12, 13, and comp. Exod. xxi. 32), i.e. Syro-Greek tetradrachms or staters [PIECE OF MONEY]; and (b) of the burned conjuring books in Acts xix. 19, where the Vulgate translates "denarii", no doubt correctly.

SHEKEL, A Hebrew word used in the O. T. only, signifying "weight", and also an ingot of fixed value (Exod. xxx. 13) until the time of Ezra, who probably (see Ezra vii. 18) coined the first Jewish shekels of silver. See Introduction and Mite. Existing shekels of silver are worth about 2*s.* 8*d.* English (see Talent).

shekel mentioned in (1) the half shekel, Heb. ceda (which see under WEIGHTS); (2) the third part, with which the Jews who returned from the Captivity voluntarily charged themselves yearly towards the maintenance of the Temple service (Neh. x. 32, 33), instead of the $\frac{1}{2}$ shekel contributed (apparently) before the Captivity (comp. 2 Chron. xxiv. 6 with Exod. xxxviii. 26), and again at a later date [TREASURY MONEY, II.]; (3)

Roman Money, mentioned in the New Testament, reduced to the English and American Standard.

WEIGHTS AND MEASURES.

GENERAL REMARKS.—No ancient measures, but some specimens of Assyrian, Babylonian, Egyptian and Greek weights have been discovered, and some very striking successes have consequently been attained; yet we cannot hope to reconstruct the primitive systems, and least of all the Hebrew system, of which no specimen survives, with the elaborate tabular detail and decimal precision too often attempted. Some may rely upon information obtainable from Hebrew literature, but, as regards the shekel at least, monumental and other evidence disproves the Rabbinical distinction between the Mosaic and the later shekel.

WEIGHTS.

The principal weights mentioned in the Bible are the following:—

POUND. I. In the Old Testament, "pound" is the A. V. translation of maneh; in Greek, mina (LXX.); in Latin, mina (Vulgate); a Babylonian word adopted by the Egyptians, Phœnicians, Hebrews, and Greeks with the use of the Babylonian weight-talent "of the king" [TALENT, I.]. It is found in 1 Kings x. 17 (Solomon's golden shields of "3 pounds" each; comp. 2 Chron. ix. 16); in Ezra ii. 69 and Neh. vii. 71, 72; and in the obscure passage of Ezek. xiv. 12. In the Apocrypha, viz. in 1 Macc. xiv. 24; xv. 18, and 1 Esdras v. 45, it is the A. V. translation of the Greek mina; as also in the New Testament, in the Parable of the Pounds (Luke xix. 13-25). The maneh was $\frac{1}{2}$ of a talent. For its weight and value in the 3 talents in use among the ancient Hebrews, see TALENT, I. II. But in the New Testament, except in Luke xix. 13-25 ("mina"), "pound" is the A. V. translation of litra (John xii. 3; xix. 39), a word used by the Greeks of Sicily in their system of weights and money, and equivalent to the Latin libra (or as), the Roman unit of weight.

SHEKEL (Heb. weight) occurs in the O. T. only, viz. first as a weight, by which numerous objects, and especially the metals, were weighed (wherefore the word was often supplied by the translators of the A. V. after numerals where no substantive occurs in the Hebrew); and later it occurs also as money uncoined and coined (see COINS, Introduction and Shekel). Sixty and fifty shekels went to a maneh [see POUND, I.], and 3,000 to the talent "of the king", but 3,000 to a talent of gold or silver [TALENT, I.].

TALENT. I. In the Old Testament, "talent" is the Latinised-Greek word by which the A. V. translates the Hebrew ikkar, "a circle" or "globe", the largest Hebrew weight for metals. It occurs first in Ex. xxv. 39,

"a talent of pure gold"; we read also of a "talent of silver" (3 Kings v. 22), "talent of lead" (Neh. x. 1), "talent of brass" (Ex. xxxviii. 29), and "talent of iron" (Chr. xxix. 7). A talent of silver bound up as a bag and one change of garment, was about as much as a man could carry (2 Kings v. 23), and weighing as much as avoided by the sealed bags containing a talent of silver. The Hebrew talent was derived from Assyria and Babylonia. Of the talents current there, the one or Assyrian talent "of the king" passed through Mesopotamia and Syria to the Phœnician coast towards Palestine, where we find it in use among the Jews. In Ex. xxxviii. 25, 50 shekels are reckoned to the talent, 3,000 shekels being reckoned to the talent, which was always divided into 60 manehs. The 3 talents of talents Hebrews were—(i.) The weight talent "of the king", weighing about 153 lbs. troy, and worth about 2,000 $\frac{1}{2}$ divided into 60 manehs of 2 lbs. 7 ozs., worth about 200 each; and into 60 shekels of 10 $\frac{1}{2}$ dwts., worth about 20 each; (ii.) the "talent of gold", weighing about 153 lbs. troy, and worth about 2,000 $\frac{1}{2}$ divided into 60 manehs of 2 lbs. 7 ozs., worth about 200 each, and into 60 shekels, of 10 $\frac{1}{2}$ dwts., worth about 20 each; (iii.) the "talent of silver", weighing about 117 lbs. troy, and worth about 2,000 $\frac{1}{2}$ divided into 60 manehs of 1 lb. 10 ozs., worth about 28 lbs. 4 $\frac{1}{2}$ each, and into 60 shekels "of the sanctuary", of 8 $\frac{1}{2}$ dwts., worth 1 lb. each. II. In the New Testament, "talent" occurs in the parable of the unmerciful servant (Mat. xv. 23-25); and (ii.) in the parable of the talents (Mat. xxv. 14-30). At this time the Attic was the standard of Palestine; 60 minae and 6,000 drachmae were to the talent. It was consequently worth about 200 lbs. POUND, DRACHM.

*•• For further information on the Money and Weights of the Bible, see the article in the Appendix to this work (1878) by F. W. Madden, Esq., whence the two preceding sections have been mainly compiled.

LINEAR MEASURES.

Bible linear measures are, in the A. V., nearly all borrowed from the human body, as follows:—

FINGER, Jer. iii. 21: so in the Hebrew etzbâ, and interpreted finger-breadth; also called digit, from the Latin digitus, a finger.

HAND-BREADTH, Exod. xxv. 25; 1 Kings vii. 26; 2 Chron. iv. 5; Ps. xxxix. 5, &c., A. V. for Hebrew tephach, which has no radical connection with the human member, but means primarily extent, and is used as a measure, rendered palm, or hand-breadth.

SPAN, i.e. the full extent of the outspread fingers and thumb, Ex. xxxviii. 16; 1 S. xvii. 4; Isa. xl. 12; Ezek. xliii. 13. Heb. zereth, from a word meaning to disperse or spread out, not etymologically connected with the hand.

CUBIT, freq. Heb. ammah, the fore-arm, Latin cubitus, elbow. What is called a cubit in Judg. iii. 16 is in the Heb. gomel, the length of which is only conjectured by our translators to have equalled the cubit; but the weapon (a sword, not a dagger) was probably longer.

REED, Ezek. xl. 5. Heb. keseth, a reed or cane. The above measures do not occur in such a manner to show their relative values, except in the introduction of the reed, which is said to consist of six cubits, but it is not certain that they were combined in any artificial way. No specimens of any of them exist, but the most reliable guide is it is considered that human anatomy is the best guide. We should have had more confidence in the guidance if hand-breadth and span in the Bible had been anatomical words, as they are in the Greek renderings. Thus it is found by experiment that the span will cover the fore-arm, three hand-breadths the palm a span, four finger-breadths a palm; and cordingly, this scale of relation has been adopted. The grand difficulty has been to ascertain the length of the cubit, and so to pass down to the actual measures of the lower denominations. The cubit may be compared with the Ell (=Elbow; cp. German, Ellenbogen) and its variations, the English, French, and Flemish Ell. Various conclusions have been arrived at, ranging from 16 inches to 22 nearly. The Ordnance Surveyors of Palestine take it at 21 inches, and this is frequently accepted. That of the Bible Dict. is 19 inches, which is exactly the mean of these. Taking 10 or 21 as alternatives, we get the following scale, in which we have omitted very minute fractions, since the calculations are confessedly approximate:—

Finger-breadth or digit	- - -	$\frac{1}{4}$ or $\frac{1}{2}$ inches.
Hand-breadth or palm	= 4 digits	- 3½ or 3½ "
Span	= 3 palms = 12 digits	- - 9½ or 10½ "
Cubit	= 3 spans = 6 palms = 24 digits	- 19 or 21 "
Reed	= 6 cubits = 12 spans = 36 palms	= 144 digits
	- - -	= 114 or 126 "

FATHOM. Acts xxvii. 28, is the rendering of the Greek measure orgyia, which has been computed at 6 English feet and $\frac{1}{4}$ of an inch, or almost exactly an English fathom. (Dict. Gk. & Rom. Antiq., "Pes.")

MEASURES OF DISTANCE.

The following are mentioned:—

PACE (2 Sam. vi. 13), used indefinitely, as among ourselves, for about a yard.

LITTLE WAY, (Gen. xxxv. 16; xlviii. 7; 2 K. v. 19), thought by some to have been a technical measure of distance in the Hebrew; but it must be considered undefined. (Bib. Dict. iii. 1740.)

DAY'S JOURNEY or STAGE. Varying with circumstances, but averaging about 30 miles.

SABBATH DAY'S JOURNEY, Acts i. 12. Reckoned 2,000 paces from the city wall, fixed by the Jewish doctors to secure observance of the precept in Exod. xvi. 29. (Bib. Dict. iii. 1073); cp. Num. xxxv. 5.

FURLONG (Luke xxiv. 13), the Greek and Latin stadion, which is computed to have been a short English furlong, about $\frac{1}{2}$ of it, or, more exactly, $\frac{1}{3}$ of an English yard. (Dict. of Gk. & Rom. Antiq., "Stadium;" Bib. Dict. iii. 1740.)

MILE, Matt. v. 41. Probably a Roman mile, i.e. 1,000 paces (mille passuum) is meant, and this is computed at 1,618 or 1,614 English yards, or about $\frac{1}{2}$ of an English mile. (Dict. of Gk. & Rom. Antiq., "Milliare;" Dict. Bib. iii. 363.)

MEASURES OF CAPACITY.

Three liquid measures, log, ata, bath, occur in the Old Testament, where however there is no statement of their absolute or their relative values. But Jewish writers inform us that a hin=12 logs; a bath=6 hins (Dict. of Bible, iii. 1740, b.).

For dry measures the Old Testament, A.V., gives the following:—cab, omer, tenth deal, ephah, half homer, cor, homer. From the Hebrew we also get seah, shālīsh, both rendered by the indefinite word "measure." As to the relative values of these, the Bible states that an ephah=10 omers (Exod. xvi. 36); a homer=10 ephahs (Ezek. xiv. 10). In addition to this, Jewish writers inform us that an ephah=3 seahs; a seah=6 cabs. Hence other relations follow by calculation, as an omer=1½ cab; a seah=3½ omers, and so the scale of relation is completed.

The absolute values are still to be discovered: and here we are dependent on Rabbinical learning, as no actual examples of ancient Jewish measures are extant. The bath is concluded from Ezek. xiv. 10, 11 to have been of the same capacity as the ephah, but the data for determining the ephah are very scanty, leading to widely varying results, from 8½ gallons to 9½ gallons (Dict. Bib. iii. 1742 a.). The mean of these is 8½ gallons; so that we may reckon roughly that the ephah is 6 or 7 gallons, or about three pecks. Lower measures deduced from the ephah of course partake of the same uncertainty, and must be allowed a proportionate margin.

In the New Testament, according to the Authorised Version, the native measures might seem to have disappeared as usual; but the original Greek reveals no less than three Old Testament terms, bath, seah, and cor, under the slightly altered forms, batoes, satou, corou, all of which we translate "measure."

The following is a complete list of the measures mentioned in the Bible, with every passage in which they severally occur:—

BATH. About 6 or 7 gallons: the largest of the liquid measures, equal in capacity to the ephah of dry measure. 1 Kings vii. 23, 38; 2 Chron. ii. 10; 1v. 5; Ezra vii. 22; Isa. v. 10; Ezek. xiv. 10, 11, 14; Luke xvi. 6 (Greek, batoes).

BUSHEL. About a peck, dry measure; the A.V. rendering of the Greek and Roman modius. Matt. v. 15; Mark iv. 21; Luke xii. 33.

CAB. Above a quart, dry measure; $\frac{1}{2}$ of a seah according to Jewish writers. 2 Kings vi. 24.

COR. About 8 bushels or one quarter English, the largest of the dry measures, and equivalent to 1 homer or 10 ephahs; Ezek. xiv. 14, A.V. In the Hebrew only (A.V. "measure") 1 Kings; 1v. 22; v. 11; 2 Chron. ii. 10; xxvii. 6; Ezra vii. 22; Luke xvi. 7 (Greek, corou).

EPHAH. About 3 pecks, dry measure; of the same capacity as a bath in liquid measure. Exod. xvi. 36; Lev. v. 11; vi. 20; xix. 36; Num. v. 15; xxviii. 6; Judg. vi. 9; Ruth ii. 17; 1 Sam. i. 24; xvii. 17; Isa. v. 10; Ezek. xiv. 11, 13; xlv. 6, 7, 11, 14; Amos viii. 6; Ezek. v. 6, 8.

FIRKIN. The A.V. of the Greek metretres; nearly 9 gallons or an English firkin. John ii. 6.

HALF HOMER. About 4 bushels English, dry measure; the A.V. of the Hebrew Lethco, which in the Greek Septuagint version is hemicorou, or half a cor, i.e. half a homer. Hos. iii. 2.

HIN. About a gallon, liquid measure; the 6th of a bath, according to Jewish writers. Exod. xxix. 40; xxx. 24; Lev. xix. 36; xxiii. 13; Num. xv. 4, 6, 7, 9; xxviii. 6, 7, 14; Ezek. lv. 11; xlv. 24; xlv. 6, 7, 11, 14.

HOMER. About 7 or 8 bushels or one quarter English, the largest of the dry measures—a cor or 10 ephahs. Ezek.

xiv. 14; Lev. xxvii. 16; Num. xi. 33; Isa. v. 10; Ezek. xiv. 11, 13, 14; Hos. iii. 2.

Note.—The homer and omer as written in English differ only by an aspirate. It is much otherwise in Hebrew. The second syllable mer is the same in both, but the ho (or more properly choi) and o differ radically.

LOG. About $\frac{1}{4}$ of a pint; smallest of the liquid measures; according to Jewish writers $\frac{1}{12}$ of a hin. Lev. xiv. 10, 12, 15, 21, 24.

MEASURE. Supplied in italics, Ruth iii. 16; Hag. ii. 16. The rendering of A.V. for metron (Greek for "measure" in general). Matt. vii. 2; xxiii. 32; Mark iv. 24; Luke vi. 38. Also the A.V. of the following:—

(1) Cor, Heb., 1 Kings iv. 22; v. 11; 2 Chron. ii. 10; xxviii. 6; Ezra vii. 22. Greek, corou, Luke xvi. 7. See COR.

(2) Seah, Heb., about a peck; according to Jewish writers $\frac{1}{2}$ of an ephah. It was the ordinary measure for domestic purposes. Gen. xlviii. 6; 1 Sam. xix. 18; 1 Kings xiv. 32; 2 Kings vii. 1, 16, 18. Greek, satou, Luke xiii. 21; Matt. xiii. 33.

(3) Batoes, Greek for bath (Heb.) Luke xvi. 6. See BATH.

(4) Shālīsh, Heb. for "one-third," i.e. $\frac{1}{3}$ of an ephah; hence a seah, as above (2). Isa. xii. 12; Ps. lxxx. 8.

(5) Chenice, Gk., nearly a quart. Rev. vi. 6.

OMER. About half a gallon, dry measure; $\frac{1}{2}$ of an ephah. Exod. xvi. 22, 32, 33, 36.

SEAH. See MEASURE (2).

TENTH DEAL. About half a gallon; A.V. of tesdron or one-tenth, i.e. $\frac{1}{10}$ of an ephah, therefore = an omer. Exod. xvi. 36; xxi. 40; Lev. xiv. 10, 21; xxiii. 13, 17; xxiv. 6; Num. xv. 4, 6, 9; xxi. 20; xxviii. 9, 13, 20, 28; xxix. 3, 4, 9, 10, 14, 15.

[C.H.]

THE Plants of the greater part of Palestine belong to the 'Germanic' Flora; but the botanical features of the Alps are found on Lebanon and Hermon, and those of Nubia and the tropics in the Jordan valley, esp. in the basin of the Dead Sea. The rapid change of elevation from this depression of 1300 feet below the sea level to the limits of perpetual snow brings these various flora close together: 1300 species have been collected; probably the whole would exceed 2000. Solomon's botanical knowledge ranged from the cedar to the humble wall-plant (1 Kin. 4. 33). Some species are almost lost for lack of cultivation, e.g. the Pistachio [STY] & Palm, others by waste. The forests and large trees survive where man is rare, esp. E. of Jordan. In Gilead, esp. on the Jebel Ajlun, forests of evergreen oak separate the deciduous oak forests of the foothills [OAK] from the extensive pine-woods of the tops of the highest ranges [TR].

FORESTS. — Little primeval forest survived to the time of the Hebrews except the cedar forests in Lebanon (Isa. 37. 24, &c.), pinewoods in Hermon and Gilead (Eze. 27. 5.), oak forests in Bashan, amidst which the bison or aurochs [UNICORN, see Animals] roamed (Isa. 2. 13; Ps. 22. 12), and the Aencia clumps [SHITTIM] (Numb. 25. 1; Josh. 2. 1). Groves of palms (2 Chron. 28. 15) were grown in the Jordan valley. Elsewhere, the scarcity of timber made large trees a conspicuous feature and landmarks (Gen. 35. 8; Judg. 6. 11, &c.) Hence, and from their shade (Hos. 4. 13), they became centres of idolatrous worship (Isa. 57. 5, &c.), and when so abused were to be cut down (Eze. 34. 13, &c.) The presence of trees and their luxuriance (Isa. 55. 13) symbolized God's blessing, & their absence desolation (Isa. 41. 19). Thus the branches used at the feast of Tabernacles symbolized gratitude to God for plenty (Lev. 23. 40).

PASTURES. — The pastures of Palestine form 3 groups, corresponding (with their constituent grasses) to the threefold physical division and climate of the land. (1) In the 'hill country' e.g. the bare downs of Judah and the Negeb A. V. South, the pasture is short & close, but transitory. A spangled carpet of brilliant flowers follows the rains, but tufts of (2) the Jordan desert four months is coast, the rank meadow grass, and pasture near

GARDENS AND VINE Allusions are numerous (Ecc. 2. 5, 6; comp. 6. 12) of gardens, and 'dises, i.e. parks, or peapools, luxuriance, shment; indeed, Solon nature thus cultivated 24. 6) likens the enclosed well-watered garden, blessed, Gen. 27. 27; when viewed from above fruit trees, esp. the olive were the characteristic. These gardens were of the rich John 19. 41 were chiefly grown in: 21. 2; Numb. 11. 5; Lev. (Deut. 11. 10), with fruit 6. 2), and fruits (Ecc. usually on hilly ground before and after plant 6; Isa. 5. 2, 6; Matt. 21 hedged in (Ps. 80. 12), (Isa. 27. 3). N.B.—Names marked * do not occur in the Authorised ALLON. Probably the evergreen oak [OAK].

Allon bachuth is translated 'oak of weeping,' Gen. 38. 8, margin.

ALMOND. The familiar Amygdales communis, always cultivated in the East. Its Hebrew name 'shaked', i.e. 'hasten,' (Jer. 1. 11, 12) alludes to its early blossoming (January in Palestine, see Calendar). It grows wild on Lebanon and in Moab. Jacob sent almonds, among Canaan's best fruits, to Joseph (Gen. 43. 11). 'The almond-tree shall flourish' (Ecc. 12. 5) likens the hoary head of age to the pinkish-white crown of the almond when its blossom covers the yet leafless boughs. [HAZEL.]

ALMUG (1 Kin. 10. 11) or ALGUM (2 Chr. 9. 11). Probably the Indian red sandal wood Pterocarpus santalinus, very heavy and fine-grained (not the familiar scented wood); or the Sisso or black wood of Bombay. Imported from Ophir, direct or through Tyre; if from N. Africa, it might be the non-aromatic citron wood [TIVINE]. Solomon made musical instruments and inlaid work of alms from Ophir.

ALOE or LIGN-ALOE TREE. Unidentified.

Cultivated (Numb. 24. 6), and reckoned among the 'chief spices' (Song 4. 14); used for scenting robes, &c. (Ps. 45. 8; Prov. 7. 17) & in Jewish burial; John 19. 39. The identification with the Agallochum of commerce is unlikely, that tree being found in E. China only.

ANISE. (Matt. 23. 23.) Anethum graveolens, or dill, an umbelliferous plant very like the caraway. [CUMMIN.] Extensively cultivated for seasoning and medicine.

APPLE. Heb. Tappuch; probably the apricot.

Palestine is too hot for apples, &c.; the quince will not suit the context, and is not esteemed highly in the E. The citron is a post-Capivity introduction. The 'apple' is described as giving shade, and as a sweet, strengthening ('comfort') fragrant fruit (Song 2. 3, 5, & 7, 8, & 8. 5); also as a familiar native tree (Isa. 1. 12). The apricot, universally cultivated from early times, is, after the fig and vine, the staple fruit of Palestine (Nat. Hist. Bible, pp. 334–5). 'Apples of gold in pictures of silver,' Prov. 25. 11, seems to refer to the golden apricot set in its pale silvery foliage.

ASH TREE. (Isa. 44. 14.) Heb. oren. Probably the panna ash (Fraxinus ornus); Arab. aran.

The LXX. translate 'pine.' Our ash tree is unknown in Syria.

BALM or BALSAM

gum of Balanocedrus Still used medicinally (Jr. Jer. 8. 22. A native of Arab 43. 11) probably in the sub-esp. at Jericho and Engedi district, it was carried in the Tinn. It is still cultivated for ages, but is scarce and East. Ishmaelites import into Tyre: Ezek. 27. 17.

The Heb. name tsori is or lentisk, and to balanocedrus BARLEY. The two six-rowed (H. hexastich) Barley harvest (April an weeks or a month, both c (Ruth 1. 22, &c.) So in Egypt destroyed the barley: the earliest grown and coming contemptuous force of 'barley' (Ezek. 12. 19, of interest price).

THORN-HEDGE. Probably various rambling prickly shrubs, or even herbs, are indicated. These names, in the A. V. translate 18 Heb. words, some identifiable by their similarity to current Arabic plant-names: — viz. (1) cheked 'thorns,' Prov. 15. 19, as Arabic chekad, i.e. the prickly Solanum sodomaeum, or also Sodom-apple, still used for hedges; (2) shamir 'briers,' Isa. 7. 23, &c., as Arabic shamir, i.e. the very flexible Paliurus aculeatus, or Christ's thorn, abundant about Jerusalem, and the supposed material of the crown of thorns; (3) silon 'brier,' Ezek. 2. 6 & 28. 4, as Arabic sillon, i.e. Ruscus aculeatus, butcher's room. The most formidable and remarkable thorn-ree of Palestine is the Zizyphus spinachristi, the subk or jubbe tree. The Vulgate translates dardar 'thistles,' Gen. 3. 18 by Latin tribulus (whence English 'tribulation'), i.e. Centaurea calcitrapa, the common thistle of Palestine. Tribulus (GK.), is the thistle of Mat. 7. 16.

In the N. T. 'thorns' is the general rendering of akathia, applying probably some of the familiar thorny bushes or trees, a hotter and drier portions of Palestine, thorns and prickles developed on trees and plants of almost every kind, from oaks to clovers. In all rocky and parched situations, plants become spiny, the free development of the leaf being checked. Hence the Hebrew language is exceptionally rich in names of thorny plants. In the Bible, 'thorns' signify weeds, man's pest (Gen. 3. 18; ex. 4. 3 & 12. 13; Mat. 13. 22), which mark desolation (Isa. 34. 13; Isa. 10. 18), and are good only for fuel (Ps. 58. 9; Eccles. 7. 6; Isa. 33. 12). In the plains, thistles are still the only fuel.

BULRUSH, FLAG, PAPER-REED, REED, RUSH pulsant in A. V. six Heb. words. — (1) Gomē, 'bulrush' ('ark of,' Ezod. 2. 3; 'cane of,' Isa. 18. 2), is the papyrus of Egypt (Cyperus papyrus); in Arabic babber, whence the Eng. 'paper,' (originally a network of sliced papyrus-pith, compacted by beating and rying). Bruce saw fast wherries of platted papyrus used in Abyssinia. Extinct in Lower Egypt, it still grows on the plain of Gennesaret, and abundantly by Huleh (Waters of Merom). — (2) Achu, (Gen. 41. 2, A. V. 'meadows'; Job 8. 11, 'flag,' rightly). It is some rush with edible tuber and pasturable leaves; rob. Cyperus esculentus. — (3) Sāph, (Ex. 2. 3, 5; Isa. 1. 6, A. V. 'flags'; Jonah 2. 5, A. V. 'weeds'), probably means water weeds, generically. — (4) Kāneh, hence Eng. 'cane,' A. V. 'reed,' 'cane,' or 'stalk.' — (5) Agmōn occurs several times, e.g. Isa. 58. 5, A. V. 'bulrush,' and is probably from the allusion 'how men his head' the Arundo donax, or common reed of Palestine, remarkable, esp. beside Jordan, for its light and flexibility (Mat. 11. 7). — (6) Arēth (Isa. 7. A. V. 'paper-reeds'; probably is any marsh reeds).

RUSH, the burning. Ezod. 3. 2; rather, the thorn-bush, Heb. senek. A small prickly acacia. Senecio adactylis, if the Heb. senek be the Arabic and Egyptian indica in Sinai. [SHITTAH.]

CALANUS or SWEET CANE. A scented reed. It is in the anointing oil (Ezod. 30. 35; ex. 30. 23; Isa. 43. 24), and in the anointing oil (Ezod. 30. 35; ex. 30. 23; Isa. 43. 24), probably India, which reeds abound, e.g. the familiar Andropogon squarrosus, exported as roosa oil. Persians call it (Fraseria), or Acorus calamus (Hooker).

CAMPFIRE. Henna (Lawsonia inermis): Song 4. 13. Henna for camphor, which was unknown to the ancients. Lawsonia inermis, a small tree with sweet-scented leaves. Its leaves yield the auburn or reddish-orange dye with which Eastern women still stain the finger and toe nails. It grows in the Holy Land, at Engedi only.

CASSIA. Aromatic bark of Cinnamomum cassia, &c., trees, allied to cinnamon, which grow only in E. of India. Cassia is the holy incense of the East (Ezod. 30. 34; comp. Ex. 30. 35). Moses' mention of cassia is perhaps the earliest evidence of intercourse between India and Egypt. [CINNAMOM.]

CEDAR. (1) A juniper (J. oxycedrus) used in purification (Lev. 14. 4, &c.). (2) The familiar Cedrus libani, native of elevated parts of the Lebanon, of the Taurus Mts. and in Mt. Libanus. Great forests in Lebanon supplied Nebuchadnezzar with cedars, and the 3 temples, (Solomon's, 2 Chr. 2. 8, Zerubbabel's, Ezod. 3. 7, Herod's, Josephus), with timber. 'The prince of trees.' A type of grandeur (Asyria & Egypt, Ezek. 28. 1-18; Isa. 35. 2, &c.), might (Isa. 2. 13), pride (Ps. 29. 5), constant with Ps. 92. 12 of David's, i.e. Christ's, kingdom (Ezek. 17. 23).

CHESTNUT TREE. Probably the Oriental plane, Platanus (Isa. 37. 35), or the LXX. translate; Heb. armon, i.e. 'the peeled,' Isa. 37. 35, describe its peculiar habit of shedding its bark.

CHOLER TREE. Isa. 37. 35. Common in Palestine. Cf. Ezod. 24. 14.

CINNAMOM. (Pro. 7. 17, &c.) The well-known inner aromatic bark of Cinnamomum zeylanicum, [CASSIA.]

COCKLE. Perhaps the stinking Arenaria: Job 31. 40. [A. V. 'Wid grapes,' Jer. 6. 2, 4.] The Heb. derivation suggests a plant of offensive smell.

CORIANDER. The common Coriandrum sativum. A native of S. Europe and W. Asia. Allied to aniseed and caraway. Used in Egypt to spice bread; hence compared with manna: Ezod. 16. 21; Num. 11. 7.

CORN. The A. V. renders ten distinct words by 'corn' in different conditions, e.g., 'standing c.', 'winnowed or clean c.', 'ear of c.', 'old c.', 'sheaf of c.', &c. The grain grown in Palestine comprises wheat, barley, millet, spelt ('stiches' A. V.), and perhaps rye occasionally. Oats are limited to much more northern latitudes. The plains of Palestine and Moab exported corn largely to Phoenicia: 1 Kin. 6. 11; Ezek. 27. 17; Acts 12. 20.

COTTON. The Heb. corpus, A. V. 'green' in Esth. 1. 6, is Sanskrit for 'cotton' (Gossypium herbaceum), cultivated in Egypt (as is believed) from early times, and discovered in India by Alexander. The Jews, not knowing the plant, probably included the imported fabric under "fine linen" [FLAX.]

CUCUMBER. (Num. 11. 5.) The large Cucumis chate & common C. sativus are grown in Egypt & Palestine.

The 'ledge in a garden of cucumbers' (Isa. 1. 8) alludes to the temporary huts raised on 4 poles, whence the watchers guard the field (esp. against jackals). It is conspicuous everywhere where the crop is gathered, as a ranged sprawling wreck; 'a booth that the copper smelter' (Job 27. 18).

CUMIN. rather CUMIN. The seed of Cuminum sativum, allied to and cultivated like coriander for its aromatic flavour; used to flavour bread and stews. 'The cumin is beaten out with a rod' (Isa. 28. 27), because too small and tender to be trodden out like corn. Christ contrasted the nice observance of the Law by the Pharisees in things indifferent, e.g. in tithing the meanest herbs, with their non-observance of the great principles of morality (Mat. 23. 23).

CYPRESS. (Isa. 44. 14). Cupressus sempervirens, of Lebanon; a very hard and durable wood. [GOPHER.]

DATES. (2 Chr. 31. 5, margin.) [PALM.]

EBONY. (Ezek. 27. 15.) Unidentified. The black heart-wood of various tropical African & Asiatic trees. ELM. A. V. of Hos. 4. 13 only. Heb. elah, i.e. the terebinth. [TURPENTINE-TREE.]

FIGS. The common fig (Ficus carica). 'To sit under his fig-tree' implies not only security, but complete protection, such as the fig-tree's dense foliage affords from sun and storm. Nathanael prayed under it (John 1. 48). Its earliest fruit appears in Feb., but its leaves unfold in March at the earliest through winter. Some 'green figs' (Song 2. 13) remain on the tree (Mat. 21. 32). Christ illustrated by these facts the signs of judgment impending over Jerusalem, and its hollow blind pretensions religion (Mat. 21. 33). Leafy amid the leafless, yet without the corresponding fruit. In very hot situations, e.g. by the Dead Sea, it is evergreen. The first ripe figs (Jer. 24. 2), a scanty and precious crop, are gathered in June. Easterns still reckon on figs the best produce (Jer. 28. 21). Figs dried & pressed into cakes (1 Sam. 23. 18) are yet, like dates, a staple food (see 1 Chr. 12. 40).

FIR. In A. V. designates generically coniferous trees, including cedar, cypress, and Pinus maritima. But Pinus halepensis, the Aleppo pine, is the most widely distributed fir in W. Palestine, and Pinus carica, very like the Scotch fir, crowns the highest peaks of Hashan and Gilead.

'Fir' is used in carpentry (1 Kin. 6. 15, 34; Song 1. 17); ship-building (Ezek. 27. 9); and for musical instruments (2 Sam. 6. 5); its height made it the stork's nesting-place (Ps. 104. 17).

FITCHES (Old Eng. for Vetches; Lat. Ficia), represents in A. V. the Heb. (1) Ketzach, Isa. 28. 25-27 (Nigella arvensis), which requires a stouter threshing-staff or flail than cumin [CUMIN]; (2) Cuscuta, Ezek. 4. 9, rather 'spelt' [BUT]. Elsewhere it may refer to a cereal grain. See Pulse.

The hot-tasted Nigella seeds are sprinkled over the flat cakes of Palestine, as caraways by us.

FLAG. Various water-side leafy plants. [BULRUSH.]

FLAX. The stalk fibre of Linum usitatissimum. In Egypt the chief source of fine linen (Isa. 19. 9), flax ripened even before barley (Ezod. 9. 32, Isa. 28. 25, Isa. 28. 25, Isa. 28. 25). Flax was an important Palestine crop in Hebrew times (Hos. 2. 9), and before the Conquest (cp. Rahab's story, Josh. 2. 6).

FRANKINCENSE. An aromatic resin, Heb. libanon, Gk. libanos, the oleum of commerce, shown by Dr. Birdwood to be produced only in Arabia and the E. coast of Africa from 3 species of Boswellia, or Frankincense tree, chiefly from B. frereana, or Yeggar.

Other trees of the genus exist in India, but pure frankincense is always spoken of as imported from Sheba (Arabia) into Syria (Jer. 6. 20, &c.) as at present. It was specially stored in the Temple for the morning and evening offering on the golden altar (Lev. 13. 5, cp. 1 Chr. 9. 29) and to sprinkle the showbread and meat offering. The Magi presented it to the infant Christ (Mat. 2. 11).

GALBANUM. (Exod. 30, 34.) A pungent gum-resin, perhaps produced by a large umbelliferous plant of Persia, used as an ingredient of incense.

GALL. Many Oriental bitter vegetable substances will answer to this. [HEX LUCK.]

The soldiers gave our Lord "vinegar to drink, mingled with gall." Matt. 27, 34. "Wine mingled with myrra": Mk. 15, 23—both meaning the common sour wine served out to the soldiers, with which some bitter herb or drug was mingled. The "gall" of the human body, Job 16, 13 & 20, 14, 25—is poison.

GARLICK. (Gen. 11, 5.) Allium sativum. [OXFORD.]

GOPHER-WOOD. (Gen. 6, 14.) Cedrus suggests the "Kopher," i.e. cypress, a good ship-building timber, most abundant in Chaldaea and Armenia.

Gopher & Kopher are certainly different words; they may be allied, but g and k are not often interchanged.—Cheyne.

GOURD. Cucurbita pepo, the bottle gourd, used in the E. for shading arbour, is known as el kerra. El kerra, the castor oil tree, by a confusion of names, has been wrongly identified with Jonah's gourd.

Rapid growth & sudden decay are very characteristic of the gourd.

GOURD, WILD. (2 Kin. 4, 38—40.) Perhaps the colocynthis of the sandy desert, abundant at Gilgal and beside the Dead Sea only. But the globe (Cucumis prophetarum) and squinting cucumber (Echium elaeagnum) are common and indigenous.

GRAPE. Vitis vinifera, a native of the East [VINE].

GRASS, HAY: A. V. of several Heb. words. (1) Motzir (Prov. 27, 25; Isa. 15, 6); (2) hahashah, A. V. "chaff" (Isa. 5, 24 & 33, 11), really grass cut and dried. See Introduction on EAST GRASS.

After-grass is mentioned in Isa. 1. Though mown in the E. grass is never made into hay and stored, but simply laid in heaps for a time. About 100 species of grass are known in Palestine.

"Grass of the field," (Matt. 6, 30), including all low-growing plants, means herbage. The grass of warm climates grows rather in tufts than as sward or turf. Patches on the flat roofs or rocky soil being quickly submersed, typify sudden destruction; so chaf or straw, i.e. the dry herbage &c. of the wind-swept plateaux.

GROVE. (1) Heb. ehel (Gen. 21, 33); "tree" in 1 Sam. 22, 6 & 31, 13, probably the Arabic ash, i.e. the tamarisk. (2) Elsewhere, Heb. Asherah, an idol (Lev. 24, 13 &c.).

HAZEL. Heb. luz (as in Arabic), the almond tree. Jacob used its peeled boughs (Gen. 30, 37). [ALMOND.]

HEATH. Heb. jarar (Jer. 17, 6 & 48, 6), certainly the stunted arbut (Juvieria sabina) of the barren and rocky parts of the desert, the Arabic arbut.

HEMLOCK. Isa. 10, 4; elsewhere "gall." A. V.: in Amos 6, 12, runder "wormwood". Some rank, bitter-tasted weed of corn-field, &c.: probably the poppy.

HERBS. A general term, but broth, 2 Kin. 4, 39, Isa. 18, 4 & 29, 19, probably describes the cabbage tribe.

HUSKS. The pods of the carob or locust tree, Ceratonia siliqua, fodder for cattle and horses.

Classical authors term these pods the most miserable of food (cp. Luke 15, 16). The Greek of "locusts" in Matt. 2, 4, shows the insect (akria) to be meant; not the Ceratonia pods.

HYSSOP. Heb. ezob, Arab. anaf, Capparis spinosa, the caper plant, a low evergreen shrub, about a foot high, growing out of walls (1 K. 4, 35) and chinks of rocks in Sinai, Jerusalem, &c.

Used for sprinkling (Ex. 12, 23), and so apparently in the purification-service of the Tabernacle and Temple: hence figuratively spoken of as purifying—Purge me with hyssop (Ps. 51, 7; Heb. 9, 19—21). The hyssop of John 19, 29 was probably a bunch used in purification fixed on a reed (Matt. 27, 48).

JUNIPER. Almost certainly not the European juniper. Probably a very large kind of broom (Heb. rotem, Arab. Retem, Retama rotem, or Genista retem). Abundant in the desert (Isa. 19, 4), and conspicuous for its beautiful pink blossoms. The thick and numerous roots produce the finest charcoal (hence "rods of juniper," Isa. 41, 19), but they are so bitter as to be eaten only in extremity (Job 30, 4).

LADANUM. A. V. "myrrh," Heb. lot (Gen. 37, 25 & 43, 11 only); probably Ladanum (Arabic ladan), the gum of the cistus or rock-rose, common in Palestine, esp. on Mount Carmel, and perhaps still collected.

LEEKs. The common Allium porrum (Num. 11, 5).

LENTILs. The seeds of several kinds of vetch. Cultivated abundantly as a staple food. 2 Sam. 17, 28 & 25, 11; Ezek. 4, 9. Red pottage (Gen. 25, 30) is soup of lentils. Ervum lens is the modern Cercaria arabica.

LILY. Heb. Shulan. A name clearly applied figuratively rather than even generically. [ROSE.] The Arabic word (identical with Heb.) describes the tulip, ranunculus, pansies' eye, and esp. the scarlet anemone—Palestine's floral glories (Bible Calendar, January).

Lilywork, i.e. flowers, adorned the capitals of the Temple's pillars.

MALLOWs. The Heb. derivation suggests some saline plant; perhaps the orache or Sea Purslane (Atriplex halimus), edible in extremity (Job 30, 4) only.

MANDRAKES. The Heb. word means "love-plants". The modern mandrake (Mandragora officinalis), a very strange-looking plant of the Solanum (potato) family, supposed to resemble the human figure, is found wild throughout Palestine, and valued by the natives, who still believe that it ensures conception (Gen. 30, 14). Its smell is sickly but not unpleasant; its taste sweet.

MANNA. The sugary secretion of various Oriental trees and shrubs, esp. the manna ash (Fraxinus ornus) and tamarisk, is the manna of commerce. But, beyond a fancied similarity in taste, this is unconnected with Israel's miraculous food; nor does it in the least resemble "coriander seed".

MASTICK. (Hist. Sasanica 54.) The fragrant white resin of a small tree, the lentisk (Platanus lentiscus). Common in the East. Various cods, esp. to flavour wine, were made from it. It was chewed to scum the breath.

MELONS. The common melon (Cucumis melo) and water-melon (Citrullus vulgaris) of the East.

MILLET. (Ezek. 4, 9.) The small grain of various large cultivated grasses, of the genera pennisetum, setaria, and sorghum. The food of a great part of the population of S. Europe, the East, and Africa.

MINT. The garden mint (Mentha sativa), a favourite Eastern condiment. Matt. 23, 23. [CUMMIN.]

MULBERRY. Not our mulberry. [SYCAMORE.] Perhaps the familiar trembling of the aspen or trembling poplar (populus tremula) is intended by "The sound of a grove in the top of the beech" (2 Sam. 17, 22).

MUSTARD. The common mustard (Sinapis alba) attains in Palestine a height of 10 feet.

Called "a tree" (Matt. 23, 31), but also correctly "a bush" (Isa. 61, 1); linets and finches settle "in lodge" (A. V.; Isa. 61, 1) in flocks on it for its seeds. The tropical mustard tree (Cassia persea) is not a native of the Holy Land proper (Isa. 60, 8; Isa. 60, 8; Isa. 60, 8).

MYRRH. The aromatic resin of several thorny shrubs (Balsamodendron) of the dry region of Arabia and E. Africa, much used in incense, for perfume (the anointing oil), and in embalming. [LADANUM.]

MYRTLE. (Myrtus communis), common in Palestine, Heb. and Arab. Andas, whence Hadeshah, El Eshar, Ezek. 47, 12.

NETTLES. A. V. of (1) Heb. Kimshah, the large stinging-nettle (Urtica pilulifera), so common in the ruins of Palestine (Isa. 34, 13; Isa. 3, 6). (2) Heb. Chural (Job 30, 7; Prov. 24, 31; Zeph. 2, 9), perhaps the troublesome prickly acanthus (A. spinosus); and the common nettle, for it grows in the corn-fields.

NUT. A. V. of Heb.:—(1) Eger, Song 6, 11, Arab. phans (WALNUT); (2) Botnim (in Jacob's propitiation present to Joseph, Gen. 43, 11), the equivalent of Arabic butim, the pistachio nut (Platanus vera).

OAK. A. V. of 6 Heb. words. Elak is the "bell tree" or terebinth; the others seem interchangeable: shel alfon (ALLOS) may represent the evergreen, shel [PLAIN] the deciduous oaks. Of the 3 species common in Palestine (Q. infectoria, Q. agrifolia or Valonea oak, Q. pseudo-coccifera) the last, the prickly evergreen oak with leaves like very small holly, is most abundant, esp. as brushwood. Noble oaks of Quercus survive in the park-like woods, chiefly of the deciduous Q. agrifolia.

Individual oaks were (and yet) famous, e.g. the chem, Mamre, Morch [TARS]; they mark burial places of the rich, and high places for idolatrous worship (Isa. 4, 23). The oak tree's strength (Amos 2, 9) and a great emblem (Isa. 41, 19). [OAK.]

OIL TREE. (Lev. 41, 19; in 1 K. 6, 25 "olive tree"; Numb. 8, 15, "pine branches"), the Oleaster (Elaeagnus angustifolia) common throughout Palestine (WILD OLIVE). Its wood is valuable for furniture (1 King 6, 25). And the olive tree (Isaiah 41, 19) is the tropical Jordan valley oak.

OLEANDER. See Willow.

OLIVE TREE. Olea europaea. Grafted on wild stock. Most abundant in Upper Galilee, Hebron, &c. but Jewish grown universally, as oil presses about ruins and deserted vine grove, with their gutters, troughs, and cisterns hewn in the rock. No plant yields so much for man's use, and the bulk of man's food is composed of it. Besides 10 to 15 gallons of oil per tree, the berries form the husbandman's only relish, and it provides butter, candles, soap, and medicine. It is the emblem of abundance, happiness, and blessing, and of prosperity (being evergreen: Ps. 136, 4). In spring, its white blossoms fall in showers (Job 24, 30). [ONION.]

OLIVE, WILD. (Rom. 11, 17—24.) Not the Oleaster. [OIL TREE.] The ungrafted wild olive, which produces like our crab-apple, a diminutive and worthless fruit. The olive is admitted to privileges hitherto exclusively Arab. (the wild grafted abnormality into the cultivated, is not so admitted).

ONIONS. (Numb. 11, 5.) The common Allium cepa.

PALM TREE. (Phoenix dactylifera). Date Palm. This palm, once cultivated largely in the hot Jordan valley, is nearly extinct. It is yet grown in ravines E. of the Dead Sea. Anciently it was a feature of Palestine, whose classic name was Syria Phoenicia, i.e. Phoenicia. The old name of the palm tree, Phoenix (Gen. 41, 7) means "felling of palm trees"; Phoenicia, Ezek. 27, 14, Jericho, the "city of palm trees" (Isa. 60, 8), had a palm-grove 7 miles long (Jerusalem). Between Phoenicia & "house of dates" and the top of Olivet, the multitude can dwell palm "branches" (John 12, 19; John 8, 31 & 35) or "bushes".

whereby to carpet our Lord's triumphal path into Jerusalem. "The righteous shall dwell as a palm tree" (Ps. 92, 12) alludes to its luxuriant growth in apparently barren and dry soils. Isaiah moisture supplies it, for wherever the palm grows, digging will discover water. It ornamented Solomon's (1 Kin. 5, 2, &c.) and Ezekiel's (40. 16 &c.) Temples. It represented Jervy victorious, on the first Maccabean coins, and Judas vanquished, on Vespasian's coins. [DATE.]

PANNAG (Ezek. 27. 17), "millet" (Syria version). PAPER REED (Isa. 19. 7.) See Bulrush. PINE TREE (Isa. 41. 19. & 60. 13.) See Fir, Oil Tree. POMEGRANATE. The fruit of Punica granatum. A great favourite in the East (e.g. Egypt, Numb. 23. 1), and plentiful in Palestine (Levit. 19. 23; Num. 13. 23). A light wine was made from its juice (Song 8. 2). The rind of the fruit is an astringent medicine, and used for tanning leather. Several places in the Holy Land were named "Ammon," i.e. pomegranate. The fruit was a model for ornaments, e.g. on the High Priest's robe (Ex. 28. 33), and architectural, in the Temple (1 King. 7. 18, &c.). The loved one's temples are likened to its rosy colouring (Song 4. 5).

POPLAR. (Heb. libnah, 'White'.) Gen. 30. 17 may refer to the storax, Arab. Labna (STACTE); Hos. 4. 13 to the poplar, 3 kinds occurring in Palestine. [MULBERRY.] PULSE. (Deut. 1. 12, 16.) The Heb. word is a general one signifying 'seeds'. All kinds of peas and lentils are much used in Palestine; comp. 2 & 23. 11; beans, beris, and parched pulse (Levit. 19. 17; Ezek. 4. 9 [VINICIS]).

PLAIN, A.V. of Heb. eloh, should be translated Oak (Gen. 12. 6. (of Moab); 13. 28. &c. (of Mamre); Jude 1. 11. (of Zaanaim); 9. 6 (of the pillar in Shechem; see Josh. 24. 26; Judg. 4. 37 (of Mezonim, or, of the Enchanters); 1 Sam. 10. 9 (of Labe)).

PLANE TREE*. See Chestnut. REED. (2 Kings 18. 21, &c.) Various tall grassy and grass-like plants are thus indicated. The Mediterranean reed is Arundo donax (shaker). [SULPHUR.]

ROSE, ROSE OF SHARON. Heb. khabsatzelet, the derivation of which suggests a bulbous plant. Apparently, like 'lily', used figuratively; but if any particular flower, probably the Arab. khavassah, the sweet Narcissus tazetta, most abundant on the Plain of Sharon (Song 2. 1). Rose, (Isa. 35. 1) may denote equally the Narcissus, or bulbous plants generally.

But wild roses abound in Syria and Palestine. Our rose is found only in Galilee and Lebanon.

RUDE. (Luke 11. 42.) The common Ruta graveolens. Cultivated by the Hebrews, as in our cottage gardens. It was esteemed a prophetic, a disinfectant, and a febrifuge. [CURIE.]

RUSH. Job 8. 11, Heb. gomé; Isa. 9. 14, Heb. agmon. See Bulrush.

RYE. Probably 'spelt', Triticum spelta, Heb. casemeth, (A.V. itches, Ezek. 4. 9). Arabic chircaah. [CORN]. Rye is a grain of more Northern latitudes.

SAFFRON. (Song 4. 14.) The fragrant stigmas or upper part of the pistil of the Crocus sativus. Grown in Europe & the East for saffron dyes, henna, drinks, &c.

SHITTAH TREE SHITTIM WOOD (Isa. 41. 19). Hebrew scholars now translate "acacia"; its identity with Acacia seyal (gum arabic tree) seeming absolutely certain (Nat. Hist. Bible, pp. 391-3).

Apparently the only available timber in the desert, where it is still found in the very driest situations. It abounds in the sultry east, the Plains of Shittim (Moab; Num. 23. 1). A very hard and close-grained wood of a fine orange-brown. The wood-work and furniture of the ark and Tabernacle was of shittim wood.

SOPH. (Jer. 22. 3; Mat. 3. 2.) Refers to a vegetable alkali (Arab. El kail), procured by burning, like kelp, the Salsola and Simmondsia, salt plants abundant on the coast and by the Dead Sea. 'Nitre' in Jer. 2. 22 is a mineral alkali, lys.

SODOM, VINE OF. (Deut. 32. 32.) Probably the "apple of Sodom", Arabic oheh (Calotropis procera). This most peculiar shrub grows round the shores of the Dead Sea only. Its fruit, of the size of an apple, and bright yellow, only contains the silky tufts of white filaments, attached to small seeds.

It bursts when touched.

SPICERY. Heb. nechoth; probably = Arabic naka'at, the gum tragacanth from the Asparagus tragacantha. Imported into Egypt by Joseph's purchasers (Gen. 27. 25); part of Jacob's present (Gen. 43. 11); 'Precious things' in A.V. 2 Kings 23. 15; Isa. 29. 3 (Heb. nechoth), are probably gums for incense burned in the temple (Ex. 30. 35).

SPIKENARD. Heb. nard (Song 1. 12 & 4. 14). This nard is the root of a small herbaceous plant (Nardostachys jatamansi) of the Himalaya, allied to valerian.

It is exported all over the East and to the Levant. It has an aromatic smell, and is an ingredient in unguents and various other preparations. That which Mary poured on our Lord's head was 'very precious'. Mat. 26. 7; Mk. 14. 3 very costly, John 12. 3.

STACTE. (Ex. 30. 34.) Gum of the storax (Syriga officinalis), which yields a perfume and medicine.

SYCAMINE TREE. (Luke 17. 6.) A mulberry [MULBERRY] the white and black (Morus alba and negra), are cultivated in the East for their fruit and for their foliage, on which silk worms are fed, esp. in the Lebanon.

SYCOMORE. The fig-mulberry (Ficus sycomorus). One of the most valuable trees in the East, both for timber (Isa. 9. 10), shade, and fruit (Amos 7. 14). The wood is very durable, and of it the mummy coffins of the Egyptians were made; the wide spreading branches and the broad dense evergreen foliage afford a welcome shade (by the roadside, Luke 19. 4). Unable to bear frost (Ps. 78. 47), it was limited to the plains and lowlands ('vale', Heb. Shephelah) of the coast, and to the Jordan valley (1 Kin. 10. 27; 1 Chr. 27. 28). The fruit is a small and very poor fig, much eaten by the poorer classes (cp. Amos 7. 14). Distinguish the English guinea, which is a maple.

SWEET WINE. (Isa. 43. 24; Jer. 6. 20.) [CALANUS.] TAMARISK. See Grove (1).

TARES. (Mat. 13. 24-30.) Gk. zizania, Arabic zizana, Lolium temulentum, bearded darnel. 'The only grass with a poisonous seed' (of the corn weeds of Palestine; it is weeded out by the hand, or, more generally, the stems are cut while green. 'Entirely like wheat, till the ear appears.') TEIL TREE. (Isa. 6. 13.) See Turpentine Tree. TEREBINTH. See Turpentine Tree.

THISTLE, THORNS. See Bramble. THYNE-WOOD. (Rev. 18. 12.) Callitris quadrivalvis, N. African citron-wood, akin to the yppress.

It yields one of the most beautiful and durable of known woods. It was in great request by the Romans, who gave immense prices for arbores made of it. Much valued vases and platters are now made of it in Algeria.

TURPENTINE TREE. Eucalyptus. 24. 16. 'Tell tree', Isa. 6. 13; Elm, Hos. 4. 13; 'Oak', Gen. 35. 4, Judg. 6. 11, 1 Chr. 13. 14, 2 Sam. 18. 9, 1 Chr. 10. 12, Ezek. 6. 13; 'Elah', 1 Sam. 17. 2, 19, & 21. 9 (Pistacia terebinthus).

Common throughout the Levant. The solitary and weird-looking terebinth replaces the oak in warm and dry localities of S. and E. Palestine, esp. in Moab, Ammon, and the neighbourhood of Heshbon. A small deciduous much-branched tree, sometimes attaining to considerable size; the leaves are pinnate, and the very small flowers are produced in lateral clusters; these are succeeded by small oval berries.

The turpentine, a kind of balsam, with a pleasant smell, is produced from incisions in the bark, and is used to favour wine, sweetmeats, &c. in the East.—Distinguish turpentine of pine tree.

VINE. (1) A creeping plant, De. 32. 32; 2 K. 4. 39. [GOURD]; (2) the common grape vine (Vitis vinifera), extraordinarily luxuriant in Palestine (cp. Jer. 48. 32; Num. 13. 23).

A plant cultivated in the East from the earliest times (Gen. 3. 29); thence introduced into the West. The monuments prove its early cultivation in Egypt (now neglected); see Gen. 40. 9; Ps. 78. 47, &c. Found in Palestine by Abram (Gen. 14. 18); and by Joshua's spies (Num. 13. 23).

It was the emblem of Judaea on some Herodian coins. Near houses, the vine was often trained on a trellis (as in Italy); hence, to sit every man under his vine (Mic. 4. 4, &c.) evidenced peace and security. From the special care needed to establish, protect and tend the vine, Israel is called God's vineyard (Isa. 3. 7; Ps. 80); comp. God's church in the Bible (Isa. 5. 2, 3). The "choice vine," (Isa. 5. 2), which yields soft-stoned grapes, which make the Sultana raisin (Gen. 40. 11; Isa. 5. 2; Jer. 2. 21).

The lodge for the watcher (from loper, to pass the night), is still seen among the vines (Isa. 5. 2), which, unlike other crops, are always held in from the cattle (Ps. 80. 12; Mat. 23. 34). As in France, the vines are carefully pruned (John 15. 2). A watch-tower and wine-press are indispensable to every vineyard (Isa. 5. 2; Mat. 21. 33). The rock-hewn press, with a trough for the grapes and a second for the juice trodden out (Job 3. 17), survives on all Palestine's bare hills.

Mr. Carmel, Moab, Gilead, Southern Judaea, and even where the vine does not grow, long extinct (Isa. 16. 10), are attested with them. The hard work of treading was never undertaken singly (Isa. 5. 2); the juice spouted on the treader's clothes (Gen. 40. 11).

The derivation or context of all Bel. terui for wine imply fermentation. The fresh juice when boiled becomes "dibs", A.V. 'honey', a thick syrup (Gen. 43. 11; Ezek. 22. 27). Old leathern 'bottles' (Mat. 3. 17), &c. skins, being too inelastic to yield to the expansion of new wine in which the fermentation had not quite ceased, would burst.

Wine on the Isa. (15. 2), &c. kept unstrained, gained in body.

VINE, WILD. (Isa. 5. 2.) The fox-grape. It bears a small black fruit, astringent as a sloe, only fit for vinegars. [COCKLE.]

WALNUT*. Heb. ayor, Arab. ghana. See Nut (1). WHEAT. Triticum vulgare, spelta, and convolvum.

The two principal varieties cultivated are the summer and winter wheats (T. aestivum and T. hyemalis). Wheat is sown after the early rains in Nov. or Dec., and reaped in May, or in June (see Calendar) on the higher lands. Corn is still trodden out of the ear by cattle, or pressed out with a sled, and winnowed with a shovel, i.e. by throwing up the grain against the wind on threshing-floors upon very high hills. The straw is usually burnt in the earth within the houses or their courtyards.

WILLOW, in A.V. translates the Hebrew:—(i.) Tephthach (Ezek. 17. 5) = Arabic safaf, i.e. the willow generally; (ii.) Arab, the 'willow of the brook' (Lev. 23. 40; Isa. 44. 4, &c.), which must surely be the Oleander, the characteristic and beautiful feature of all the wadya (watercourses) and glens of Palestine.

In Ps. 137. 3 it is probably a poplar (Populus euphratica). The 'willow' has been identified with the weeping-willow (Salix babingtonii), but this is not a native of W. Asia, but of China.

WORMWOOD. Various Artemisia are common in Palestine. Noxious and bitter, wormwood typifies the evil results of sin (Rev. 8. 11). See Hemlock, Gall.

THE number of animals mentioned in the Bible is considerable. No less than 43 Hebrew names of animals, 35 of birds, 14 of reptiles, and 26 of invertebrate animals occur. On closer examination, the way in which many of these occur, and the frequency of reference to certain species, give an insight into the character of the country at the time, and indicate the great changes in its condition since the earlier books of the Bible were written. Of the quadrupeds mentioned, one has been for ages extinct; six or seven others are to be found in Western Asia; while many more are so scarce, that they could not now afford a subject in Palestine which would be generally familiar. The land, now bare, was then well wooded: hence the change.

We have a clue sometimes to the epoch of the disappearance of certain species. Thus the re'em (Ps. lxxviii), i.e. the aurochs, the extinct wild ox (Bos primigenius) is a familiar emblem of untamed strength and ferocity in the earlier books of the Bible, but is only once alluded to after the time of David (Isa. lxxviii). It has nothing to do with the fabled one-horned unicorn of heraldry, our version being here incorrect. And two horns, as we see from Deut. xxxiii. 17, where its horns symbolize the two tribes of Ephraim and Manasse. It became extinct also in Assyria about 1000 B.C., as the country became more thickly populated (Lepsius).

Mammals, or beasts, are divided in Scripture into cattle, or domesticated, and beasts of the field, i.e. wild animals; and further, according to their uses for sacrifice and food, into clean, i.e. ruminants, and unclean, which includes all other classes. The creation of mammals is placed last before man in the chronology of Gen. i, a position strikingly corroborated by the researches of geology.

APE. Only mentioned among the precious things imported by Solomon from Tarshish (1 Kings x. 22; 2 Chron. ix. 21). No monkey was ever indigenous in Palestine. As the Hebrew word is identical with the Tamil or South Indian name for this animal, it is clear that the Tarshish of Solomon must have been in South India or Ceylon.

ASS. The most important of the beasts of burden in Palestine, where it is a much finer and larger animal than in more Northern countries, and able to maintain considerable speed for several hours continuously. It was ridden by persons of condition. As an emblem of strength, Issachar is compared to a strong ass crouching down between two burdens (Gen. xlix. 14). As an emblem of peace, in contrast with the horse, used only for warlike purposes, our Lord, according to the prophecy (Zech. ix. 9), entered Jerusalem on an ass's colt, a peaceful judge, not an earthly conqueror. The ass was employed in agriculture. An ox and ass were not to be yoked together, to teach that improper alliances in religious or civil life are to be avoided.

ASS, WILD. One of the most untameable and fleet of wild animals; hence the emblem of the wild and predatory Ishmael (Gen. xvi. 12). In Job and in the Prophets, the wild nature of this animal is frequently referred to, as in Job xl. 12; xxxix. 6-8; xxiv. 5; Isa. xxxiii. 14; Jer. ii. 24; xiv. 6; Hos. viii. 9. Wild asses still exist in central Asia and in the deserts of Africa. The species are distinguished by different names in the Hebrew.

BADGER. Badger skins are frequently mentioned as used for the covering of the tabernacle. Though the badger is found in Palestine, yet the word so translated most probably indicates the duogon, a very large species of the seal family found in the Red Sea, and the skin of which is used for such purposes to this day.

BAT. The bat is named among unclean winged things (Lev. xi. 19; Deut. xiv. 18), and as inhabiting ruins and desolate places (Isa. ii. 20). Thousands of bats of many species swarm in the caverns of the Holy Land.

BEAR. The fierceness of the bear, especially when robbed of its young, is frequently alluded to (2 Sam. xvii. 8; Prov. xvii. 12; Hos. xlii. 8). It was well known and very destructive. Since the destruction of the forests it is now rarely seen south of Lebanon and Hermon, where it is common. I once met one in Galilee. The Syrian bear (Ursus syriacus) scarcely differs from the brown bear of Europe.

BEAST, WILD. Two words so translated signify beasts in general, but in Isa. xlii. 22; xxxiv. 16; Jer. i. 39, the word ayin, meaning "howlers", is so rendered. The jackal (Canis aureus), called by the Arabs "the son of howling", is the animal intended. It was, and is, very common in Palestine, in ruins and rocks, about towns, and in deserts alike. Another word, zifim, translated "wild beasts of the desert" (Isa. xlii. 21; xxxiv. 14), refers to the hyena, as does teebus, wrongly rendered "speckled bird" (Jer. xli. 9). The hyena (Hyaena) is found everywhere in caves and tombs. It feeds on meat and bones, and often digs into graves for human remains.

BEHEMOTH, i.e. "great beasts," a word used only in the Bible; but in Job it is a synonym for the hippopotamus, that mighty power of the habits and wondrous might of which the psalmist depicts. The hippopotamus was well known to the ancient Egyptians, and is still found in all the great rivers of Africa.

BOAR, WILD. Ps. lxxx. 12. "The bear out of wood doth waste it." This is the only allusion to wild boar in Scripture. It is, and doubtless must be common, having its lair in the woods, and straggling to vineyards.

BULL, WILD. The word so rendered in Isa. l. 21; Deut. xiv. 6, is neither the tame nor the wild, some species of large antelope, formerly much common than now. It is probably Adelphotis, the kudu or wild cow of the Arabs.

CAMEL. Perhaps the earliest animal utilized in service of man, and without the aid of which man in the deserts of Arabia would be impossible. He mentioned in the history of Abraham. On the way, i.e. humps, of camels (Isa. xxx. 6), was transferred to the merchandise of Assyria and Egypt. The camel's hump (Gen. xxxi. 34) was the large frame placed on a hump, to which the cradles or packs are attached. Camel is chiefly used in the flat countries which border Palestine. In hilly districts the ass is preferred. Its hair supplies a strong cloth, much harder and more than woollen cloth. Two proverbs regarding the camel are used by our Lord (Matt. xix. 24; Mark x. 26), in which the force of the illustration is simply in the animal.

CATTLE. Used from the beginning of time in agriculture, for milk, for their flesh, and as a sacrifice. The Hebrew language, like our own, has many words for the different ages and kinds of cattle. West of Jordan the cattle were generally fed; in the plains south and east they roamed in wild state. Such were the "bulls of Bashan" in hill country there are few horned cattle, and in the Jordan valley the Indian buffalo. Introduced from the East, and living in the marshes, takes their place.

CHAMOIS. Deut. xiv. 6. Not the animal known by that name, but the mouflon, or wild sheep, still lingers in Cyprus and Arabia Petraea.

CONEY. Mentioned among the unclean (Lev. xi. 29). Not our rabbit, but a very peculiar little animal, same size still found among the rocks, as related Ps. civ. 18. Its wisdom and defencelessness are noted by Solomon (Prov. xxx. 24-26). It cannot be it has no claws, only nails half developed; but holes in the rocks, and feeds only at dawn, always having sentries posted, at the approach from whom the whole party instantly disappears.

DOGS in the East were not the friends and companions of man, who only cultivated their instinct so far as to use them for protecting the flocks (Job xxx. 1). The Jews were never a hunting people, and never trained dogs individually; but encouraged, as is the case to this day, packs of dogs in all the towns and villages, where they are the common and only scavengers. From this habit the dog is looked on with loathing and aversion, as filthy and unclean; and though mentioned some 40 times in Scripture, it is almost always with contempt (Matt. vii. 1; 2 Sam. iii. 8; 2 Kings viii. 13; Isa. lvi. 3, &c.). So the Jews termed Gentiles "dogs," as Mohammedans do Christians to the present day. The habit of the pariah dogs of hunting and howling in packs all night is referred to in Ps. lix. 14, 15.

DRAGON. Two words are so translated. One (tanin), occurring in Isa. li. 9; Jer. li. 34; Ezek. xli. 3; xlii. 2 (whale A. V., but margin dragon), means the crocodile (see Leviathan). The other (tan), in Job xxx. 25, Isa. xxiv. 13; xlii. 32; xliii. 20; Ps. xlv. 19; Jer. ix. 1; x. 23; xiv. 6; xlix. 33; li. 37; Mic. i. 3; Mal. i. 8, is generally interpreted to mean the jackal.

DROMEDARY. Three words are thus rendered. In Isa. ix. 8 and Jer. li. 33 the word signifies a swift or finely-crested camel. In all the other passages the Hebrew words are different, and should be translated swift horse or mule.

ELEPHANT. In 1 Kings x. 22, the word translated is literally "elephants' teeth," and is the same word as is used in the Tamil of South India for the elephant to this day.

FALLOW DEER. Heb. Yachmur. The same word used to this day by the Arabs for the roebuck. Identical with the roebuck of Scotland, and which is still, though very, found in Palestine. It should doubtless be translated roebuck; and the word rendered roebuck in our version means the gazelle.

FERRET. Lev. xi. 30. Not our ferret, but some creeping thing, unclean. The Septuagint render it by the wee-mouse, but it is more probably a species of lizard.

FOX. The word shual, so translated, includes both fox and jackal, which are often spoken of together in the scriptures. The cunning of the fox is as proverbial there as among ourselves (Ezek. xlii. 14; Luke xlii. 33). In Ps. li. 10 the reference is not to the fox, but to the jackal, which is a carrion feeder. The 300 shualim which Samson snared and sent with brands among the Philistines' men were jackals, which hunt in large packs, and which might easily have caught in great numbers, while the fox is a solitary forager.

GOAT. The goat was an important item in the wealth of the patriarchs, and in the hilly countries of the East, where there is brushwood, it almost supersedes horned cattle. Job, living on an Arabian plain, had no goats. He is statedly bearing of an old he-goat as he leads the herd well known, and is mentioned in Prov. xxx. 31. The sheep to this day call a man of stately mien "a he-goat." is also used (Dan. viii. 5) as the symbol of the Macedonian empire. Our Lord's awful comparison of the parable of the righteous and the wicked at the last day is at once understood by those who know the habits of the East. The shepherd always has both sheep and goats together, for the sheep eat only the fine herbage, and the goats browse on what the sheep refuse. They stare and travel together in parallel columns, but do not intermingle more closely, and at night they range themselves. The goats are for the most part black, the sheep white, dappled, or piebald, forming a very marked contrast. A kid is usually taken for meat in preference to a lamb, because, equally good eating, it is of less value afterwards than the fleecy young sheep. The female kids are saved as much as male goats, milk being preferred to ewe's. The bottles the East are always of goatskin, tanned with the hair.

This serves to keep the water cool, and to prevent it from becoming brittle, especially if allowed to get dry, or exposed to the smoke of the tent (Josh. ix. 4; Ps. cxix. 83; Mark ix. 17; Luke v. 37). The hair of the goat is longer than that of the goat of this country (Mt. iv. 11).

GOAT, WILD, or IBEX. Still common in the wilderness of Sinai, and not very scarce in the rocky and wilder parts of Judaea and Moab. Whenever it occurs in Scripture, its wildness and wildness are alluded to.

GREYHOUND. Prov. xxx. 31. No doubt the Aorae, rightly suggested in the margin, is the true translation.

certainly appears to do, and Moses only speaks early to appearances, his object being only to show why the law was forbidden, though to all appearance it chewed cud, &c. because it did not divide the hoof.

HART & HIND. Either the fallow deer, still occasionally found, or the red deer, now extinct, or deer generally. The deer has afforded many illustrations to the psalmist and prophet—its affection (Prov. v. 19; Job xiv. 6), its habit of hiding its young (Job xxxix. 1), its sure-footedness (Ps. xlviii. 33; Hab. iii. 19), its swiftness (Ps. li. 8; Isa. xxxv. 6).

HEDGEHOG. Supposed by some to be intended the word kippod, rendered "bittern" in A. V.

MORSE. The horse in Scripture is rarely mentioned but in connection with war. The peaceful patriarchs never rear any; and because they were employed so closely for wars of conquest, the king was forbidden to multiply horses to himself (Deut. xvi. 16). Cavalry unsuited for military purposes in the hilly regions of Palestine. It is only in the great plain of Esdraelon that we read of the chariots of Jabin and Siera. David & Solomon were the first to establish a cavalry and chariot force. The horses of Assyria and Chaldees (Hab. i. 2), and of Egypt, were as famed as the dromedaries of Midian. Job looks more to the strength than the swiftness of the horse in his grand picture (Job xxxix. 19). But the horse should hereafter be of peaceful use, when on its bells shall be "holiness unto the Lord" (Zech. xiv. 20).

LEOPARD. Familiar to the writers of Scripture, type of cunning, from its habit of lying in wait by a cave or a village (Jer. v. 6; Hos. xii. 7), of fierceness (Isa. 6), of a conqueror's sudden swoop (Dan. vi. 8; Hab. i. 2). It was formerly very common, and is still to be found in small numbers wherever there is wood.

LION. The lion was common and well known. It is now unknown west of the Euphrates. No less than twelve times it is mentioned in Scripture, and is the favourite symbol of dignity (as in Num. xxiv. 9), courage (Pr. xviii. 1), power (Deut. xxxii. 20), strength (Judg. 18), ferocity (Ps. vii. 2). As the type of power and lion strength, it was the ensign of the tribe of Judah, as was so employed by Solomon in the decorations of the temple and of the king's houses. For the like reason, the Revelation the Lord Jesus is represented as the Lion of the tribe of Judah, conquering His enemies (Rev. 5). Its combined ferocity and craft caused it, on the other hand, to be used as an emblem of Satan (1 Pet. v. 8) of enemies of the truth (3 Tim. iv. 27). The lion was captured either by a pitfall or entangled in a net (2 Sam. xlii. 20; Ezek. xiv. 4, 8).

MOLE. Two words are thus rendered. In Isa. ii. some burrowing animal is certainly intended. Our moles do not exist in Syria, but there is blind-burrowing rodent, the mole-rat (Spalax typhus).

MOUSE. The word, both in Lev. xi. 29 and Isa. l. 17, is doubtless used generically, and would include various rats, dormice, jerboas, and hamsters, many of which are eaten by the Arabs, and of which about 100 species are found in the country. In 1 Sam. vi. 5, "the mice that marred the land" are the common field mice.

PYGARG. Some kind of antelope, probably the two horned addax (Antelope addax); Deut. xiv. 4.

ROE, ROEBUCK. The word so translated should gazelle, a most beautiful small antelope, and the only large game which is still very common in the country. From its beauty, it is used as a term of endearment (Cant. ii. 9; v. 17; viii. 14). Its fleetness is alluded to (2 Sam. ii. 18; 1 Chron. xii. 8); its timidity (Prov. i. Isa. xlii. 14). Tabitaba or Dorcas means "gazelle."

SATYR. Isa. xlii. 21; xxxiv. 14. By some referred to the dog-faced baboon worshipped by the Egyptians. The name word in Lev. xvii. 7 and 2 Chron. xi. 15, is rendered "devils," and the prophet may well have intended some ideal demon, as the Egyptian goat-worship was not of actual goat, but of a goat-headed satyr.

SHEEP. The sheep is the first animal named in the Bible (Gen. i. 4). It was the chief animal of sacrifice and the most important part of the wealth of the patriarchs. As the Holy Land itself became more agricultural the vast flocks were found chiefly with the border tribes. First in value was the milk of the flocks, then the wool. Hence sheep-shearing was celebrated by a feast like harvest-home (Gen. xxxviii. 12; 1 Sam. xxv. 2; 2 Sam. xiii. 2). Many Scripture figures are drawn from the flock. The shepherd leading the flock, calling the sheep by name, guarding them on the hill-side by night, folding the watering them—for in that dry climate the sheep must 10; Exod. ii. 16). The docility and patience of the sheep (Isa. lxxxvii. 7), but above all its employment in sacrifice, make it the principal type of the Redeemer, the Lamb as it had been slain, the Lamb slain from the foundation of the world, the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sins of the world.

SWINE were held the most abhorred and unclean of all animals (Isa. lxxv. 4; lxxvi. 3, 17). The swineherd's was the most degrading employment (Luke xv. 15). Our Lord indirectly rebuked the Gergesenes for keeping swine, albeit for the use of Gentiles (Matt. viii. 32). Swine are rarely if ever kept in Palestine.

UNICORN. The aurochs or bison. See page 1.

WEASEL (Lev. xi. 29) probably includes also the pole-net shows a knowledge of the habit of the hawk in sucking their young. The "great fish" that swallowed Jonah (i. 17) could not have been what we understand by a whale, from the small capacity of its throat. Whales, though now extinct there, were in ancient times known in the Mediterranean.

WOLF. Frequently mentioned in the Bible, generally as an emblem of ferocity and bloodthirstiness. Baugham, from the warlike character of the tribe, is compared to a wolf (Gen. xlix. 27). The savage nature of the wolf is alluded to in Ezek. xxxii. 27; Matt. vii. 15; x. 16; Luke 3; Acts xx. 29. Its habit of prowling at night is Jer. 6; Hab. i. 8; Zeph. iii. 3. The wolf still ranges in most parts of Palestine.

BIRDS.

The creation of birds is placed in Genesis after that of fishes and reptiles, and before manna's creation, according with what paleontology has indicated, birds becoming numerous in the chalk after the reign of the great monsters of the wealden. Birds are simply classed by Moses as clean and unclean. Before the Captivity the Jews had no domestic fowls except pigeons. There are few allusions to the habits of birds in the Old Testament. The instinct of migration is referred to (Cant. ii. 11, 12; Jer. viii. 7); the caging of song birds (Job xli. 1); and the snaring or netting of birds (Pa. cxvii. 7; xli. 6; Prov. vii. 23; Eccles. ix. 12; Ezek. xli. 13; Amos iii. 4). There are 7 Hebrew words for different kinds of bird-snare, the clap-net, the trap, and the decoy bird. The birds of Palestine are more diversified than in any other country of the same latitude, owing to the great variety of elevations and temperatures. The most conspicuous feature is the very great number of birds of prey.

BITTERN. Spoken of as inhabiting waste and desert places (Isa. xlv. 23; xxxiv. 11; Zeph. ii. 14). It is a shy solitary bird, inhabiting the recesses of swamps. It was once well known in English marshlands, and is still common in the reedy swamps of the Tigris. Its strange booming cry at night gives a sense of desolation like the hyena's wail.

COCK, HEN. Domestic poultry are not mentioned till after the Captivity. They were introduced through Persia from India into Europe, and were universal in our Lord's time, who compares His care for Jerusalem to that of a hen for her brood (Luke xlii. 34). "Cock-crow" was a definition of night (Matt. xiii. 35). In our Lord's warning to Peter, St. Mark says, "before the cock crow twice" (ch. xiv. 30), the other evangelists, "before the cock crow." Both expressions are identical. The cock crows about 2 a.m., and again at 4 a.m., which latter is ordinarily spoken of as cock-crowing. In the idioms of the South Sea Islanders, the earlier is called the "false cock-crow," the later the "true," or more commonly "the cock-crow."

CORMORANT. Heb. Shalak, i.e. the plunger (Lev. xi. 17; Deut. xiv. 17). Common and well-known on the coast and rivers of Palestine. In Isa. xxvii. 11; Zeph. ii. 14, Heb. Kaath, we should read pelican (which see).

CRANE. Isa. xxxviii. 14; Jer. viii. 7. Its loud voice, and its migratory instinct are spoken of. The whooping or trumpeting of the crane rings through the night air in spring, and the vast flocks which we noticed passing north near Beersheba were a wonderful sight. It is one of the largest birds which fly, and was formerly common in England.

CUCKOO. Lev. xi. 16; Deut. xiv. 15. Among the unclean birds. Cuckoos are common in spring and summer; but most probably this is not the bird intended, but rather the shearwater eaten in Syria, and the various species of sea-gull.

DOVE. The dove is mentioned more than 50 times in Scripture; and while distinguishing yonah or pigeon from tor or turtle-dove, the Jews were perfectly aware of their natural affinity, and speak of them together. They were the only birds admitted for sacrifice by the law of Moses, and both had been so used by Abraham (Gen. xv. 9). The dove is first mentioned in the history of Noah's flood (Gen. viii. 8-12). The pigeon is the earliest domesticated bird on record, and dove-cotes are alluded to with their "windows" or latticed openings (Isa. lx. 8). To this day, myriads of rock-doves in all the mountain gorges, "doves of the valleys" (Ezek. vii. 16; Cant. ii. 14; Jer. xlviii. 28). The metallic rustle of the plumage of the rock-dove is alluded to in Pa. lxxviii. 13, and the plaintive coo of all pigeons in Isa. xxxviii. 14; lxx. 11; Nah. ii. 7. Unlike the rock-dove, the turtle-dove does not remain through the winter. Its return is the sign of spring (Cant. ii. 12; Jer. viii. 7). It was the type of love (Song of Solomon), of trust (Pa. lxxiv. 19). Its dark eyes, with red skin round them, are mentioned in Cant. i. iii. v. 12. Above all, its gentleness and innocence are spoken on by our Lord (Matt. x. 16), and therefore it was the fitting emblem for the Holy Spirit (Matt. x. 16).

EAGLE. Heb. nesher. Not our eagle, but the griffon vulture (Gyps fulvus), a most marvellous type of Nisroch, the eagle-headed god of the Assyrians (Isa. xlv. 13; Jer. xlviii. 28; Hab. i. 8). The neck and head of the griffon is referred to in Isa. li. 13, its congregating to feed on the slain in Job xli. 13. Prov. xxx. 17; Matt. xxiv. 28; its longevity is Pa. lxxviii. 27-30; its inhabiting the distant cliff is Is. xli. 13; Jer. xlix. 16; its well-known care in training young (Exod. xix. 4; Deut. xxxii. 11, 12). It was the emblem of Persia (Isa. xli. 11) as well as of Aegina and Rome.

FOWL. Heb. ayit, occurs in Gen. xxi. 11; Job xi. 7; Isa. xviii. 6; meaning birds of prey in general. Isaiah the allusion is to the habit of all birds of prey perch on bare or dead trees. In the other passages, keenness of sight and gregarious habits are alluded to by him from Tharsish or India.

FOWLS, FATTED. 1 Kings iv. 22. Among the delicacies for Solomon's table. Possibly poultry kept by him from Tharsish or India.

GIER-EAGLE. Heb. Bachan. The Egyptian (Neophron percnopterus), or Pharaoh's hen, the scavenger of the East.

GLEDE. Only in Deut. xiv. 13. Probably the hawk of which there are 3 species in Palestine.

HAWK. Lev. xi. 16; Deut. xiv. 13. Job xli. 13. Under this name are included all the smaller birds of prey—the kestrel, merlin, sparrow-hawk, hobby, and others very common in the Holy Land.

HERON. Only in the list of unclean birds, "heron after her kind," i.e. all the species, of which are many in Palestine.

KITE. Heb. Ayah. So rendered in Jer. xl. 14; xlv. 13; but in Job xxxvii. 7, "vulture." Accipiter regalis are very common.

LAPWING. Lev. xi. 19; Deut. xiv. 18. There doubt the hoopoe (Upupa epops) is the bird intended as the Hebrew is the same as the Coptic and names for that bird. It was worshipped by the Egyptians.

NIGHT HAWK. Only in the list of unclean birds. Some owl is probably intended.

OSPREY. The small fishing eagle, but the probably includes all the smaller eagles, of which are many species in Syria.

ANIMAL CREATION—REPTILES.

OSSIFRAGE. Heb. Peres, i.e. the bone-breaker (Gypaetus barbatus), the Lämmer-geier, or bearded vulture, the largest and most magnificent of the birds of prey.

OSTRICH. Lam. iv. 3. But the ostrich is also referred to in Lev. xl. 16; Deut. xiv. 16; Job xxx. 29; Isa. xlii. 21; xxxiv. 13; xliii. 20; Jer. l. 39, where it is wrongly rendered "owl"; and Job xxxix. 13, where for "peacock" read "ostrich". In these various passages the beauty of its plumage, its swiftness, its reputed stupidity, its leaving its eggs on the surface, and hatching them in the sand by the sun's heat, are referred to.

OWL. In the passages referred to in the last paragraph read "ostrich".

OWL, GREAT. Isa. xxxiv. 11; Lev. xl. 17; Deut. xiv. 16. The Egyptian eagle owl (Bubo ascalaphus) is spoken of.

OWL, GREAT. Isa. xxxiv. 15. Another Hebrew word. The Scops owl (Scops asio) is probably intended.

OWL, LITTLE. Lev. xl. 17; Deut. xiv. 16; Ps. cii. 6. The little owl (Athene persica) is very common about all the villages, ruins, and wells. It was the symbol of ancient Athens, the bird of Minerva or of wisdom.

OWL, SCREECH. Isa. xxxiv. 14. The hooting or tawny owl (Syrnium aluco) is very common in Palestine.

PARTRIDGE. Two species of partridge are common, both different from ours, and both resorting to hilly ground. The francolin (Francolinus vulgaris) takes their place in the plains, and the various sand-grouse (Pedraea) in the deserts. In 1 Sam. xxvi. 20, allusion is made to chasing them with throw-sticks on the hills; in Jer. xvii. 11, to the continual robbing of their eggs by man; in Eccles. xi. 30, to the keeping a decoy partridge, still a common practice.

PEACOCK. 1 Kings x. 22; 2 Chron. ix. 21. Heb. tokim, the same as the Tamil name for the peacock in India, tokai, a sufficient evidence of Solomon's trade with South India. (In Job xxxix. 13, for "peacocks" read "ostriches", which see).

PELICAN. The pelican is common about the waters of Merom, and is in the habit of frequenting marshes, and also of sitting for hours in sandy desolate places after it has gorgeed (Ps. cii. 6). Also in Isa. xxxiv. 11 and Zeph. ii. 14, for "cormorant" read "pelican".

PIGEON. See Dove.

QUAIL. It is undoubtedly our quail (Coturnix vulgaris) which is spoken of wherever the word occurs (Exod. xvi. 11-13; Num. xi. 31, 32; Ps. lxxviii. 27; cv. 49), and which bears the same name in Arabic as in Hebrew. At the time of migration, in spring, when they visited the Israelitish camp, they are annually in the habit of crossing the desert in countless myriads, flying very low, and often in the morning so utterly exhausted by their night's flight, that they are slaughtered by the thousand. They always fly with the wind.

RAVEN. The habits of the raven are frequently illustrated—its finding its food on the floating carcasses (Gen. viii. 7); picking out the eyes of newly-dropped or weakly animals (Prov. xxx. 17); resorting to desolate places (Isa. xxxiv. 11); its glossy black plumage (Cant. v. 11); the distance it wanders for its precarious meal (Job xxxviii. 41; Ps. cxlvii. 9; Luke xii. 24). The feeding of Elijah by the ravens was a directly Divine interposition which may be denied, but cannot be explained away.

SPARROW. The Hebrew word occurs more than 40 times, and is rendered indifferently—bird, fowl, or sparrow. It is manifestly a general name for all the various small passerine birds, of which there are some 150 species in the Holy Land. "The sparrow that sitteth alone on the house-top" (Ps. cii. 7) can scarcely be the sociable sparrow, but the blue thrush (Petrocincla cyanea), a well-known solitary bird of the country which is fond of sitting alone on a roof or rock.

STORK. The periodical return of the stork is noticed in Jer. viii. 7. Its regular and sudden return is one of the most interesting natural sights of Palestine. The expression "stork in the heavens", refers to the immense height at which they fly during migration. The Hebrew name implies its maternal affection, for which it has been famed in all ages, and consequently it is protected in all countries where it nests. In Ps. civ. 17, the fir-trees are said to be its nest. In Western Europe it builds under man's protection on houses; in the East on ruins, or, where buildings are scarce, on trees. The black stork (Ciconia nigra), always on trees. The black pinions of the stork, stretching from its white body, have a very beautiful effect (Zech. v. 9).

SWALLOW. Two words are rendered swallow. Ps. lxxxv. 3 and Prov. xxvi. 2 have deror, i.e. "the bird of freedom", and our chimney swallow and martin are intended; but in Isa. xxxviii. 14 and Jer. viii. 7 we find Sus or Sis, which is the Arabic for the swift, and which should be so rendered. This translation gives the whole force of the passages. The cry of the swift is a shrill scream as of pain, not a soft gentle twitter like the swallow; and while the latter is not a regular migrant, many swallows remaining in the warmer parts of Palestine all the winter, no bird is more conspicuous by the suddenness of its re-appearance in spring, and by the thousands in which in a day it overspreads the whole country, than the swift (Cypselus apus).

SWAN only occurs in the list of unclean birds. As the swan is very rare in Egypt and Syria, it is more probable that the purple water-hen (Porphyrio antiquorum), or the sacred ibis (Ibis religiosa), an object of idolatrous veneration among the Egyptians, is intended.

TURTLE. See Dove.

VULTURE. Heb. dayah. Lev. xi. 14; Deut. xiv. 13; Isa. xxxiv. 13. Probably the same as the Arabic d'ayah, the name of the black kite (Milvus migrans), the commonest of the scavenger birds of prey in the country, and protected by the villagers.

REPTILES.

The references to reptiles, or "creeping things", are very few.

ADDER. Seven Hebrew and three Greek words are employed to denote the serpent tribe, the New Testament names being translated "serpent" (generically), "viper", and "asp". As the Hebrew names are rendered indiscriminately, it will be easiest to consider them together. "Adder" stands for 4 Hebrew words, (1) Shephiphon (Gen. xlii. 17). The deadly horned Ceratophis, which is in the habit of coiling itself in a camel's footmarks, or any little depression, and suddenly darting on any passing animal. It is one of the most venomous of snakes. (2) Achub (Ps. cxi. 3), a viper, rendered "asp" in Rom. iii. 13. Several species of viper are common in Palestine. (3) Pethen (Deut. xxxii. 33; Job xiv. 14-16; Ps. lviii. 4; xci. 13), rendered sometimes by "asp", sometimes by "adder". From the allusion to charming in connection with the pethen, we infer that the cobra (Naja haje), found in Egypt and Palestine, and used by serpent charmers, is signified. (4) Tzaphoni (Prov. xxi. 32).

COCKATRICE is the translation of another word (Prov. xlii. 32; Isa. xi. 8; xiv. 29; lix. 5; Jer. viii. 17). It is impossible to say with certainty what species of poisonous snake is intended, or whether it is merely a general name. The same may be said of the word eph'el, i.e. the hisser "viper" (Isa. xxx. 6, &c.), though it may be Echis ancolica, a very common Syrian viper. The viper that fastened on St. Paul's hand (Acts xxviii. 3) was probably Corneliana levis, the only snake which can hold on by its teeth, and which is found in Malta. Though not venomous, it has the appearance of a viper. St. Luke does not state that it was venomous.

FIERY SERPENTS. Num. xxi. 6; Deut. viii. 15. We have nothing by which to identify the species. The fiery flying serpent of Isa. xiv. 29; xxx. 6, is quite another thing, and is probably merely a figurative expression. The serpent is a familiar emblem of craft, from its cunning in lying in wait for its prey, its fascination and its wariness (Gen. iii. 1; Matt. x. 16). From this, as well as from its being the form in which Satan beguiled our first parents, he is called "the old serpent" (Rev. xii. 9). Serpent eating or licking dust may be a figurative expression for their crawling on the ground.

CHAMELEON. Lev. xi. 30. It is generally believed that some of the larger lizards are intended. The chameleon is very common in Palestine.

DRAGON. See Leviathan.

FROG. Only mentioned in the Old Testament in connection with the plagues of Egypt. The frog of Egypt and Syria is the edible frog of Europe (Rana esculenta). It swarms wherever there is water. In Rev. xvi. 3, frogs are the emblem of unclean spirits.

LEVIATHAN. In Ps. cv. 25, 26, the word simply means "sea-monsters". In Ps. lxxv. 14; Isa. xxxvii. 1; and in Job xli. the crocodile is specifically intended. The crocodile is also expressed by another word, translated "dragon" in Isa. li. 9; Ezek. xxxix. 3; xxxix. 2; (Jer. li. 34. Job describes the difficulty of capturing, spearing,

No distinction of fishes, beyond good and bad, is given in the Bible. They were stocked by Solomon (Ezek. iv. 33), and were artificially preserved (Chant. vii. 4; Isa. xix. 10). The quantity of fish in the Lake of Galilee is still marvellous, the shoals forming dense masses. All the fishes of that lake, and of the Jordan, are taken from the fishes of the rivers which flow into the Mediterranean.

INVERTEBRATE ANIMALS.

ANT. Prov. vi. 6; xxx. 25. The ants of Palestine, especially Atta structor and Pheidole megacephala, are, unlike the species of northern Europe, accustomed to lay up stores of corn for winter use. The habit was well known to the ancient Jews, and to modern observers.

BALD-LOCUST. Lev. xi. 22. A class of insects allied to the locust, called by naturalists Tracalia.

BEE. Honey bees, wild and hived, abound in Palestine, a land flowing with honey. Its dry climate, its rich variety and abundance of aromatic flowers, and its limestone rocks (Ps. lxxxvi. 16), render it peculiarly adapted for bees. Honey was an article of export (Gen. xliii. 11; Ezek. xxvii. 17). Not only in rocks, but in hollow trees (1 Sam. xiv. 25), or in dried carcases (Judg. xiv. 8), do bees hive. Jewish domestic hives are of clay for coolness. The Word of God is compared to honey for its sweetness (Ps. xix. 10). Deborah (bee) was a favourite woman's name. The bee of Palestine is Apis fasciata.

BEETLE. Lev. xi. 22, where it is described as "having legs above its feet to leap withal". Some species of locust is therefore meant.

CANKERWORM. Joel i. 4; ii. 25; Nah. iii. 15, &c. The locust in its larva or caterpillar state, in which, before it has acquired wings, it is most destructive.

CATERPILLAR. Ps. lxxviii. 40; Isa. xxxiii. 4, &c. Probably the locust in general. The Hebrew word signifies "the consumer".

CORAL. Job xxviii. 18; Ezek. xxvii. 10. The coral of the commerce of Tyre was that of the Red Sea, the finest in the world. There is in the Hebrew a peculiar force in the expression in Job translated "the price of wisdom". It is literally "the drawing up of wisdom".

CRIMSON WORM. Isa. i. 18; Lam. iv. 5; Neh. ii. 3; and "scarlet" (Exod. xxv. 4, &c.), "worm" being omitted in our translation, is the cochineal (Coccus ilicis), an homopterous insect very common on the Syrian holm-oak, from the female of which the crimson dye is prepared.

FLEA. 1 Sam. xxiv. 14; xxvi. 20, where this pest is spoken of as the most insignificant of vermin.

FLY. Two words are thus translated. Arôb (Exod. viii. 1, &c.), in the plague of flies, is probably the common house fly; zebub (Eccles. x. 1; Isa. vii. 18) is the gad-fly, the taetee of Africa, a fearful scourge to cattle.

GNAT (Matt. xxiii. 24), i.e. the mosquito, one of the smallest, but the most irritating of insect plagues.

GRASSHOPPER. Lev. xi. 22; Eccles. xii. 5, &c. The smaller species of the locust tribe, of which there are innumerable kinds.

HORNET. Exod. xxiii. 28; Deut. vii. 20; Josh. xxiv. 12. Very common, and of several species. When disturbed, they attack horses and cattle, and drive them to madness.

HORSE-LEECH. Prov. xxx. 15. Both land-leech and medicinal leech are very common in every well and stream, and often attach themselves to the naked limbs of animals, causing much pain.

LICE. Only mentioned in reference to its human plague. This vermin is one of the pests of the East, and its existence on the person rendered an Egyptian customarily polluted.

LOCUST. Continually referred to, and its various species and stages described by at least nine different words. They are the worst scourge of the East, and unlike beetles and other insects, are equally voracious every stage of their existence. There are very many different species. They always come in their clouds with an east wind, and nothing checks them till they are driven by the wind into the sea (Exod. x).

MOTH. The clothes moth is the only insect of this class mentioned.

ONYCHA. Exod. xxx. 34. The shell or operculum of many kinds of shell fish learnt to form an ingredient in frankincense, as it has a strong pungent smell.

PALMERWORM. Joel i. 4; ii. 25; Amos v. 1. Described in a vague sense for the locust, probably in its immature state.

PEARL. Job xxviii. 18; Matt. vi. 6; xii. 35, &c. Found in the shells of the pearl oyster in the Red Sea and Persian Gulf, and always a highly precious gem.

PURPLE. The dye used to produce a bright scarlet, and prepared from several shell-fish which abound in the Syrian coast, Murex and Purpura.

SCORPION. Deut. viii. 15; Ezek. ii. 6; Luke x. 19; Rev. ix. 5, &c. Very common in all hot, dry, sunny places. It is of the shape of a lobster, and is often found on its back. Its habit is to hide under stones, and on being disturbed it will sting severely with the sharp claw at the end of the tail, which secretes an acrid poison.

SNAIL. Ps. lxxviii. 8. Snails, in our cold climate hibernates in winter. In Palestine, on the contrary, they are in summer, as they are unable to bear the excessive heat of the dry, hot season. The allusion of the Psalmist is to the fact that, very commonly, when they have secured themselves in some clink of the rocks for their summer sleep, they are still exposed to the sun's rays, which gradually evaporate and dry up the whole of their shell, till the animal is shrivelled to a thread, and, as it were, melted away. Myriads of snails may be found baked away, still glued to the rock.

WORM. Several Hebrew words are thus rendered. Sôs (Isa. ii. 8) is the caterpillar of the clover and other words used elsewhere may mean aculeate insects, or the maggots of insects; but it is impossible to determine the word exactly.

is not less instructive than interesting to regard the Old Testament writings from a literary as well as a religious point of view. The Old Testament is one of the standard literatures of the world; it expresses religious emotion with a greater depth and purity than any other literature. How are we to account for its distinguishing superiority in this respect?—The ultimate reason is no doubt the will of God, but so far as we can trace the shadow of the Divine operations, it is not His will to disregard the habits and modes of thought of His human instruments. Each nation has a special function to fulfil in accordance with its gifts and capacities, and the function of the Jews was determined in advance by their language and their social circumstances. The tongue which they spoke is but ill-adapted for historical or argumentative prose, owing to its vagueness in expressing relations of time and the sequences of reasoning; but it reproduces with a vividness, which is the despair of translators, the most delicate shades of feeling and emotion. The circumstances of the Jews were equally favourable to a literature of religious sentiment. They were not a nation of philosophers, nor had they a soul-rising political history to kindle the genius of their orators. They were a hot-blooded Eastern people, feeling intensely about everything, and wholly absorbed in the passing emotion. Hence we may account for the constant want of connexion of so many passages in the Old Testament and in the Prophecies. The connexion is imposed by the feelings of the writer, and how easily, to say accidentally, does one emotion give place to another! Again, the Israelites were an agricultural people. Their occupation brought them into constant contact with nature, and we are therefore not surprised to find that images from nature contribute largely to the literary material. The Old Testament is well worthy of study from this point of view, as well as others. Of course, being such an emotional people, the Israelites do not love nature for its own sake, nor can they even describe a beautiful scene in its totality:—they instinctively identify themselves to that particular feature which in some way illustrates the mood or temper of the moment. In other words, they use nature as a magazine of symbols. The reader should bear this in mind, as he will otherwise be misled by the confusion of imagery in Hebrew poetry. The rapid transition from one figure to another is not arbitrary nor accidental, but dictated by an overpowering desire for a more complete rendering of feeling and emotion. See especially 1 Kings xiv. 15; Isa. viii. 8; xl. xlviii. 1-6.

Even when such a people lyric poetry was sure to flourish; even when God raised up those revealers of His will—nature—the prophets, it was inevitable that their secular discourses should partake of a lyric character. Here and there we meet in the prophecies with a simile or two which might well have belonged to a Psalm, or even with connected lyrical passages (see e.g. the magnificent odes in Isa. xiv. 4-21; and Hab. iii.). A familiar remark applies to the reflective poem on the calamities of the righteous, which bears the name of Job. Even the narrative-writers, when they rise into a higher tone, naturally and without an effort adopt the rhetorical forms of lyric poetry, e.g. Gen. i. 27; ix. 26-27; xxiv. 27-29, 39, 40. One may fairly say that the distinction between poetry and prose was unknown to the Israelitish writers, as it still is to nations at a low level of worldly culture.—Such being the conditions under which the Jewish literature arose, we shall not be surprised to find the artistic element somewhat in the background. The Old Testament writings have few of what we are accustomed to call the forms of poetry,—no metre, only a slight tendency to rhyme, and a stronger but unequal tendency to alliteration*. This defect is compensated for by parallelism. Hebrew poetry, as we have seen, is the poetry of emotion, and emotion, like the sea, expresses itself, not in the onward rush of a single gigantic breaker, but in the rise and fall of a succession of waves; or, to speak without figure, each verse of a Hebrew lyric consists of a couplet, a double couplet, or a triplet (really a shortened form of the double couplet). For an example (a) of the simplest kind, take this half-verse of the psalm of Hezekiah:—

"Mine eyes fall with looking upward:
O Lord, I am oppressed; undertake for me."
[Isa. xxxviii. 14.]

Here the first line expresses the effort of continual expectation; the second, its failure, and the appeal for help to a higher power. The two lines are parallel, but the parallelism of the thoughts is incomplete.

For specimens of complete parallelism, take the following:—

"When Israel went out of Egypt,
The house of Jacob from a people of strange language;
Judah became his sanctuary,
Israel his dominion.
The sea saw, and fled:
Jordan was driven back.
The mountains skipped like rams,
The hills like the young of the flock.
What ailed thee, O sea, that thou fleddest?
Thou Jordan, that thou wast driven back?
Ye mountains, that ye skipped like rams?
Ye little hills, like the young of the flock?
Tremble, thou earth, at the presence of the Lord,
At the presence of the God of Jacob;
Who turned the hard rock into a standing water,
The flint into a fountain of waters."
[Ps. cxv.]

Here we have what is called synonymous parallelism (b), that is, the two lines express exactly the same idea. (This is the most common type of parallelism. See also Ps. vi. 1, 2, 4, 5, 6, 7, 9, 10; viii. 3-8; Prov. iii. 1, 8-25; Isa. liii. 1-6; lx. 1-3.)

And these,

"The bows of the mighty men are broken,
And they that stumbled are girded with strength.
The full have hired themselves out for bread.
And the hungry keep holiday:
So that the barren hath borne seven,
And she that hath many children languisheth."
[Isa. xl. 4, 5.]

"Faithful are the wounds of a friend,
But deceitful are the kisses of an enemy.
The full soul loatheth an honeycomb,
But to the hungry soul every bitter thing is sweet."
[Prov. xxvii. 6, 7.]

Here we have what is called antithetic parallelism (c), that is, the two lines correspond by an antithesis or opposition of sentiments. (This type of parallelism abounds in the Book of Proverbs, especially in chapters x.-xv. In the Psalms it is much less common; see however Ps. xxvii. 11; xxxvii. 9, 17, 21, 22. Isa. i. 3; liv. 7, 8, are also fine examples.)

Sometimes, however (d), there is a bifurcation of a verse, without either complete or incomplete parallelism; for instance,

"God looked down from heaven upon the children of men,
To see if there were any that did understand, that did seek God."
[Ps. xiv. 2.]

"Moreover by them is thy servant warned;
In keeping of them there is great reward."
[Ps. xix. 12.]

"The Lord at thy right hand Shall strike through kings in the day of his wrath."
[Ps. cx. 8.]

* The later Hebrew poetry (since the 7th century A.D.) has however availed itself of both rhyme and metre, following the example of the Arabs.

This merely rhythmic structure of the verse is frequently found in the prophetic, particularly in the Books of Hosea and Jeremiah. Hosea is too much absorbed by passionate feeling, Jeremiah too much depressed by melancholy, to give full play to æsthetic sensibility. A careful attention to these four types of verse will unveil an unsuspected beauty in Hebrew poetry. If the reader will only refer to some edition of the Bible in which the parallel lines are printed separately, he will soon see how much the Authorized Version gains thereby in distinctness.† He must not, as has been already remarked, confuse his search for parallelism to those which are commonly called the poetical books, nor even (it may now be added) to the Old Testament. Sporadic instances of this form of elevated rhetoric occur in the New Testament, especially in the Sermon on the Mount and the Book of the Revelation, such as the following:—

"Ask, and it shall be given unto you;
Seek, and ye shall find;
Knock, and it shall be opened unto you.
For every one who asketh, receiveth;
And he who seeketh findeth;
And to him who knocketh, it shall be opened.
For what man is there among you, who, if his son ask for a loaf, will give him a stone?
Or, if he ask a fish, will give him a serpent?
If ye, then, being evil, know how to give good gifts to your children,
How much more will your Father in heaven give good things to those who ask him!" (Matt. vii. 7-11.)

"And a mighty angel took up a stone like a great mill-stone, and cast it into the sea, saying:—

Thus with violence shall be thrown down Babylon the great city; and shall be found no more;
And the voice of harpers, and musicians, and flute-players, and trumpeters, shall be heard in thee no more;
And any craftsman of any craft shall be found in thee no more;
And the sound of a mill-stone shall be heard in thee no more;
And the light of a lamp shall be seen in thee no more;
And the voice of bridegroom and bride shall be heard in thee no more;
For thy merchants were great ones of the earth;
For by thy sorceries were all the nations deceived;
And in her hath been found the blood of prophets and saints, and of all those who have been slain upon the earth." (Rev. xviii. 21-24.)

The latter passage is taken from a chapter which strikingly reminds us of Ezekiel; it is rhythmical, but not strictly parallelistic: the former is an independent reproduction of the manner of the best proverbial poetry, and is a good specimen of parallelism. With the latter we may compare the Song of Mary (Luke i. 46-55), the Song of Zacharias (Luke i. 67-79), and the Song of Symeon (Luke ii. 28-32). These are all directly based on Old Testament models. It is much more difficult to produce connected passages exemplifying genuine parallelism in an unartificial manner. Bishop Jebb has indeed attempted it, but the result has been universally rejected by Biblical scholars. The fact is that after the return from Babylon the older literary forms were only kept up by the zeal of enthusiastic students of the earlier scriptures, and their disappearance was only a question of time. Ecclesiasticus and the so-called Psalms of Solomon, both written originally in Hebrew, the one about 180 B.C., the other after the murder of Pompeius, 48 B.C., are the last specimens of genuine parallelism. In the Apocryphal Wisdom

24, which is, in fact, a translation of an Arabic date:—
"Now therefore bless ye the God of all,
Which only doeth wondrous things everlastingly,
Which exalteth our days from the world,
And doeth with us according to his mercy.
He grant us perfumings of Israel.
And that peace may be in our days in Israel forever.
That he would confirm his mercy with us,
And deliver us at his time!"
It is true the verses in this fragment fall into couplets and quatrains, but parallelism, as described above in its complete form, does not exist. We should therefore expect to find it in the New Testament, where it does exist, it is by accident. The New Testament is in the main didactic and historical, and not æsthetic prose and not poetry.

But the study of parallelism appeals to æsthetic rather than to the æsthetic. It will often enable us to see the probability of competing interpretations of difficult passages. If, for instance, we find not the synonymous or antithetic parallelism prevalent in a particular chapter or paragraph, there is a presumption against any interpretation which tends to destroy its uniformity. In Gen. iv. 23, for example, the Jews built a romantic story on the mention of a "man" or "child" as well as a "man" as having murdered by Lamech. But by the law of genuine parallelism, only one person and one murder are intended. This remark is fruitful of application to prophetic writings. It may be added as a note on the adaptation of the Bible to its world-wide fame, that this peculiar poetical or rather rhetorical parallelism exists in various degrees in the Hebrew, Assyrian, Egyptian, Chinese, and other literatures. The deficiency of the Bible in æsthetic respects is somewhat counterbalanced by its engaging naturalness. It has been greater as a work of art, it could never have been the religious book of such widely different nations.

Rhythm and parallelism, however, are not the characteristics of Hebrew poetry. There are even enough that lyric poems are often arranged with to the symmetry of their parts. See, for instance, xlii. 5, 11; xliii. 5; xli. 7, 11; xli. 4, 10, 11; lvi. 2, 6, 10, 17; lxii. 1, 2, 5, 6; lxvii. 3, 5; lxxv. 2, 5, 9; cv. 6, 13, 18, 28-30, 31, 32, 34; cxv. 7, 11. These passages present clear indications of and consequently of something approaching to a division, like that of the Greek choros. It is a deed, equally clear that the strophes or stanzas used by these refrains are always of equal length, if they are very nearly equal in Psalms (the and originally one Psalm; lxvii. xcv.). Sometimes the want of symmetry can be accounted for by the character of the poem. Thus in the lamentation of and Jonathan (2 Sam. i. 12-17), which falls into stanzas or strophes (viz. I. vs. 13, 14; II. vs. 1, 2, 4; IV. vs. 25, 26; V. vs. 27), the first three consist of 5 each, the fourth of only five, the fifth of two, gradual diminution is evidently designed, and butes to the effect of the poem. It is as if the of the speaker became fainter and fainter as his increased, till it died away in a sigh. The phenomenon will be observed in other similar poems in the elegy on Israel's princes in Ezek. xix. vs. 2-9, stanza II.—vs. 10-16, and in that of Ezek. xxiii. (stanza I.—vs. 1-10, stanza II.—16), and in the lamentation which forms the first of Job (ch. iii. stanza I.—vs. 2-10, stanza II.—19, stanza III.—vs. 20-30). Joyous songs, on the hand, are sometimes marked by a gradual extension of the stanzas. The poet begins calmly, increases the stream of song widens. Thus in the psalm (xlv.), the first stanza is very short (vs. 1

* The reader will observe an occasional deviation from the language of the Authorized Version. This is unavoidable in the exact study of the sacred writings. Here for instance the Authorized Version has "shame," where the literal rendering is "the shame" or "shameful thing." The prophet is unwilling to apply the term "Baal" (=lord, master) to a false god, and substitutes "the Beeloth." "the shame." Hosea had set the example (Hos. ix. 10). Compare also Isaiaboth and Eshbaal, which are interchanged. See "List of Proper Names."

second is already a little longer (vs. 3-7), the third very long (vs. 8-17). The correctness of the division is shown by the choruses, which begin in each case with the word 'therefore.' One point more claims to be noticed before we leave this part of our subject. The fact that the existence of strophes can often be proved, and is sometimes reasonably surmised even where not proved, suggests a further possibility, viz. that the Psalms were sung antiphonally (somewhat as our own chants are divided between the two halves of the choir), one strophe being uttered in answer to another strophe. The refrain was doubtless sung by the whole congregation; compare 2 Chron. vii. 3, "all the children of Israel . . . praised the LORD, saying, For he is good, for his mercy endureth forever"—the latter words being the refrain of Ps. cxxxvi. Compare also Ps. lxxviii. 28. It need hardly be added that the singing was accompanied with music (compare Ps. xxi. 2; lxxviii. 26; cxxxvii. 3; cl. 3-6); but the subject of Hebrew music demands separate consideration.

On the single remaining style of Hebrew poetry not much has to be said. A certain number of the Old Testament poems have the peculiarity of being "acrostic" or "alphabetic," that is, they are arranged alphabetically by the initial Hebrew letters of the verses. These are Psalms xiv., xxiv., xxxvii., cxl., cxli., cxix., cxlv.; Prov. xxxi. 10-31; Lam. i. ii., iii., iv. Psalms ix. and x. are also very imperfect specimens of this style. In Psalm cxix. the Bible version makes the arrangement intelligible to every one by placing the initial Hebrew letter of each group of verses at the beginning of the group. It is probable that this kind of composition became more popular in the Babylonian and Persian periods of Jewish history. There is no reason why these like the other Psalms should not have been sung in divine service.

The earliest Hebrew songs which we possess appear to have been called forth by passing events. A dark deed of revenge is commemorated in the song ascribed to Lamech (Gen. iv. 23, 24); the prowess of the confederate tribes in an ironical fragment (Num. xxi. 27-30), and, above all, in the song of Deborah (Judg. v.). The 'song of the water-drawers' (Num. xxi. 17, 18) preserves a tradition of the mutual trust between rulers and people which prevailed in the prehistoric age of Israel. It is not improbable a song which the Hebrew women sang in the intervals of drawing water, as if to 'coax' the well to 'spring up,' i.e. to yield water from its depths. The triumphal ode ascribed to Moses (Ex. xv. 1-18) is, as we should expect, more elaborate than the more popular songs. It consists of a prelude (v. 1) and four stanzas, of which the first two and the fourth consist of twelve lines each, the second of only six. The student will find it a useful exercise to verify this statement for himself by writing out the several stanzas in parallel lines. The whole concludes with the chorus, "The LORD shall reign for ever and ever" (v. 18). "The Song of Deborah is a glorious witness to the martial spirit of the Hebrews. But it allows us to see also how easily the aspirations of the nation might have turned altogether to the glory of conquest and empire, and how much some gentler influence was needed to counteract the wild spirit of revenge." Such an influence was doubtless exerted by the schools of the prophets, in which sacred minstrelsy appears to have been cultivated (1 Sam. x. 5), and afterwards by the psalmists. Great doubt, however, exists as to the precise date of the religious lyrics or Psalms. In the headings they are mostly ascribed to David, but these, which are the only authority for so ascribing them, did not arise till during or after the Captivity. They must consequently be tested in each case by their agreement with the contents of the Psalms, and with the information as to the state of religion in David's time given elsewhere in the sacred writings. Happily the beautiful lamentation over Saul and Jonathan (2 Sam. i. 19-27) has never had its Davidic origin questioned. But for artistic skill and variety of contrast nothing in the Old Testament equals the song (or perhaps the songs) of the poetess Deborah, with a new translation of which we may fitly conclude this note. It will be at once seen that the song was intended to be sung partly by Deborah and Barak, partly by a chorus; also that here and there occurs a peculiarly striking rhythm (sometimes combined with parallelism) which may be called the progressive, a phrase in one line being repeated in the next with some addition, so as to form a kind of climax or progression if not in the ideas at any rate in the language; see especially vs. 3, 4, 19, 20, 27, 30. For other examples of the same rhythm see Ps. xix., cxi., cxlv.

PART I.

Prelude.

- V. 2. For the leaders' leading in Israel,
For the self-offering of the people,
Bless ye the LORD!

1.

Retrospect of the Exodus.

3. Hear, O ye kings! give ear, O ye princes!
I, even I, will sing unto the LORD;
I will sing praises to the LORD, the God of Israel.
4. LORD! when thou wentest out of Seir,
When thou marchedst out of the country of Edom,
The earth trembled, and the heavens dropped,
The clouds also dropped water:
5. Mountains melted before the LORD,
Yonder Sinai, before the LORD, the God of Israel.
6. In the days of Shammur, the son of Anath,
In the days of Jael the highway kept holiday,
And the travellers walked on crooked paths:
7. The rulers kept holiday in Israel, kept holiday,
Until that I, Deborah, arose,
That I arose a mother in Israel.
8. Then was war at the gates (of the enemy):
Was there a shield or spear seen among forty thousand in Israel?

2.

Let Israel give thanks!

9. My heart (saith) to the governors of Israel,
(To) those who offered themselves among the people:
Bless ye the LORD!
10. Ye that ride on white steeds,
Ye that sit on coverings,
And ye that walk by the way, sing!
11. From the voice of archers between the places of drawing water,
There let men rehearse the righteous acts of the LORD,
The righteous acts of His rule in Israel!
Then did the people of the LORD go down against the gates.

PART II.

Chorus.

12. Awake, awake, Deborah,
Awake, awake, utter the song!
Arise, Barak, lead forth thy captives, O son of Abinoam!

1.

The gathering of the patriotic Israelites.

13. Then there went down a remnant of the nobles (and) of the people;
The LORD went down to my help among the heroes.
From Ephraim (did they go), thy whose root is in Amalek,
Behind thee, O Benjamin, with thy tribesmen,
From Machir went down governors,
And from Zebulun they that hold the staff of the enroller.
14. And the princes in Issachar were like Deborah,
And Issachar even as Barak:
He was driven into the valley by his feet.

2.

The indifference of the rest.

15. At the streams of Reuben there are great resolves!
Why abodest thou between the sheepfolds—to hear the piping of the flutes?
By the streams of Reuben there are great deliberations!
Gilead abides beyond Jordan.
And Dan—why is he a stranger on shipboard?
Asher sits by the sea-shore,
And abides by his creeks.
16. Zebulun is a people that jeopardis his life unto death,
And Naphtali (that dwells) on the heights.

3.

The battle.

17. The kings came, they fought,
Then fought the kings of Canaan,
At Taanach by the waters of Megiddo;
They took not a piece of silver:
They fought from heaven,
The stars from their courses
Fought against Sisera:
The torrent of Kishon swept them away,
The onward-running torrent, the torrent of Kishon.

Chorus.

Step on, my soul, with strength.

24. Blessed above women be Jael,
The wife of Heber the Kenite;
Blessed above women in the tent!

5.

The murder of Sisera.

25. He asked water, she gave him milk,
She offered curdled milk in a lordly dish;
26. She put her hand to the tent-peg,
And her right hand to the workmen's hammer,
And with the hammer she smote Sisera, she smote in pieces his head,
27. She wounded and pierced through his temples.
At her feet he bowed, he fell, he lay down,
At her feet he bowed, he fell;
Where he bowed, there he fell down dead.

6.

The anxiety of the family of Sisera.

28. Through the window she looked out and cried—
The mother of Sisera through the lattice;
"Why is his chariot so long in coming?
Why tarry the wheels of his chariots?"

But they that love him are as the sun upon his right in his might.

NOTES.—F. 8. The beginning of this verse has priority to the handed down in its original form. We have evidence of a translated. The latter part means that lower or secondary weapons were the only weapons used by the 10,000 warriors of F. 8. 10.

TECHNICAL TERMS CONNECTED WITH HEBREW POETRY AND MUSIC IN THE BIBLE VERSION OF THE PSALMS.

1. AJJELETH SHAHAR, upon. The great Spanish Rabbi, Aben Ezra, who died about 1175 A.D., considers Ajjeleth or Ajjeleth Shahar to be the first words of a popular song. Following him, we should explain the phrase, To the tune of the song, beginning 'Hind of the dawn' (= the rising sun, called gazelle by the Arabs). Ps. xxii. 1.
2. ALANOTH, upon. For soprano voices. Ps. xli. 1. The Hebrew has "on virgin voices," ala noth being the plural of almah, a virgin or young woman.
3. AL-TASCHITH, upon. To the tune of (of the song beginning) 'Do not destroy.' Ps. lvi. 1, lviii. 1, lix. 1, lxxv. 1. (This is probably a vintage song, for the first line of which see Isa. lxx. 8:—"As when vineyard-fruit is found in the cluster, one saith, 'Destroy it not, for a blessing is in it.'")
4. GITTITH, upon. For the musical instrument or tune called Gittith, either because brought from Gath, or because used at the vintage. Ps. viii. 1; lxxxiv. 1. The custom of singing at the treading of the wine-press was well known to the Hebrews (comp. Isa. xvi. 10; Jer. xlviii. 33). Of course the psalms which bear this heading were not themselves sung at the vintage, though the Septuagint suggests such a view; their contents would be very inappropriate to such an occasion. See the foregoing note.
5. HIGGAION, a peculiar kind of music, probably performed on stringed instruments. Joined with Selah (which see) Ps. ix. 17.
6. JONATH-ELEM-BECROKIM, upon. Perhaps, To the tune of "The silent dove of those afar." The Septuagint and the Targum, or Western Aramaic translation, suppose the dove to be a figure for the Jewish people in captivity. In this case the word "upon" should rather be "concerning." But it is better to follow Aben Ezra, and suppose a quotation of the initial words of some popular song. By a slight alteration of the vowels (which form no part of the text) we might render, To the tune of "The dove of the far-off terebinths," which is certainly much more intelligible. Prefixed to Ps. lvi.
7. MAHALATH, upon. For (a peculiar kind of) stringed instrument. Others explain, To the tune of the song beginning 'Sickness—we may perhaps conjecture that the first line of a song began, "The sickness of thy people heal, O Lord." Ps. liii. 1; Followed in one passage by Leannoth, i.e. perhaps, 'for singing antiphonally.' Ps. lxxxviii. 1.
8. MASCHIL. A descriptive title of a peculiar kind of psalm—the didactic, or contemplative, or perhaps skilful. Prefixed to Psalms xxxii., xli., xlv., xlv., li., liii., liv., lv., lxxv., lxxviii., lxxxiii., lxxxix., cxli.; also found in the Hebrew text of Ps. xlvii. 7b, which runs, "Sing ye a psalm to make one wise" (or, a psalm of contemplation, or possibly, in skilful strains); literally, "Sing ye a Maschil."
9. MICHTHAM. None of the conjectures offered as to the meaning of this term have the least degree of pro-

- bability. It is no doubt intended to modify the particular kind of lyric poem, but what that we have no means of determining. These words are like the word in the cognate dialect, Michtham, prefixed to six psalms, viz. xvi., lvi., lviii., lxxv., lxxviii., and lxxxviii. If the text is correct, and the title only occurs once, so that we have no means of controlling the reading—the most plausible explanation is, To the tune of "Die for the sin," these words being supposed to form the opening of some popular song. But it would be never to be never stress on this or any other interpretation. Prefixed to Ps. ix.
11. NEIGMOTH, upon. With an accompaniment of stringed instruments. Prefixed to Psalms vi., vi., vi., lxi., lxxviii., lxxvi.
12. NEILOTH, upon. With an accompaniment of stringed instruments. Prefixed to Psalms vi., vi., vi., lxi., lxxviii., lxxvi.
13. SELAH. Much useless ingenuity has been expended on this word. All that is quite certain is that it is a musical note. Of ancient opinions the only one worth mentioning is that of the Greek version, the Psalms included in the Septuagint, for the version of this book, though made in Egypt and possibly not older than the second century B.C., as well have reproduced a genuine tradition. In the word Selah is rendered by dissonance, which means either a musical interlude (sing or play in the music, or a louder playing of the same melody) (the song, that is being continued), or gives us two distinct views of the meaning of the word, and each of these has been defended by some modern critics. An examination of the passages in which the word occurs seems to show that it stands in some relation to the vehemence of emotion described. Hence the opinion is a whole most plausible which regards it as a notation for the orchestra to fall in, or for the singer to assume a maestoso or forte character. In Ps. 16 Selah has prefixed to it the word Higgaion, literally, "sounding," that is, the music of stringed instruments; it is the word rendered by sound in Ps. xli. 2. Selah occurs in Ps. xli. 2, Psalms, and 3 times in Habakkuk comp. 2, 3, 10, more frequently in the Greek version of the Psalms. 14. SHERIMITH, upon. On the lower octave (i.e. bass), or on the eighth tone. Ps. vi. 1, vi. 1, vi. 1.
15. SHIGGAION. This is generally supposed to be the song of irregular rhythms, and expressing a variety of moods; but the most cautious critics hesitate to accept this artificial explanation, the word occurs only in Ps. vi. 1, and in the phrase in Hab. iii. 1.
16. SHOSHANNIM, upon. To the tune called "The Song of the Lily." Ps. xli. 1, lxxv. 1.
17. SHUSHAN-EDUTH, upon. Perhaps this may be the title of the song "Lily of testimony," fixed to Ps. li.

one entered so largely into the private and public life of the Hebrews that its cessation typified utter desolation (e.g. Jer. 25. 10; Ezek. 26. 13). Vocal instrumental music, often with 'dancing,' i.e. assured rhythmical movements, accompanied their chief gatherings (Isa. 5. 12 & 24. 9; Amos 6. 5; Luke 1. 25), and their processions—whether religious (2 Sam. 6. 5, &c.), triumphal (Ex. 15; Judg. 11. 34, &c.), bridal (1. 7. 34), or funeral (Ecc. 12. 4, with Matt. 9. 23). Young men and women formed part of David's and Solomon's court (2 Sam. 19. 35; Ecc. 2. 8), and sang for Josiah (2 Chr. 35. 25); hired minstrels emphasised the mourner's grief (Matt. 9. 23, with Jer. 17–20; Amos 5. 16). The winepress was trodden (ex. 48. 35), and the vintage which closed the harvest gathered (Isa. 16. 10) with a song; the 'timbrels & dances' of the daughters of Israel typify ordinary joy and prosperity. See Poetry, Psalms. But the Bible gives little direct information as to Hebrew music. It probably resembled or comprised the music of Mesopotamia and Egypt (see Gen. 31. 27; 1. 32, 17, 18, 19), and the inevitable commercial and see intercourse would cause the instruments in use see from one nation to another. If not cultivated see by the Levites for the service of the Tabernacle, music certainly formed part of the training in see schools of the prophets founded by Samuel (1 Sam. 10. 5; 2 Kin. 3. 15), and being developed (Amos 6. 5; 2 Sam. 1. 1 Kin. 10. 5, &c.) by the inspired genius of the musician and poet David attained its highest expression in connection with the Psalms in the musical services organised by him (1 Chr. 15. 16 & 25. 1), and continued in the Temple. Early Hebrew melodies are probably reflected in the modern Asiatic, i.e. slight melodies overlaid with extraneous graces, and would now seem to be in a sort of minor mode. But simple instruments, such as harps, trumpets, cymbals, &c. (see below), when used in large numbers simultaneously (2 Chr. 5. 13) or in alternating masses, are capable of grand musical results, even independently of the awful sublimity of the events and associations connected with the worship of the Temple.

The silence of the Bible obliges us to determine on historical grounds the probable extent and nature of Hebrew musical knowledge. Fortunately ancient music, especially Assyrian and Egyptian, has of late received considerable attention; the various musical instruments represented in sculpture or on coins, and even found in tombs, have been carefully examined as to their capabilities, compared, and classified. And, by analogy, a very sound basis of probability has been found in the comparative history of ancient music on which to describe the general outlines of Bible music.

The study of names of instruments is less safe, and even deceptive. We shall therefore content ourselves with a careful study of the music of the surrounding nations, not neglecting any absolutely reliable information to be gained from the researches of great scholars, leaving the reader to apply the results attained to the various passages of Scripture collected and commented upon below.

VOCAL MUSIC OF THE HEBREWS.

A tendency of recitation to develop into monotonous and an irregular chant or cantillation is illustrated in the history of 'plain song' in the early Christian church. The very irregularity of such a chant would singularly appropriate to poems like the Psalms, rhythm and form of which being mainly determined by the sense, is complicated and changeful. The Psalms were without doubt sung to irregular notes or short simple melodies, accompanied by instruments selected as appropriate in tone to the particular Psalm; the whole body of instruments being in grand bursts of chorus. Alternate singing in side to side, or by choirs of women or boys and of men, was frequent; the Hebrew word translated 'answered' (Ex. 15. 21; 1 Sam. 18. 7), 'by course' (Exra 3. 11) suggests this; comp. Neh. 12. 24. The Psalms should be studied with reference to this alternate musical treatment; on their strophes or stanzas, chorus, and refrains, &c., see Poetry. 'Praise the Lord, for he is good: for his mercy endureth for ever,' was apparently a short formula of praise used on solemn occasions e.g. 2 Chr. 5. 13 & 7. 3; Exra 3. 11. On the Levitical order of 'Singers' see 1 Chr. 25; Exra 2. 41; 2 Chr. 9. 11; Neh. 7. 1 & 11. 22, 23 & 12. 29. Vocal music was nearly always accompanied by instruments (2 Sam. 6. 5, &c.); performers sang and played too (Ezek. 33. 33).

INSTRUMENTS OF THE OLD TESTAMENT.

(1) HEBREW, (2) BABYLONISH.

All ancient nations apparently possessed instruments of three kinds:—(1) String; (2) Wind; (3) Percussion. The tone is produced in string-instruments by setting their strings into vibration (e.g. harp, piano); in wind-instruments, by setting the column of air in vibration (a) by the lips directly (e.g. trumpet, horn), or (b) by blowing into a tube having a "reed" or "lip" duly placed (e.g. flute, oboe). The tone of instruments of percussion is produced by striking (a) a stretched membrane (e.g. tambourine, drums), or (b) a rod of metal or other hard substance (e.g. triangle, glass-harmonica); the vibrations of the substance struck being imparted to the surrounding air.

The mistranslation of Hebrew musical terms and the translation of the same Hebrew word by different English words render it necessary to Anglicise the original, and to deal with the several instruments under their Hebrew names. The following table will prove a key.

STRING INSTRUMENTS.

KINNOR, A. V. Harp (Guitar, Lyre).—Each of the ancient nations had apparently under various names its national guitar. Much circumstantial evidence indicates that the Hebrews called their guitar kinnor. It is the typical instrument (Ps. 137. 2), the first mentioned in the Bible (Gen. 4. 21, 'kinnor and organ'), and the only stringed instru-notice the shape of the instruments in Figs. 48, 49, 50 of Engel's Music of the Most Ancient Nations, which might justly be called either harps or guitars. Such were used by the ancient Egyptians as still among the negroes (nanga).† But if the kinnor were of this form, guitar would describe it better than harp.

NEBEL, A.V. Psalttery usually ('Lute', P.B.V.), || Viol (when used for secular purposes, Isa. 5. 12 & 14. 11; Amos 5. 23 & 6. 5). First mentioned in 1 Sa. 10. 3, and perhaps of Sidonian origin (Athenaeus iv. 4). Large, yet portable, and probably the most important if not the largest of the harp family used by the Hebrews; the chief religious instrument. Its shape and number of strings cannot be determined; but in ancient harps the strings almost always form the third side. Unwary commentators have identified it with a dulcimer (often called 'psalttery'); but the recorded occasions of its use show nebel to have been almost without doubt a harp.

ASOR, rather NEBEL ASOR, A.V. 'psalttery [and instrument] of ten strings', Ps. 33. 2 & 82. 2 & 144. 9).—Probably a ten-stringed harp, as usually translated; a variety of nebel (connected with it in the Hebrew), asor referring to the number of strings. That asor was a distinct instrument is a scantily supported assumption, nor does the application of the name to some of the Assyrian harps seem justifiable. Nebel asor is always translated in the Psalms as if two distinct instruments. N.B. David made both kinnors & *nebel*s of 'fir'; Solomon, of 'almug' wood. See Plants.

MAHALATH. See Poetry, Technical terms, No. 7.
MINNIM, A.V. 'stringed instruments', only in Ps. 150. 4; and in 45. 8, Heb. (shortened into minni), where A.V. "whereby they" should probably be "stringed instruments," or, "music." Minnim is traced to a root signifying distribution, hence strings.

NEGINOTH, A.V. 'stringed instruments', Hab. 3. 19. See Poetry, Technical terms, No. 11.

NEGINIM, A.V. 'stringed instruments', Isa. 33. 20; Ps. 68. 25.

WIND INSTRUMENTS.

UGAB or GHUGAB, A.V. "Organ."—The wind instrument mentioned first in the Bible (with kinnor), Gen. 4. 21; Job 21. 12, & 30. 31, and (with minnim), Psalm 150. 4, only. Probably in its simplest form merely a collection of pipes, i.e. the ancient and universal Pan's pipe, Gk. syrix, but in process of time so improved as to mechanical construction and number of pipes as to justify the A.V. rendering "organ."

HALIL or KHALIL, A.V. Pipe (Oboe), traceable to a root meaning 'bored' and usually regarded as indeed a 'pipe,' was probably an oboe, a sort of flageolet or of oboe, and used, like it, at festivals and funerals (Matt. 9. 23, below), and by shepherds and travellers, especially pilgrims (Is. 30. 29). Coarse oboes are known and used freely among Eastern nations, and are found amongst modern Egyptians, and throughout Europe. The small oboe-like reed-instrument of Italian pifferari may be accepted as the halil's modern representative.

NEKEB, A.V. "Pipe," from a Heb. root meaning 'hollow'; possibly the double flute (P), which was known to Oriental nations long before its use by the Greeks and Romans; (Ezek. 28. 13 only).

SHOPHAR, A.V. "Trumpet," a cow-horn; the usual trumpet employed, as still by the Jews, on solemn occasions, and for military purposes. Its mention in Job 39. 24 shows that the horn chronologically preceded the chatzzerah or metal trumpet.

BY F. W. MADDEN, M.R.A.S.

GENERAL REMARKS.

SILVER money was of two kinds, uncoined and coined. By uncoined may be understood pieces not issued under authority, though they may have borne some stamp or impress of their value. By coined may be understood ingots, of which the weight and fineness are certified by the integrity of designs impressed upon the faces of the metal (Prof. Jeron. "Money", p. 57).

The first mention in the Bible, after the Flood, of uncoined money is when Abraham came up out of Egypt "very rich in cattle, in silver, and in gold" (Gen. xiii. 2; comp. Gen. xxiv. 35). Though this passage does not imply anything more than "bullion", yet we soon find a notice of the use of money (Heb. silver) as the price paid for a slave (Gen. ii. 13). The first actual transaction of commerce is the purchase by Abraham of the cave of Machpelah for 400 shekels of silver, current [money] with the merchant (Gen. xxiii. 16); and silver as a medium of commerce appears to have been in general use among the nations of the Philistines (Gen. xx. 16; Judg. xvi. 5, 18; xvii. 2, seq.), the Midianites (Gen. xxvii. 28), and the Syrians (2 Kings v. 5, 33). By the laws of Moses, men and cattle (Lev. xix. 2, seq.; Num. iii. 45, seq.), the possessing houses and fields (Lev. xxvii. 14, seq.), provisions (Deut. ii. 6, 28; r. 36), all fines for offences (Exod. xxi. xxii.), the contributions to the Temple (Exod. xxx. 13; xxxviii. 26), the sacrifice animals (Lev. v. 15), the redemption of the first-born (Num. iii. 47-50; xviii. 15), were estimated and regulated by money value. It is probable that a fixed weight was assigned to single pieces, so as to make them suitable for the various articles presented in trade. The system of weighing (though frequent mention is made of the balance and the weighing of money, Exod. xxii. 17; Lev. xix. 36; Deut. xxv. 13, 15; 2 Sam. xviii. 12; 1 Kings xi. 39; Jer. xii. 9, 10; Prov. xi. 1, &c.) is not likely to have been applied to every individual piece. In the large total of 1,560 half-shekels accumulated by the contribution of each Israelite (Exod. xxxviii. 26), each individual half-shekel would hardly have been weighed. Money was sometimes put into a chest, which when full was emptied by the high-priest, and the money was bound up in bags, and then told, perhaps being weighed in the bags (2 Kings xii. 10; comp. 2 Chron. xxiv. 8-11). That there were pieces of different denominations is evident from the passage in 1 Cor. xiii. 13, where the half-shekel is to be paid as the atonement money, and "the rich shall not give more, and the poor shall not give less" (Exod. xxi. 15). The third part of the shekel is mentioned in Persian times (Neh. x. 32), and the fourth part must have been an actual piece, for it was all the silver that the servant of Saul had to pay as a ransom (1 Sam. ix. 8, 9). Iron and lead bars of constant form and weight circulated in Egypt; in Greece, bars of iron; Italy, bars of copper; in Britain, in the time of Julius Caesar, bars of copper and iron; and from the earliest times, gold and silver in the same shape were employed in general traffic in the East. This explains the mention of a wedge (Heb. tanqum) of gold found by Achan at Jericho (Josh. vii. 21) [see Talent under WEIGHTS], as well as the different payments which are mentioned in the O. T., and which presuppose with certainty the currency of single pieces of metal according to weight.

It is also probable that a system of "jewel currency" or "ring-money" was in vogue. The case of Rebekah, to whom the servant of Abraham gave "a golden ear-ring of half a shekel weight, and two bracelets for her hands ten shekels weight" (Gen. xxiv. 22), proves that the ancient Hebrews made their jewels of a specific weight so as to know the value of these ornaments in employing them for money. That the Egyptians kept their bullion in jewels is evident from their monuments, where they are represented weighing rings of gold and silver, and is further illustrated by the fact of the Israelites having at their exodus from Egypt borrowed "jewels [vessels] of silver and jewels [vessels] of gold" (Keli keseph, Keli zahab), and "spoiled the Egyptians" (Exod. xii. 35, 36; comp. 1 Cor. xiii. 22; xi. 2). So too it would appear that the money used by the children of Jacob, when they went to purchase corn in Egypt, was an annular currency (Gen. xliii. 35). Their money is described as "bundles of money", and when returned to them was found to be "of [full] weight" (Gen. xliii. 21). It was therefore of a form capable of being tied up, which receives corroboration from the passage in Deuteronomy (xiv. 24-26), where directions are given as to the payment of the tithes to the sanctuary: "Then shalt thou turn it into money, and shalt up the money in thy hand, and shalt go unto the place which the Lord thy God shall choose". The account of the sale of Joseph to the Midianites affords another instance of the employment of jewel ornaments as a medium of exchange (Gen. xxxvii. 28), as we gather from the account in Numbers (xxxi. 60, 61) of the spoiling of the Midianites, that they carried their whole wealth in the forms of chains, bracelets, ear-rings, and tablets. The words of Job gave him, in addition to "a piece of money" [Kesitah], "an ear-ring of gold" (mezem zahab, IX. tetradrachm chrysos kai asmos—tetradrachm of uncoined gold, Job xlii. 11). Now had these ear-rings not been intended as representing money, all the friends of the patriarch would not have given him the same article, and that in conjunction with a piece of silver.

From these statements, it is evident, firstly, that if the Hebrews became learned in "all the wisdom of the Egyptians" (Acts vii. 22; comp. 1 Kings iv. 30), they did not learn from them the use of money; and secondly, that where in the Pentateuch is there any mention of money that was coined. Nor do the passages in Joshua, Judges, and Job imply an actual coinage, any more than the "piece of silver" [AGORAE] mentioned at the time of Samuel (1 Sam. ii. 36). The reigns of David and Solomon were an era of prosperity for Judaea—"Silver was in Jerusalem as stones; it was nothing accounted of in the days of Solomon" (1 Kings x. 21, 27; 2 Chron. ix. 30, 37); and it is certain that there were no real coins, namely, pieces struck under an authority, before the Exile. On the other hand, the Hebrews, as I have shown, must have employed pieces of a definite weight; but the excavations in Palestine have never brought to light an example, any more than the excavations in Egypt, Assyria, and Babylonia. It may, however, be observed that when the pieces of silver were collected for the treasury they were melted down before release. It is recorded (2 Kings xxii. 9; comp. 2 Chron. xxxiv. 17) that Shaphan the scribe continued in circulation till the time of Croesus, who, on his accession in B.C. 560, Lydian coinage, abolished electrum, and issued instead pieces of gold and silver. Before the coined money into Greece, there was a currency of obeliskoi, "spits" or "skewers", probably of six of which made a handful (drachmē), and which were of a considerable size. The first 6 were struck at Ægina in B.C. 670-660.

The earliest coins mentioned in the Bible are the coins called drams, B.C. 538 [DRAW]. It is probable that Jewish silver shekels and half-shekels were introduced under Ezra, about B.C. 458 [SHEKEL], probable that they were issued under Simon Maccabæus, B.C. 129 (1 Macc. xv. 6), and copper by the Asmonean and Herodian family.

The N. T. history falls within the reigns of Augustus, Tiberius, Caligula, Claudius, and Nero, & (Luke ii. 1), Tiberius (Luke iii. 1), and Claudius (Acts xi. 28; xviii. 2), are mentioned; but New the Acts from chapter xxv. to the end, and in Phil. iv. 22. Coins of all these Emperors were in circulation.

The following list embraces all the denominations of money mentioned in the Old and New Test AGORAH. See Piece of Silver.

BEKAH (Exod. xxxviii. 26). Literally "a half", "half a shekel", about 12. 4d. Extant half-shekels weigh about 110 grains. (HALF A SHEKEL AND SHEKEL.)

BRASS (Money). (1) In the O. T. a passage in Ezekiel (xvi. 36, Heb. nechoseth, LXX. Chalkos, Vulgate æ, A. V. filthiness) has been supposed to refer to brass money, but with no probability, as this was the latest metal introduced into Greece for money. The Hebrew word probably means something worthless, like "base metal" (comp. Jer. vi. 28; Ezek. xxi. 18). (2) Chalkos, pecunia (Matt. x. 9). The brass coins current in Palestine in the N. T. period consisted of Roman copper and Greek imperial coins, of the coins of Alexander Jannæus, of the Herodian family, and of the Procurators of Judæa. See FARTHING and Mile.

DARIC. See Dram.

DENARIUS. See Penny.

DIDRACHM. See Shekel and Tribute-money.

DRACHM. Drachmē, drachma (2 Macc. iv. 19; x. 20; xii. 43; Tobit v. 14). It is of various weights, according to the use of the different talents. The drachms here mentioned are of the Attic talent, which became almost universal on Alexander's succession (B.C. 336), and weighed about 67.2 grains. In later times (about B.C. 27) the drachm weighed only 61.3 grains, and thus became very nearly equal to the Roman denarius (PENNY), the average weight of which was 60 grains. The earliest Attic drachm contained about $\frac{1}{16}$ th of the weight of alloy, and there remain 66.1 grains of silver to be valued. Our shillings weigh 87.2 grains, and contain 80.7 grains of pure silver.

The earliest Attic drachm is therefore worth $\frac{66.1}{87.2}$ of a shilling, or 0.758 pence, which is $\frac{9}{16}$ d. + $\frac{3}{16}$ of a farthing. The later Attic drachm, deducting also $\frac{1}{16}$ of the weight of alloy, is worth $\frac{60.1}{87.2}$ of a shilling, or 8.93 pence, which is $\frac{9}{16}$ d. + $\frac{1}{16}$ of a farthing; and hence the value of the latest drachm or denarius may be taken at about 8d. [PIECE OF SILVER AND PENNY.]

DARAM. The translation in the A. V. of the Hebrew words Adarkon and Darkemon (Ezra ii. 69; viii. 27; Neh. vii. 70-72; 1 Chron. xxix. 7). Though there are several opinions concerning the origin of these words, it is agreed that by them a gold coin or stater—the Persian daric—is intended. The origin of the term has been sought in the name of Darius the Mede, but on no sure grounds, or of that of Darius, son of Hystaspes. In consequence of the type of the coins being "an archer" (by which name—toxotai—they were sometimes called), some have thought that the Hebrew words were derived from darok, "to bend the bow"; whilst others suggest a connection with the Persian words dahtan, "to have, to hold, to possess", or dara, "a king", which latter would be a likely derivation, as the figure represented is not any particular king, but the king of Persia in a general sense. Though the passages in Ezra and Nehemiah would seem to show that coins of similar name were current during the reigns of Cyrus, Cambyses, and Darius Hystaspes, it is a question if the coin called "Daric" is intended by those mentioned during the reign of Cyrus, B.C. 538 (Ezra ii. 69). The daric proper was not in circulation till the re of Hystaspes (B.C. 521-485), who issued of pure gold, though the actual name was not in vogue till the time of his (B.C. 485-465); and the drams mentioned of his son, Artaxerxes Longimanus (B.C. vii. 72), are certainly the coins called, this period extensively circulated in Palestine that the staters of Croesus, king of Lydia, in circulation from after the capture of to the time when Darius reformed the the Lydian staters would be those allowed reign of Cyrus. The ordinary Persian gold piece, bearing the figure of a king in left hand a bow and in right a spear, Ezek. xxxix. 3; Isa. lvi. 19, and has a of 130 grains. The English sovereign which, after deducting $\frac{1}{16}$ th, leaves 111 gold; but the daric is $\frac{1}{16}$ th finer than our ing it at 130 grains in weight, contains 121 gold; therefore in value it equals 111 or about £1 2s. Double darics, weighing —but rare—and perhaps half-darics, were also in existence. With reference drams at the time of David (1 Chron. be remembered that the writer, who was Ezra, wished to express in large his readers the value of the gold which fore translated the terms employed whatever they were, into terms that own day (Speaker's Com., Vol. III. p. 2).

FARTHING. This word occurs four of the N. T. Two names of coins are (1) Assarion (Matt. x. 29; Luke xii. 6) of the Roman as or assarion. From Vulgate substitutes the word denarius the two assarion of the Greek text, it is probable that a single coin is intended by sion, an idea fully borne out by the coin on which are inscribed the words assaria assaria assaria. The assarion of sought for among the Greek imperial coins brass coins of Antioch in Syria seem probable specimens. One of these coins mark GAD (in Greek letters), proves the current in Gadara of Decapolis. The time of Augustus, consist of two series legends, and having the name of the of the era of Antioch; and (2) with emperor in Latin, and on the reverse (Senatus consulto). After the reign of V the two sets become amalgamated, and the second brass coins of these series 143 grains, and are specimens of the as the denarius (PENNY), would be equal money. (2) Kedranis (Matt. v. 26). quadrans, the fourth part of the Roman equal to the chalkos, weighing 67.2 gr currency of Palestine in the time of Tiberius consisted partly of Roman and partly of Græco-Roman or Greek sequences of the reduction of the as quadrans became reduced to just the about $\frac{1}{2}$ of an English farthing"; but on this notion see Mite.

FOURTH PART OF A SHEKEL. Rebakh (1 Sam. 8), about $\frac{1}{4}$. [SHEKEL.]

GERAH (Exod. xiii. 13; Lev. xviii. 25; Num. iii. 47; 11. 16; Ezek. xiv. 12). The twentieth part of a shekel, about $\frac{1}{4}$. [SHEKEL.]

GOLD [Money]. (1) There is no positive mention of use of gold money among the Hebrews (see Isa. xlv. Job xviii. 16) [PIECE OF GOLD; SHEKEL], though gold constituted part of the wealth of Abraham (Gen. xiii. 2), we exclude the "600 shekels of gold" paid by David for a threshing-floor and oxen (1 Chron. xxi. 25; comp. 2 Sam. xxi. 24, "shekels of silver"), and it was generally employed for personal ornaments and for objects in connection with the Temple (2 Chron. iii. 9, &c.). (2) Chrissa aureus (Matt. x. 9; James v. 3); Chrusion, aureus (Acts iii. 6; xx. 33; 1 Pet. i. 18). The gold coinage current in Palestine in the N. T. period was the Roman imperial aureus, which passed for 25 denarii, and was worth out 21 ls.

HALF A SHEKEL (Exod. xxx. 13, 15), about 1*s*. 4*d*. [SEKAR; SHEKEL.]

KESPEH. See Money, Silver, and Silverling.

KESITAH. See Piece of Money and Piece of Silver.

MITE (Mark xii. 42; Luke xii. 63; xxi. 2). The rendering of the Greek word lepton, which was a small Greek copper coin, $\frac{1}{4}$ of the obol, weighing 336 grains, and one-half of the original chalkos or quadran. St. Mark states "two mites, which is a farthing"; but he probably meant "two small pieces of money," the smallest pieces then extant, and the words "which is a quadran," have been added to show that the quadran, weighing about 168 grains, was then the smallest piece struck. The mite added to was a Jewish coin, for the Jews were not permitted to bring any but Jewish money into the Holy Place, and for this cause money-changers [MONEY-CHANGERS] stood at the entrance to the Temple in order to give Jewish money in exchange for foreign; and it is probable that the small coins of Alexander annex, ranging in weight from 30 grains to 15 grains, the pieces in question. Their value would be about $\frac{1}{4}$ of a Roman sesterce, or $\frac{1}{4}$ of an English farthing. If, however, the pieces of 15 grains are the half of those of 30, and not examples of the same coin of light weight, then two would equal a quadran, and their value would be $\frac{1}{2}$ of an English farthing. But this conjecture is by no means sure.

MONEY. (1) In the O. T. the general expression is shekel. (2) In the N. T. money is rendered as follows:—(a) Argurion, pecunia, "silver" (Matt. xxv. 18, 27; xxviii. 18; Mark xiv. 11; Luke ix. 3; xiv. 15, 23; xlv. 5; Acts vii. 16 [argenteum]; viii. 20 [pecunia]). In Matt. xvi. 9, the phrase is "much [money]". (b) Chalkos, es, brass (Mark vi. 8; xii. 41). (c) Chrēma, "a thing that is used or needed," pretium (Acts iv. 37; pecunia, viii. 20; xiv. 26). (d) Kerma, "anything cut small," see John ii. 15). [SILVER and MONEY-CHANGERS.]

PENNY. Denarion, denarius (Matt. xviii. 28; xx. 2, 10, 13; xlv. 19; Mark vi. 37; xii. 15; xiv. 5; Luke vii. 4; x. 36; xx. 24; John vi. 7; xii. 6; Rev. vi. 6). Its standard weight in the reign of Augustus, and to the time of Nero, was 60 grains. Deducting $\frac{1}{4}$ of the weight for alloy, there remain 56 grs. of pure silver, and a shilling containing 807 grs. of pure silver, we have $\frac{1}{14}$ of a shilling, or 9324 pence—about 8*d*. In the time of Nero the weight was reduced to 525; and applying to this the same method of reckoning, the penny of Nero's time would equal about 7*d*. There is no doubt that most of the silver currency in Palestine during the N. T. period consisted of denarii, and "a penny" was the tribute-money payable by the Jews to the Roman emperor [TRIBUTE MONEY]. "A penny" was the day's pay for a labourer in Palestine at the time of our Lord (Matt. xx. 2, 9, 10, 13; comp. Tobit v. 14), as it was the day's pay of a field-labourer in the middle ages; and the denarius is still preserved in our £ s. D. [DRACHM and PIECE OF SILVER, 2.]

PIECE OF GOLD. This phrase occurs only once in the O. T., in the passage respecting Naaman the Syrian (2 Kings v. 6). In several other passages of a similar nature, the word used is "piece of silver," but the word intended is probably "shekel."

PIECE OF MONEY. (1) Kesitah (Gen. xxxiii. 19; "piece of silver," Josh. xiv. 32; Job xlii. 11). From the translation by the LXX. of "lambs," it has been assumed that the kesitah was a coin bearing the impression of a lamb or a sheep, but the coins so frequently quoted as examples belong probably to Cyprus, and were not struck till after B.C. 450. The real meaning of kesitah is "a portion," and it was in all probability a piece of rough silver of fixed weight. (2) Stater (Matt. xvii. 27). The word stater means a coin of a certain weight, and hence a standard (comp. shekel and pondo), and was a term applied by the Greeks to coins of gold, of electrum, and of silver. The name was applied first to the didrachm (two drachms), and then to the tetradrachm (four drachms). During the first and second centuries, the silver currency of Palestine consisted of tetradrachms of Antioch on Orontes, of Tyre, &c., and of Roman denarii of a quarter their weight. The Attic tetradrachm was called stater, as the standard coin of the system, and no other stater was current in Palestine at this time. The great cities of Syria and Phœnicia either ceased to strike tetradrachms, or debased their coinage before the close of the first century A.D. Antioch continued to strike tetradrachms to the third century, but gradually depreciated them, the commencement of which cannot be determined. It was carried so far as to destroy the correspondence of the stater to four denarii by the time of Hadrian (A.D. 117). Other cities, if they issued staters towards the close of the first century, struck them of such base metal as to render their separation from copper money impossible. On this evidence, the Gospel is of the first century. The tetradrachm of Antioch (stater) is a specimen of the "piece of money" that was found by St. Peter in the fish's mouth (Matt. xvii. 27). It represents the tax for two persons—for our Lord and for St. Peter [TRIBUTE MONEY, 1]. It is equivalent in weight to the shekel, averaging 220 grains—and to about 2*s*. 8*d*. of our money. [PIECE OF SILVER, 2.]

PIECE OF SILVER. This phrase occurs in the A. V. of both the O. T. and N. T. (1) The word "pieces" has been supplied in the A. V. for a word understood in the Hebrew. The rendering is always "a thousand," or the like, "of silver" (Gen. xx. 16; xxviii. 23; xlv. 22; Judg. ix. 4; xvi. 6; 2 Kings vi. 25; Song of Solomon viii. 11; Hosea iii. 2; Zech. ii. 12, 13). In similar passages, the word "shekels" occurs in the Hebrew [SHEKEL], and there is no doubt that this is the word understood in all these cases. There are, however, some exceptional passages where a word equivalent to "piece" or "pieces" is found in the Hebrew. The first occurs in 1 Sam. ii. 36, Agorat keseph, "piece of silver," and the agorah may be the same as the gerah (q. v.). Both are translated in the LXX. by obolus. The second is in Ps. lxxviii. 30 (Heb. 32), Ratsef keseph, "pieces of silver" (LXX. [lxvii. 30] argurion), and the word rats from ratsef, "to break in pieces," must mean a fragment or piece broken off. The third, the kesitah, to which I have already alluded. [PIECE OF MONEY, 1.] (2) Two words are rendered in the N. T. by "piece of silver." (a) Drachmē, drachma (Luke xv. 8), and here correctly rendered, as the Attic drachm was at the time of St. Luke equivalent to the Roman denarius [DRACHM; PENNY]. This accounts for the remark of Josephus (Antiq. lii. 8, 2), who says that the shekel was equalled four Attic drachms "for in his time the drachm and denarius were almost equal to the quarter of a shekel [SHEKEL]. Value about 8*d*. or 7*d*." (b) Argurion, argenteus, denarius. This word occurs in two passages—(A) the account of the betrayal of our Lord for "thirty pieces of silver" (Matt. xxvi. 15; xxvii. 3, 5, 6, 9). These have usually been considered to be denarii, but on no sufficient ground. The parallel passage in Zechariah (x. 12, 13), is translated "thirty [pieces] of silver"; but which should doubtless be read, "thirty shekels of silver," whilst it is observable that "thirty shekels of silver" was the price of blood to be paid in the case of a servant accidentally killed (Exod. xxi. 32). The passage may therefore be explained as "thirty shekels of silver," not current shekels, but tetradrachms of the Attic standard of the Greek cities of Syria and Phœnicia. These tetradrachms were common at the time of our Lord, and of them the stater was a specimen [PIECE OF MONEY, 2]. In the A. V. of St. Matthew the prophecy is ascribed to Jeremiah instead of to Zechariah. Many suggestions have been made on this question, but it may be observed that the Syriac version omits the proper name, and merely says "the prophet"; hence a copyist might have inserted the wrong name. (3) The price of the conjuring books that were burnt (Acts xix. 19). The Vulgate has accurately rendered the phrase denarii, as there is no doubt that these coins are intended. [MONEY and SILVER.]

POUND. Maâ (Luke xix. 13-25)—money of account. At this time the Attic talent obtained in Palestine. Sixty maâs went to the talent (q. v.). The "pound" contained 100 drachma. The drachm of the Gospel period being equivalent to about 8d., the value of the pound would be £3 6s. 8d. The Greek name maâ was probably derived from the Hebrew maneh (q. v. under WEIGHTS).

RATZ. See Piece of Silver.

REBAH. See Fourth Part of a Shekel.

SHEKEL. A word signifying "weight," and also the name of a coin, either silver or copper. It only occurs in the O. T., where it signifies the weight of certain objects, or where it is employed for a piece of silver of fixed value. The word "shekel" occurs in the Hebrew and the A. V. in the following passages:—Gen. xliii. 14, 16; Exod. xxi. 32; xxi. 33, 34; xxxviii. 24-26; Lev. v. 15; xviii. 3-7; Num. xiii. 47, 50; vii. 13, 19, 25, 37; 43, 46, 51, 67, 73, 76, 85, 86; xviii. 16; Josh. vii. 21; 1 Sam. ix. 8; xvii. 5, 7; 2 Sam. xiv. 26; xxi. 16; xxi. 24; 2 Kings vii. 1; xv. 20; 1 Chron. xxi. 25 (gold shekels); 2 Chron. iii. 9 (gold shekels); Neh. v. 15; x. 32; Jer. xxxii. 9; Ezek. iv. 10; xlv. 12; Amos vii. 5. It is supplied in the A. V. in connection with "silver" in Deut. xxi. 19, 20; Judg. xvii. 2-4, 10; 2 Sam. xviii. 11, 12; 1 Kings x. 29; 2 Chron. i. 17; and in connection with "gold" in Gen. xxiv. 22; Num. vii. 14, 20, 21, 22, 25, 44, 56, 62, 63, 74, 80, 86; Judg. vii. 16; 1 Kings x. 16; 2 Chron. ix. 15, 16 (see Maneh under WEIGHTS). Three kinds of shekels appear to be mentioned:—(1) the shekel, (2) the shekel of the sanctuary, and (3) the shekel of the king's weight. The "shekel of the sanctuary," or "holy shekel," a term generally applied to the silver shekel, but once to the gold (Exod. xxxviii. 24), was probably the normal weight, and was kept by the priests. The "shekel of the king" was connected with the Assyrio-Babylonian maneh of the king, as marked on the monuments from Nineveh (Talent under WEIGHTS). The LXX. translate the denominations in silver by didrachmon and stiklos. The shekel as extent corresponds in weight to the tetradrachm, or didrachm of the early Phœnician talent in use in the cities of Phœnicia under Persian rule. It is probable that the Alexandrian Jews adopted the term didrachmon as the common name of the coin which was equal in weight to the shekel. The value of the silver shekel is about 2s. 8d. The gold shekel, as derived from a passage in Josephus, must have weighed about 363 grains (see Pound under WEIGHTS), a very little lower than the 60th of the Assyrian mina in gold, which weighed 260 grains; and when he says in another passage (Antiq. lib. 8. 10; comp. Num. vii. 14) that ten gold shekels equalled ten darics, he must mean the double daric, weighing about 260 grains. The gold shekel was worth about £2. None have ever been discovered. (See General Remarks.) Fifteen shekels of silver, each weighing about 324 grains, were equal in value to one shekel of gold (Talent under WEIGHTS). The divisions of the shekel mentioned in the O. T. are the half (beah), the third part, the fourth part (rebaâ), and the twentieth part (gerah), q. v. In the reign of Artaxerxes Longimanus (B. C. 465) a special commutation was granted to Ezra "to do what seems good with the rest of the silver and the gold" (Ezra vii. 18); and it has been suggested that this was virtually permission to the Jews to coin money, and the silver shekels extant dated of the years 1 to 5, and the half-shekels of the years 1 to 4, weighing about 230 and 110 grains respectively, are considered to be of this period. As regards the "shekels of silver" mentioned in Nehemiah (v. 15; comp. ix. 32), these may perhaps refer to the silver coin circulating in the Persian kingdom called siglos, of which 20 went to one gold daric, and weighing 84 grains, but having no connection with the stiklos (weighing about 320 grains), excepting in name. These coins are, like the darics, impressed with the figure of an archer (Drachm). In the year B. C. 134, Antiochus VII. (Siketes) granted special permission to Simon Maccabæus to coin money with his own stamp (1 Mac. ix. 6), and the silver shekel and half-shekel most probably belong to Simon, and perhaps the copper pieces ($\frac{1}{4}$ shekel, $\frac{1}{2}$ shekel, and $\frac{3}{4}$ shekel), dated in the fourth year; but there is great uncertainty as to the latter.

The Asmonean dynasty continued to issue a copper coinage, gradually showing Greek tendencies, to the time of Antigonus, the last prince of the Asmonean dynasty,

(B. C. 40-37), and the numerous coinage of Alexander Jannæus (B. C. 106-78) doubtless circulated even in N. T. times [MTR]. The Idumean prince, commencing with Herod I. (surnamed the Great), continued a copper coinage with only Greek legends, which circulated in Judæa (as well as a promissorial coinage, A. D. 6-66) till the death of Agrippa II. (Acts xxv. 12; xxvi. 2, seq.) in A. D. 104. The national coinage, consisting of silver shekels and $\frac{1}{2}$ shekels, as well as of copper, with old Hebrew inscriptions, was revived during the first revolt (May, A. D. 66-September, A. D. 70), and during the second under Bar-cochab (A. D. 132-A. D. 135), at which time many of the Jewish $\frac{1}{2}$ shekels were struck over Roman denarii.

SILVER [Money]. (1) Keaph in O. T. (q. v.); OS in N. T. argyros, argenteus (Matt. x. 9; James v. 3), or argenteus, argenteus (Acts iii. 6; xx. 33; 1 Pet. i. 15). The silver coin current in Palestine in N. T. period consisted of the tetradrachms and drachms of the Attic standard, and of the Roman denarius. [MONEY, 1 and 2, and PIECE OF SILVER, 2.]

SILVERLING. Keaph (Isa. vii. 23). The word silverling occurs in Tyndale's version of Acts xix. 19, and in Coverdale's of Judg. ix. 4; xvi. 8. The German silverling is found in Luther's version (Bible Word-Book). The same word is also used in Cranmer and Tyndale for the money stolen by Micah (Judg. xvii. 2, 3)—the hewn handwork silverlings (Bible Educator, vol. iv. p. 218).

STATER. See Piece of Money, 2, and Tribute-money, 1.

SUM [of Money]. (1) Ephelesion (Acts xxi. 26, i. e. in classical authors capital as opposed to interest or income (cp. "principal," Lev. vi. 5; Num. v. 7). In Mt. x. 15 ephelesion, "poll-tax," is used in the place of the ordinary word healos. [TRIBUTE (Money), 2.] SUM or MONEY. (2) Trai argyriou, pretium argenti (Acts vi. 18), i. e. price in silver. [MONEY.]

TALENT. Talentum, talentum, a sum, not a coin. (1) In O. T. the rendering of the Hebrew beah (see Talent under WEIGHTS); (2) in N. T. this word occurs:—(a) in the parable of the unmerciful servant (Matt. xviii. 23-35); and (b) in the parable of the talents (Matt. xxv. 14-30). At this time the Attic talent obtained in Palestine; 60 maâs and 6,000 drachms went to the talent. It was consequently worth about £200. [POUND.]

THIRD PART OF THE SHEKEL (Ezek. x. 32, about 10½d. See Shekel and Tribute [Money]).

TRIBUTE [Money]. (1) The sacred tribute, didrachmon (Matt. xvii. 24). The sacred tribute or payment of the "atonement money" was half a shekel (Exod. xxx. 11, 16), and was originally levied on every male of twenty years old and above when the Israelites were first numbered. In the reign of Josiah the same sum was demanded for the repair of the Temple (2 Chron. xxx. 4-14). After the return from the Captivity, the annual payment "for the service of the house of God" was one-third of the shekel (q. v.), and was voluntarily contributed (Neh. x. 32). The amount of tribute was again restored to the half-shekel (q. v.), which the Jews when dispersed throughout the world continued to pay towards the Temple. It is to this tribute that St. Matthew refers, and the stater found in the Shek month was an Attic tetradrachm, and at this time equal to a shekel [PIECE OF MONEY; SHEKEL]. Many commentators, both ancient and modern, have entirely missed the meaning of this miracle by interpreting the payment as a civil one. That it was the sacred tribute is plain from our Lord's reason for exemption: "Of whom do the kings of the earth take custom or tribute? of their own children or of strangers?" (Matt. xvii. 25, 26), and further, from His reason for payment, "lest we should offend them," which shows that the Jews willingly paid the tribute; indeed, it was not enforced by law even in the earliest times, being in this respect unlike the civil tribute. (2) The civil tribute, nomisma ten denarii, healos, phoros (Matt. xxii. 17, 19; Mark xii. 14; Luke xx. 22; xxiii. 2). This was a tax paid to the Roman Emperor, and was doubtless established when Judæa became a Roman province. The sum paid annually is not known; but after the capture of Jerusalem and destruction of the Temple, Jerusalem ordered the Jews, in whatever country they might be, to pay the sum of two denarii to the temple of Jupiter Capitolinus as they had previously paid to the Temple at Jerusalem. Under Domitian the tax was enforced with great severity, but upon the accession of Nerva it was abolished. Numismatic records establish this fact; coins are extant with the legend, Audi Judæam coloniam subactam (comp.

tycophantia—false accusation—Luke xix. 8). After the revolt of Bar-cochab, Hadrian renewed the tax, and in the reign of Alexander Severus (A.D. 226) the Jews continued to pay the didrachm. This civil tribute was paid in denarii. "Show me the tribute-money; and they brought unto Him a penny" (Matt. xxi. 19; comp. Mark xii. 15; Luke xix. 24). "And He saith unto them, Whose is this image and superscription? They say unto Him, Caesar's." The title of Caesar is common to all the Roman emperors, and the name of Tiberius, who was the Caesar alluded to, is abbreviated on the coins, TI, while the title CÆSAR is at length. The answer may further be illustrated by the small brass coins issued under the Procurators Coponius, Ambivivus, and Rufus, circulating in Judæa at this time, on which is simply the legend Kaisaros—of Caesar. [PENNY.]

TWENTIETH PART OF THE SHEKEL; about $\frac{1}{10}$ d. See Gerah and Shekel.

The two following terms bear direct relation to money, and are worthy of illustration:—

MONEY-CHANGERS. Three distinct terms are employed in the N. T. to express this class—(1) Trapezites, numularii, A. V. "exchanger" (Matt. xxv. 27), from trapeza, "a table," a word employed for the "tables" (mensæ) of the money-changers in Matt. xxi. 12; Mark xi. 15; John ii. 15, and for the "bank" (mensa) in Luke xix. 23. Trapezites was the ordinary name for the banker at Athens. His principal occupation was that of changing money at an agio. He was a private banker, like the argentarii at Rome, who must be distinguished from the mensarii or menularii and the numularii, who were public bankers appointed by the State on various emergencies, the latter of whom seem to have been permanently employed. Hence the Vulgate has rendered their name in all cases correctly. As the Greek word trapezites is from trapeza, "a table," so our English word "banker" (French, banquier) is derived from the French banc, "a bench," on which the person sat to do his business. (2) Kollubastai, numularii, A. V. "money-changer" (Matt. xxi. 12; Mark xi. 15); A. V. "changer" (John ii. 15), from kollubos or kollubon, sometimes designated as "the changing of money," or "rate of exchange," sometimes as "a small coin" or "a kind of money." A passage in Theophrastus shows us that the kollubos must have been a silver piece ranging between the lepton (MITE) and the $\frac{1}{2}$ obol, and therefore $\frac{1}{4}$ of an obol, weighing about $\frac{1}{16}$ grains. It would thus be the silver equivalent of the chalcous, which was the copper $\frac{1}{2}$ of an obol. (3) Kermatistai, numularii; A. V. "changer of money" (John ii. 15), from a Greek word signifying "to cut small," which is from kermā, "money" (John ii. 15 [MONEY]). Money-changing was called kermatismos. No coin was called by this name. The money-changers, of which perhaps the "goldsmiths" who repaired the vessels of the Temple (Neh. iii. 8) are prototypes, sat in the courts of the Temple on the 25th of Nisan for the purpose of exchanging foreign money for Jewish, as the Temple tax could only be paid in this latter coin. They also seem to have acted as bankers, money being placed in their hands for the purpose of increasing it, and on which interest was paid (Matt. xxv. 27; Luke xix. 23). Though the system of "lending" was not altogether objected to in the O. T. (Exod. xxii. 25; Lev. xxv. 35, 37; Deut. xxiii. 19, 20; Prov. vi. 1; Ps. cv. 5; Jer. xv. 10; Ezek. xiii. 12; xviii. 13, &c.), yet after the Captivity the Jews were compelled to leave off usury (Neh. v. 11, 12), whilst in the N. T. period it was sanctioned, provided it was done "hoping for nothing again" (Luke vi. 35; comp. Matt. v. 42). The system, however, pursued by the money-changers in the Temple must have been a vicious one, as is apparent from our Lord's denunciation of their doings (Matt. xxi. 13; Mark xi. 17; Luke xix. 46; comp. Isa. lvi. 7; Jer. vii. 11).

TREASURY or TREASURE. This term is used in the A. V. of the N. T. as the translation of three different words—(1) Gazophylakion (Mark xii. 41, 43; Luke xxi. 1; John vii. 20), from gaza, "a treasure," and phylakōs, "to keep." The word gaza (Heb. ganza), which occurs in this sense in Acts vii. 27, is employed frequently in the O. T. for "treasures" or "treasure-house" (Ezra v. 17; vi. 1; vii. 20; Esth. iii. 9; iv. 7; Ezek. xxvii. 24; 1 Chron. xxviii. 11). It is not a Hebrew word, but probably a Persian. The term gazophylakion or gazophylacium occurs in various passages of the Maccabees, and the Vulgate takes it as the term for the "chest" (Heb. arm, LXX, thōsa) in which Jehoiada collected the money for the repairs of the Temple (see General Remarks). The treasury chamber appears to have been a place where people came to offer their charity-money for the repairs and other uses of the Temple, and consisted of 13 brazen chests (Heb. trumpets, because the mouths were wide at the top and narrow below), which stood in the outer court of the women. (2) Korbanas, corbōna (Matt. xxvii. 6), the sacred treasure of the Jews, and explained in Mark vii. 11 as a gift (dōron), and by Josephus as "a gift to God." Korban in the O. T. is principally employed for "unbloody sacrifices" (comp. Lev. ii. 1, 4, 5, 6). Dōron in the N. T. principally means "gifts in general" (Matt. ii. 11), "sacrificial gifts" (Matt. v. 23, 24; Heb. v. 1; xi. 4); "gifts of God to man" (Ephes. ii. 8), "of man to man" (Rev. xi. 10); but it is also used of gifts to the "treasury" (Luke xxi. 1), and in one case appears to mean the "treasury itself" (Luke xxi. 4). (3) Thesaurōs, thesaurōs. (a) As the "treasure-house" (Matt. ii. 11; xiii. 12); (b) as the "treasure" (Matt. vi. 19, 20; xii. 35; xiii. 44; xiv. 21; Mark 3; 21; Luke vi. 45; xii. 33; xxvii. 22; 2 Cor. iv. 7; Col. iii. 3; Heb. xi. 26). The word is used in the LXX as the translation of the Hebrew otsar, meaning either "treasures of God," "store-house for corn," "treasury for gold and silver," &c. (Deut. xxviii. 12; xxxii. 34; 1 Chron. xxvii. 27; Josh. vi. 19; 1 Kings vi. 51, &c.).

WEIGHTS.

The subject of Hebrew weights is involved in great obscurity, and scholars are at variance on several important questions. Some are of opinion that reliable information is to be obtained in Hebrew literature, and especially in Maimonides, who makes the Jewish silver shekel have a weight of 320 average-sized grains of barley taken from the middle of the ear, which are identical with the grains of troy weight, and to equal 320 grains troy containing exactly 100 carats diamond weight; but the monuments in existence and other facts prove that the Rabbinical distinction between the Mosaic Though specimens of Assyrian, Babylonian, Egyptian, and Greek weights have been discovered, no Judean weight has ever come to light. The following weights are mentioned in the Bible:—

BEKAH (Gen. xxiv. 22, "half," "half a shekel"). This word only occurs in the Pentateuch. See Bekah under MONEY.

GERAH. Properly a "grain" or "bean," the smallest silver weight, $\frac{1}{20}$ th part of the shekel. See Gerah under MONEY and Shekel.

LITRA. See Pound.

MANEH (LXX. maß; Vulgate, mina). "A portion or part," A. V. "pound," sometimes called stater—standard; a word owing its origin to Babylon, and which, as the weight was employed by the Egyptians, Phœnicians, Hebrews, and Greeks, has the same meaning in the language of all these nations. The weight of the golden targets made by Solomon for the Temple are stated to have been 300 (shekels) of gold each (3 Chron. ix. 16), whilst in the parallel passage the amount of gold employed for each shield is given as three pounds (manehs, 1 Kings x. 17). It would thus appear that the maneh of gold was equal to 100 shekels, but it must be observed that in the Chronicles the Hebrew is "300 of gold," the word shekels being supplied in the A. V.; and it has consequently been suggested by some that the Chronicles was written in the Macedonian period, and that consequently one should reckon what is here meant as "100 drachmas to the maneh," as in use among the Greeks. The passage, however, is obscure, and in any case the calculation of 100 shekels to the maneh is not likely. That in Ezekiel (xiv. 12) relative to the maneh is also difficult of explanation [SHEKEL; TALENT]. The word maneh further occurs in Ezra ii. 69; Neh. vii. 71, 72; comp. 1 Esdras v. 46.

POUND. (1) Māā, mina (1 Macc. xiv. 24; xv. 18). Here large sums are weighed by this standard, and it refers to the Attic talent. (2) Litra, a word used by the Greeks of Sicily in their system of weights and money, sometimes called stater—standard—and equivalent to the Latin word libra or as, the unit of weight among the MONEY AND WEIGHTS OF THE BIBLE.

Romans. Josephus says that the Hebrew maneh of gold equalled 2½ litre. The litra or Roman pound = 6066 grains, consequently 2½ Roman pounds = 12647 grains; and as the Hebrew gold shekel was the fiftieth part of the maneh, it must have weighed about 253 grains [SHEKEL under MONEY]. The word litra occurs in the N. T. in John xii. 3 and xix. 39.

SHEKEL. A word signifying "weight", according to which numerous objects were weighed, especially the metals. The passage in Ezek. xiv. 12 is confusing, and cannot be satisfactorily explained, but it must be remembered that it is prophetic. 60 or 60 shekels equalled a maneh [MANEH; POUND]. 3600 or 3000 shekels equalled a talent [TALENT]. See Shekel under MONEY.

TALENT. Kikkar, properly "a circle" or "globe"; hence kuklos, circus. The largest Hebrew weight for metals. First occurs in Exod. xxv. 39, "a talent of pure gold." It is also specially spoken of as "talent of silver" (2 Kings v. 22), "talent of lead" (Zech. v. 7), "talent of brass" (Exod. xxxviii. 29), and "talent of iron" (1 Chron. xxix. 7). A talent of silver bound up in a bag, and one change of garment, was about as much as one man could carry (2 Kings v. 23), and weighing was probably avoided by the sealed bags containing a certain weight of silver. The Hebrew talent was derived from Assyria and Babylonia. Of the talents current in these countries, the heavy or Assyrian talent passed through Mesopotamia and Syria to the Phœnician coast towns, and to Palestine, where we find it in use among the Israelites. In Nineveh, as well as in Palestine, besides the weight talent of the king of 3600 sixtieths of the maneh for valuing precious metals, a special reckoning was made by talents of 3000 gold and silver units; but when it was found convenient to reckon 3000 shekels instead of 3600 the talent is not known, nor when a deviation was made from the sexagesimal division of the maneh, and it was limited to 60 instead of to 60 units. The sum total of the taxes to the sanctuary paid by the people is stated to be (Exod. xxxviii. 25) 190 talents, 177½ shekels, which 603,360 men each contributed a half shekel, so that according to this, 3000 shekels are reckoned to the talent; and as the talent is always divided into 60 manehs, 50 shekels went to the maneh, which is corroborated from the fact that the taxes for persons of various ages and sex commence at a maximum point of 50 shekels (Lev. xxvii. 3, 16), and that Achan found a wedge of gold of just 50 shekels weight, and not 60 (Josh. vii. 21). [See General Remarks.] Among the ancient Hebrews there appear to have been three different kinds of talents, which were derived from the three similar talents of Assyria and Mesopotamia, as shown by the following table:—

	Eng. grains.		TROY WEIGHT.		VALUE IN MONEY.
			Gr. oz. dwts. grs.		£ s. d.
1. The weight talent "of the king" = 910499½	= 60 mins or 3600 shekels X 253·9165	= 155	— 17 11½		540 0 0
The maneh	= 15174·99	= 60 shekels X 253·9165	= 2 7 12 6·99		9 0 0
The shekel.....	= 253·9165		= 10 12·9165		0 3 0
2. The gold talent.....	= 768748·5	= 60 mins or 3000 shekels X 253·9165	= 121 8 14 12·5		6800 0 0
The maneh	= 12645·825	= 50 shekels X 253·9165	= 2 2 6 21·935		140 0 0
The gold shekel.....	= 253·9165	= ⅓ of the weight maneh	= 10 12·9165		2 0 0
3. The silver talent.....	= 674392·5	= 60 mins or 3000 shekels X 224·7975	= 117 — 19 16·5		600 0 0
The maneh	= 11239·875	= 50 shekels X 224·7975	= 1 11 8 7·575		6 13 4
The holy shekel.....	= 224·7975		= 9 8·7975		0 2 8

The shekels of the weight talent "of the king" and the gold talent are identical, the latter talent having been formed from the former, which appears to have been used for weighing other materials than the metals ("king's weight"; 2 Sam. xiv. 36). [SHEKEL]. The weight of 9 "holy" silver shekels (224·7975 X 9) thus equals 8 sixtieths of the "weight" maneh (253·9165 X 8), and the value of 15 "holy" silver shekels equals that of 1 gold shekel, i.e. £2. Some, however, have taken the silver talent as weighing 600,000 grains (114 ⅓ lbs. troy), and, on the basis of the shekel being equivalent to 36, equalling £450, and the gold talent (with a shekel of about 133 grains) as weighing double the silver, 1,320,000 grains (229 lbs. troy), and equalling, at £4 per oz. troy, £11,000 (Smith, Student's O. T. Hist.). As to the copper talent, which is supposed by some to have had a shekel of four times the weight of the gold shekel, though only 1,600 to the talent, and therefore equalling 792,000 grains, it is impossible to speak with certainty; but in all probability the copper talent did not contain a fewer number of shekels than that of the silver.

The amounts of talents mentioned in the Bible during the reigns of David and Solomon are almost incredible (1 Chron. xxii. 14; xxix. 4, 7). The annual income of Solomon is said to have been 666 talents of gold (1 Kings x. 14; 2 Chron. ix. 13), which, taking the estimate of some that the gold talent was double the silver, would be equivalent to £7,780,000, a sum more than the revenues of the whole Persian Empire under Darius, which has been calculated at about three millions and a half. But if we take 15 shekels of silver as equalling one shekel of gold, and 15 talents of silver as equalling one talent of gold, then 666 talents of gold were exactly 10,000 talents of silver, or £4,000,000. It is, however, difficult to hazard any safe conjecture, and most likely the figures in all these passages have been corrupted.

THE ETHNOLOGY OF THE BIBLE.

BY THE REV. A. H. SAYCE, M.A., Queen's College, Oxford.

THE ethnological knowledge displayed in the Biblical books varies with their age. The geographical horizon of the Jews became gradually widened, new tribes and races appeared upon the scene, and information was collected from the merchants of Phœnicia or the literature of Egypt and Babylonia. The ethnology of the Bible, therefore, naturally falls into four periods:—(1) the Patriarchal; (2) the Davidic; (3) that of the Exile; and (4) that of the New Testament. Great light has been thrown upon it by Egyptian and Assyrian research; the first period being chiefly illustrated by the monuments of Egypt, the next two periods by the monuments of Assyria. But we must first ascertain what indications may be found in the Bible itself of the origin and ethnological relations of the peoples with whom the Hebrews were brought into contact, and then consider how far these have been confirmed or modified by modern discovery. In such a subject it is difficult to draw a hard and fast line between what is ethnological and what is geographical; our only means for determining the blood-relationship of some particular people often consists in its geographical position and local names. Other means will be language, history, tradition, and (where attainable) moral and physical characteristics.

We must remember, however, that language and race are not convertible terms. A race may adopt a foreign language even without intermarriage, and where intermarriages take place, such an occurrence is far from uncommon. Of this, the modern Jews are a good instance in point. The fact that two nationalities speak the same language only proves that they have been at some time or other in social contact, while diversity of language does not necessarily imply diversity of race. At most, linguistic agreement or diversity raises a presumption in favour of racial agreement or diversity.

Languages are classed (1) according to the way in which they express the relations of grammar, and (2) according to their descent from a common parent-tongue. In Europe and Western Asia we find examples both of inflectional and of agglutinative languages. An inflectional language is one in which the grammatical relations of words in a sentence are denoted by terminations which have no independent existence apart from the words to which they are attached, or else by the change of vowels or consonants within the words themselves. French, or German, or Latin are familiar examples of inflectional tongues. An agglutinative language is one in which the relations of grammar are expressed by affixing one word to another. In English, for instance, man's, men, book's, love'd would be illustrations of inflection; there-in, there-to, of agglutination. In Europe and Western Asia there are two leading inflectional families of speech, the ARYAN or Indo-European, to which Latin, Greek, Persian, Sanskrit, Keltic, Slavonic, German, English, & most modern European languages belong; and the SEMITIC, which comprises Hebrew, Phœnician, Aramaic, Arabic, Assyrian, & Ethiopic; while there are at least two agglutinative families of speech, the TURANIAN or Finno-Tatar, comprising Finnish, Hungarian, Tatar, Turkish, Mongol, and other tongues; and the Dravidian of Western India, of which Tamil is the chief dialect. There is also another inflectional family of speech known as Alarodian, once spoken throughout the Armenian highlands, of which Georgian is now the chief representative. In the Caucasus we find the remains of several distinct families of speech which have elsewhere disappeared. A family of speech, it must be remembered, is a group of cognate languages which can all be traced back to a single parent tongue.

Western Asia, with which the ethnology of the Bible is mainly concerned, may be regarded as a square, bounded on the north by the Black Sea and the Caucasus, on the south by the Indian Ocean, on the east by the Caspian, the Persian Gulf, and the intervening mountainous country, and on the west by the Mediterranean and Red Sea. Egypt is attached to the western side of the square by the isthmus of Suez, the promontory of Asia Minor lying opposite to it, with the Greek islands of the Ægean Sea beyond. The square is further divided by the two great rivers, Euphrates and Tigris, which rise near each other in the mountains of Armenia, and after flowing in a parallel direction towards the south, fall into the Persian Gulf at the same spot. Armenia and Asia Minor are high tablelands, intersected by lofty chains of mountains, of which the Taurus, Masius, and Niphates ranges may be considered the chief, and sloping upwards to the peaks of the Caucasus. The mountains of Armenia extend to the south-east along the southern shore of the Caspian, where they enclose Media Rhagiana, the home of the Medes, and then, taking a bend, run southwards to the Persian Gulf, and so form the highlands of Elam and Persia on the east of Babylonia. The plain of Babylonia enclosed between the Tigris and Euphrates is low and fertile; Mesopotamia, however, its northern continuation, is a limestone plateau of moderate elevation. On the west the spurs of the Taurus range, under the names of Amanus, Bargylus, and Lebanon, and of Anti-Lebanon and Hermon, stretch southward along the shores of the Mediterranean, and constitute the mountainous region of Syria proper and Phœnicia. The Jordan rises on the S.W. slopes of Anti-Lebanon or Hermon, and after flowing through the Sea of Galilee or Lake Tiberias, falls into the Dead Sea. The angle enclosed between the mountains of Syria and Palestine on the one side and the Euphrates on the other is flat and barren, and was known to the ancients as Arabia Petraea. This stony desert extends far into the heart of Arabia; indeed, it is only on the coastlands of the latter country that mountains and rivers are to be found, and more especially in the south, the Sabæ and Himyar of early writers, the Arabia Felix of the Romans, the Yemen of modern geographers. The peninsula of Sinai at the head of the Red Sea is also mountainous, but bare and barren, like the coast of the Red Sea on the African side. Here, however, the Nile flows at a little distance inland, fertilising the valley through which it passes. It was this valley, together with the delta at the mouth of the river, that constituted Egypt, and saw the rise of the first postdiluvian civilization.

The 10th chapter of Genesis, especially if compared with Ezek. xxvii., offers a classified summary of the geographical knowledge of the Old Testament. The chapter has often been called an "ethnographical table"; but it has long since been shown that the names are arranged in a geographical and not in an ethnographical order. They comprise the whole known world of the Jews, with its centre in Palestine and the Mediterranean, extending from Media and Elam on the East to Greece and Tarsish on the West, and from Gomer and the Caucasus on the North to Arabia and Nubia in the South. The three sons of Noah have each a definite zone assigned to them:—SHEM, possibly the Assyrian Sa'mu, "brownish", having the middle zone of Western Asia; while HAM, "the black one", has Egypt and Ethiopia; and JAPHETH, perhaps "the fair one", has Asia Minor and Europe. How little ethnographical the chapter can be is indicated by the fact that the dark-skinned Egyptians and Ethiopians, with short stature, receding chin, thick guage, the Assyrians and Arameans in the interior. We cannot even attach any ethnological value to the genealogies contained in it, since when it is said that "Canaan begat Sidon his firstborn", all that is meant is that Sidon was a city of Canaan, not that there was any necessary connection in blood or language between the Sidonians and the inhabitants of the other parts of Canaan. The proper names, in short, are arranged solely according to their geographical order.

I. THE PATRIARCHAL PERIOD.

II. THE PERIOD OF THE DAVIDIC EMPIRE.

III. THE PERIOD OF THE BABYLONIAN CAPTIVITY.

IV. THE TIME OF CHRIST AND HIS APOSTLES.

I. THE PATRIARCHAL PERIOD.—In what may be termed the patriarchal period, the dealings of the Hebrews were confined to the tribes of Palestine and Syria, to Egypt, Babylonia, and Arabia Petrea.

(a) The Peoples of Palestine, E. and W. of Jordan.—Palestine was occupied by tribes speaking dialects more or less closely allied to Hebrew and Phœnician, "the language of CANAAN" or "the lowlands", and probably belonging to the same Semitic race. There are indications, however, that the Semites had found an alien race in possession of the country when they entered it, and that the first settlements, such as Sidon, were in the lowlands or on the sea coast. The "GIANTS" mentioned from time to time seem to have been relics of this alien race, whose exact character, however, we have no means of determining; to them belonged the Rephaim or "giants" in the Haurân, the Zuzim or Zamzumim, the Anakim or Emim, the Avim, and the Horites, or "cave-dwellers" of Beir (Gen. xiv. 5, 6; Deut. ii. 10-12, 20-23). The four last populations were destroyed by the Semitic Ammonites, Moabites, Philistines, and Edomites. The AMORITES, or "Highlanders", in the south-west of Palestine, with their capitals Hebron and Hazazon-Tamar, were reckoned among the descendants of the Rephaim or "giants", the two Rephaim kings of Bashan being also called Amorites (Deut. iii. 8). The term Amorite, however, included all the hill tribes of the south and east, without reference to race or language (see Num. xiii. 29), and is as much a descriptive title as Canaanite, Perizæite ("native of the plain"), and Hivite ("villager"). Hence we find HIVITES in the north (Josh. xi. 3; Judg. iii. 8; 2 Sam. xxiv. 7), as well as in Gibeon (Josh. ix. 7; xi. 19) and Shechem (Gen. xxxiv. 2), which are called Amorite elsewhere (2 Sam. xxi. 2; Gen. xlviii. 22, margin), while the Amorites of Hebron are more strictly defined as Anakim (Josh. xv. 14; Judg. i. 20). The Jebusites of Jerusalem seem to have been Semites, though the different modes of spelling the proper name Araunah or Ornan, as well as the difficulty of finding a Semitic etymology for it, suggest the contrary. They are, moreover, classed among the Amorites in Josh. x. 5, 6 (Heb. text); but this proves little, as the epithet "Amorite" includes both Semitic and non-Semitic tribes. The Gergashites on the west of Phœnicia, the Arkites and Sinites at the foot of Lebanon, the Phœnician Arvadites and Zemarites of Aradus and Simyra, and the Hamathites on the Orontes, were all Semitic. So, too, were the AMALEKITES, the Kenites, and the Kenizzites, or "hunters", to the south of Palestine and Mount Seir. A tribe of Amalekites also established itself in central Palestine (Judg. v. 14; xii. 15); but they were generally regarded as merely a branch of the Edomites (Gen. xxxvi. 12), like the Kenizzites (Gen. xxxvi. 15, 42). The KENITES dwelt among the Amalekites (Num. xxiv. 20, 21; 1 Sam. xv. 6), but a portion of them followed the Israelites on their entrance into Canaan (Judg. i. 16; iv. 11). They seem to have been of Midianite origin (Judg. iv. 19), and their nomad habits name with that of the Peisagi, appealing to the Septuagint rendering, Allophuloi, and the resemblance of Caphar to Cyprus or Crete. The name Philistine (whence Palæstina, however, probably means "emigrant", like that of the Peisahas or Ethiopian Jews of the present day. According to Herodotus (ii. 128), Philistion was one of the Grecian Shepherds who fed his flocks in Northern Egypt. It is preferable to see in them, therefore, one of the Phœnician tribes settled in the Delta, called Ka/t-wr, or "Gaster Phœnicia", by the Egyptians, and their migration into Palestine has been fixed by the Egyptian monuments to the reign of Ramses III. (about B.C. 1250). Half a century before, in the reign of Menephtah I., Canaan and the neighbouring cities were still garrisoned by Egyptian forces under the command of Semitic chiefs. Then and the country to the south of the Philistines was sometimes known by the general name of TEMAN, or "the South". The name would be very old, if Harkay is right in making Temennu the Egyptian title of the country when visited by a political refugee named Samsi in the time of the 12th dynasty.

(b) The Peoples of the Arabian Peninsula.—Arabs was probably the original home of the Semitic race, and the PHœNICIANS accordingly believed themselves to have come from the Persian Gulf (Strab. i. 2, 3; xii. 3, 4; 4, 27; Justin, xviii. 3, 2; Ptolemy H.E. iv. 26; Strab. i. 1; vii. 80; Schol. to Hom. Od. iv. 84). They would have taken the same line of march as that followed by Abraham, like the many other allied tribes that arrived some time to time in Palestine, where some of them settled in the lowlands (Canaan), others intermarried with the aborigines, while others passed into Egypt, and eventually founded the dynasty of the Shepherds. These in the south and east led a nomadic life, and constantly threatened their more civilized kinsmen on the west of the Jordan. Among these nomadic tribes may be reckoned, at one time, the Israelites, with the Edomites, Moabites and Ammonites, all of whom traced their descent from Terah. The Israelites, after a sojourn in Egypt, were the last to establish themselves in Palestine and to extirpate, so far as they could, both the primitive inhabitants of Canaan and the subsequent Semitic settlers. The extirpation, however, was far from complete; and M. Clermont-Ganneau has shown that the present peasantry of Canaan are the descendants of the ancient Canaanites, partly of Semitic and partly of non-Semitic blood. As regards the old races of the country it will be noticed that most of the names assigned to them (Amorite, Hivite, Horite, &c.) are merely descriptive, like the names of foreign populations in the Egyptian and early Babylonian inscriptions, and hence do not throw no light on the origin and relationship of the various tribes included under them.

(c) The races of Syria.—Syria, northward of Palestine was again disputed ground. Here, too, the Semites settled and founded kingdoms like those of Hamath or Damascus, or Maachah. ARAM, with his four children, is a son of Shem in Gen. x. 22, a grandson of Noah according to Gen. xlii. 21. Linguistic considerations show that the Aramean Semites branched off from their kinsmen in Babylonia before the Semitic migration to the extreme West, and it is probable that they preceded the Phœnicians proper in maritime trade and the use of the alphabet. By the side of the Arameans stood the KITTITES (Khatti, Kheta, of the Assyrian and Egyptian monuments), divided into numerous small kingdoms (Kings x. 29), and with their two centres at Carchemish (now Jerablûs) on the Euphrates and Kadesh (on the Orontes) between Hamath and Damascus. A little to the north of Carchemish was Pethor (now Sajur), at the junction of the Sajar and the Euphrates. A body of Hittites has forced its way into the south of Palestine and the neighbourhood of Hebron (Gen. xxv. 2, &c.), but the main part of the nation covered the country between Carmelish and Luz or Bethel in the central hill country of Canaan, i.e. Palestine W. of the Jordan (Judg. i. 26). The Hittites are usually supposed to have been Semites; but their proper names as preserved in the Egyptian and Assyrian inscriptions, as well as their dress and physiognomy, point to an opposite conclusion. They seem, however, to have belonged to two distinct races, one with no beard, the other with a large one, the latter being perhaps of Aramaic descent. They wore a short-sleeved robe which reached to the ankles and was fastened round the waist with a girdle, and used oblong shields of wicker-work. Their chariots were drawn by two horses, and contained three men apiece. The beardless race had thick lips, a straight nose with wide nostrils, and sunken eyes.

(d) Chaldea, Elam, and Mesopotamia.—The whole country between the Caspian and the Persian Gulf was originally occupied by tribes speaking agglutinative dialects, and probably allied to the Finno-Tatar race. In BABYLONIA and Elam they had founded powerful monarchies and civilizations, and the cuneiform system of writing was their invention. Their religion was Shamanistic*. They were short, but square-built, with eyes slightly oblique, and round heads. It was to this race that Chedor-laomer (Cudur-lagamar) of Elam belonged, as well as the three subordinate kings, Amraphel king of SHINAR or Sumir, Arloch king of Ellasar (? Laras or Senkerah), and Tidal (Turgal) king of Goyim (Gutium). A. V. "nations". Semitic nomad tribes from Arabia crossed the Euphrates into Chaldea at a very early date, and gradually obtained sufficient power to establish a monarchy of their own in Sumir or N.W. Babylonia about a.c. 2000, leaving ACCAD or S.E. Babylonia in the hands of the alien race (cp. Gen. x. 9-10). But Ur (now Mugheir, on the west bank of the Euphrates), long the Accad capital, at last became Semitic, and by the 16th century a.c. Semitic had become the language of Babylonia, and the Semitic element was preponderant in the population of the country. From time to time, however, non-Semitic tribes entered it from ELAM (Susania) or the northern coastland of the Persian Gulf, such as the Kossians (16th century a.c.), and the Chaldei (Chaldeans) under Merodach-Baladan (a.c. 721). The Semitic population of Babylonia is termed Casdim in the O. T.; ARPAKAD (Arph Cherd, "frontier of Babylonia") is a son of Shem according to Gen. x. 22, Chered a son of Nahor according to Gen. xxii. 22. Linguistically and otherwise the Semitic Babylonians are more closely related to the Phœnicians and Hebrews than to any other branch of the Semitic stock. Among them must be counted the ASSYRIANS, who before the 16th century a.c. had established themselves on the Tigris in a corner of the country called Gutium, which extended from the Euphrates to the mountains of Media. The Accadian race and language were more thoroughly extirpated in Assyria than in Babylonia. In Mesopotamia also the Accadians had to yield before the advancing Semites, though Haran had once been an Accadian town. Mesopotamia itself is the Aram-Naharain or "Aram of the two rivers" (i.e. Tigris and Euphrates) of Scripture, also called PADAN-ARAM (Padan and Aram are associated in old Babylonian inscriptions). The northern part of it, termed Nehri by the Assyrians, Naharain by the Egyptians, was inhabited by a number of non-Semitic tribes, sometimes supposed to be Turanian, but more probably Alarodian, and possibly akin to the Hittites. Northward were the mountains of Armenia or Ararat, with Alarodian nations, of whom the Georgians are the modern representatives.

(e) Arabia.—Arabia was separated into three zones. (1) In the south were the JOKTANITES of Saba (Sheba) and Himyar, extending along the coast of Hadramaut (Hazar-maveth) & Yemen (Gen. x. 29-30). The Joktanites were Semites, but both in language and appearance they differed a good deal from their northern kindred. At a late date they passed into Abyssinia under the name of Ghe'es, and there occupied Mecca and Axum. Hence the Biblical name of CUSH, which properly applied to Abyssinia or Ethiopia, came to be extended also to the southern coast of Arabia. (2) The middle zone was inhabited by the ISHMAELITES, to whom the Korish of Mecca belonged. The Ishmaelites traced their descent from Abraham, but linguistically their language (the Arabic) belongs to the southern division of Semitic, and must be classed with Himyaritic, and not with Hebrew. Among the 12 Ishmaelite tribes the chief were the NABATHEANS (Nebaloth), whose camping-grounds were on the western banks of the Euphrates, and the KEDARITES east of Moab. Edomites and Ishmaelites seem to have intermarried (Gen. xxviii. 9), which is not surprising when we remember that the Edomite dominion extended to Elath on the Red Sea, and the Nabatheans themselves intermixed so largely with their Aramaic neighbours as to give their name to the Syrians among Arabic writers. The western coast of Arabia (as well as Soman) was called Punt by the Egyptians, the PHUT of the Bible, and was regarded as a peculiarly sacred country. (3) Arabia Petraea, the northern zone of Arabia, was inhabited by nomad tribes closely connected with the Ishmaelites, though they were derived from another wife of Abraham, Keturah (Gen. xxv. 1-4). Their leading tribe was MIDIAN, in the peninsula of Sinai, a portion of whom seem to have been settled on the coast of the Red Sea in a metalliferous region explored by Captain Burton (1876-7). The Midianites shared the desert region to the south of Judah with the Amalekites; but there seems little ground for the Arab tradition which makes the Amalekites, like the Adites and other prehistoric people, the primitive inhabitants of south-western Arabia before the arrival of the Semites; indeed, they are actually brought from the Persian Gulf, though it is disputed whether they are to be derived from Shem or from Ham. Gen. xxxvi. 12 merely implies an intermixture of Edomites and Amalekites, and therefore does not contradict Gen. xiv. 7, which places a colony of Amalekites in Palestine long before. The tribes of Arabia Petraea are frequently called "the men" or "CHILDREN of the East" in the O. T. (Job i. 3; Gen. xxix. 1; 1 Kings iv. 30; Ezek. xxv. 4, 10), and they are probably meant by the Edomites ("Easterns" rather than "ancients") of Gen. xv. 19. Like the Edomites or the "Shepherds" of Egypt*, the Israelites intermarried with the Arab Bedouins before their establishment in Canaan (see Exod. xii. 38; xx. 10; Num. xii. 4). Even Moses took a wife from Midian, and Caleb, the hero of Judah, as well as Othniel, the first judge, were descended from the Kenizzites of Edom (Num. xxxii. 12; Judg. i. 13). A similar intermixture of Midianites and Ishmaelites is indicated in Judg. vii. 24. In the direction of Mesopotamia and the North the purely Arab tribes yielded to tribes more or less Aramaean. Thus UZ or Huz (Assyrian Uhu-aw) is the firstborn of Aram in Gen. x. 23, and of Nahor in Gen. xxii. 21; and Buz, the Baz of the Assyrians, to the south of Uhu-aw, which was conquered by Esau-haddon, was a brother of Uz. Uz, it will be remembered, was the land of Job. On the western bank of the Euphrates, near Cirsium (Assyrian Shih), were the Zimri (Jer. xxv. 26), more Aramaean than Arab, mentioned frequently on the Assyrian monuments.

(f) The Peoples of Egypt, i.e. the Valley of the Nile.—

* Shamanism (so called from the "Shamans" or sorcerer-priests of Siberia) is a form of religion in which every object and phenomenon of nature is supposed to have a special spirit or god, who is far more powerful than man, and is accessible only through the sorcerer or priest.

* Also called Hyksos. They conquered Northern Egypt, and ruled it for several centuries. They are perhaps referred to in Gen. xliii. 21.

Egypt was considered to belong to Asia rather than to Africa. From its division into Upper and Lower came the name MIZRAIM, "the two Matsors", Matsor being properly "the fortification" which defended the country on the Asiatic side. Linguistically, and to a certain extent physiologically, the Egyptians are allied to the Berbers, Moors, and other races of Northern Africa, but the relation of the latter to the Semitic race is still a vexed question. Many leading philologists regard the Egyptian and Libyan languages as distant cousins of the Semitic idioms. The Delta was occupied from an early period by Semitic tribes, who gradually spread southward. The Egyptian was tall, spare, and broad-shouldered, with long hands and feet, thick lips, copper skin, and little beard—a type still represented by the fellahs of to-day. Among the inhabitants of Egypt (Gen. x. 13, 14) are reckoned the LUDIM or RUDIM, the Egyptians proper; the Anamlm, perhaps the prehistoric founders of On of the North (Heliopolis) and On of the South (Hermopolis); the Lehabim or Libyans settled in Egypt; the Naptuhim of No-Phthah, north of Memphis; the Pathrusim of Peto-res (Pathros), "the southern land" of Sais, or Upper Egypt (Isa. xl. 11); the Casluhim, or coast-men, and the Phoenician Captorim of the Delta. South of Egypt came Ethiopia or CUSH with its semi-negroid population, which, after being several times overrun by the Egyptian princes, was finally made an Egyptian province in the time of the eighteenth dynasty. SEBA or Meroe was its chief town; but in Gen. x. 7 there are further counted among the descendants of Cush Havilah, perhaps Awatrics, opposite the Straits of Bab-el-Mandeb, SIRA or Sabs in Arabia Felix (placed among the descendants of Keturah, Gen. xxv. 3), and other Arabian districts.

II. THE PERIOD OF THE DAVIDIC EMPIRE.—The empire of David extended from Egypt to the Euphrates. It included all Aram or Syria properly so called (on the west of the Euphrates); Aram-Naharaim or Mesopotamia tending to become Naharaim simply. Syria was called Suberti or Khubur, both meaning "Highlands", by the primitive Babylonians. The Egyptian name seems to have been Rutenu. ARAM, "the Highlands", was divided into a number of small principalities—Aram of Damascus (1 Sam. viii. 5, 6), Aram of Maachab and Geshur (1 Chron. xix. 6; 2 Sam. xv. 8), Aram of Beth-Rehob (2 Sam. x. 6), and Aram of Zobah (2 Sam. x. 6, 8). The latter bordered on the Euphrates, but the conquests of its king Hadadezer had extended its boundaries as far S. as Damascus. Hamath formed a separate kingdom, and the Hittites had been pushed towards the north-east and their capital Carchemish.

Tarsish, Ophir, and the "isles of the Gentiles".—Intercourse with TYRE had acquainted the Israelites with the white-skinned full-bearded Aryan race of Europe and the dark-skinned Dravidian race of Western India. TARSHISH, to which Solomon's ships traded, is probably the Spanish Tartessus, though it has also been identified with Carthage, the Tyrrhenians of S. Italy, and even with Tarsus. We hear of Jews sold to Javan, or the Greeks (Joel iii. 6), and the Greek seas had long been traversed by Phœnician ships. Cyprus, called CHITTIM from the city of Kitium, was a Phœnician colony, like Rhodes, which is perhaps meant by the Dodanin or Rodanin of Gen. x. 4. Knobel, however, identifies the latter with the Dardan of the Troad or plain of Troy. The first Greek tribes known to the Semite nations were the Ionians or JAVAN, by which name the Greeks generally were known throughout the East; and Cyprus itself was called Yavnan, the island of "the Ionians" by the Assyrians. The names of the objects brought from OPHIR (1 Kings i. 11, 22) not only show that it was Abhira at the mouth of the Indus, but that it was inhabited by a people speaking a Dravidian language allied to the modern Tamil. Tuciyyim, "peacocks", is not the Sanskrit śikhā, but the Tamil tūci (see Vinson, Revue de Linguistique, vi., p. 130, 1873). The relative positions of the tribes settled in and about Palestine continued as they had been since the Israelitish conquest; Tyre and Sidon remained independent, and tribute was paid by the "people that were left of the Amorites, Hittites, Perizzites, Hivites, and Jebusites" (1 Kings ix. 20, 21).

III. THE PERIOD OF THE BABYLONIAN CAPTIVITY.—As it was towards the west that the geographical knowledge of the Israelites became extended in the age of David, so it was towards the north and east that it was extended in the age of the exile. The Aryan peoples of Greece, Asia Minor, and Persia now came within their geographical horizon.

(a) The Medes.—The ARYAN MEDES, as distinguished from the old Turanian inhabitants of the country (Magi, &c.), first became known to the Assyrians in 646 B.C., when they were moving westward, but were still east of the Parthians or Parthians. Before B.C. 700, however, they had settled in Media Rhagiana (S. shores of the Caspian). One of these Aryan Median tribes had taken a southward direction, and under the name of PERSIANS had occupied a district on the south-east of Elam in the 8th century B.C. Under Cyaxares a Median empire was formed which pushed its conquests far to the west, and overthrew the Assyrian empire. Cyrus united the Medes and Persians, conquered Babylon and Asia Minor, and made the Aryan race dominant throughout Western Asia.

(b) The Persians first appear in Isa. xli. 2; xlii. 6; comp. Jer. xli. 35. Susania or ELAM, which had been almost depopulated by Sardanapalus (B.C. 646), was thoroughly Aryanized, and Shushan (Susa) made the Persian capital (Ezra ii. 2).

(c) The Nations of the Caucasus, Asia Minor, and Greece.—Meanwhile, Assyrian conquest had brought the nations of the Caucasus within the geographical horizon of the civilised world. Already, about A.C. 1130, Tiglath-Pileser had overrun the Tubaii (Tabarini) and Muscal (Monchi), the TUBAL and MESHECH of the Bible, whose territories extended from the Black Sea to the Taurus, as well as Kummukh or Comagene, and part of Khilak or Cilicia. The ethnic affinities of these populations are doubtful; they may have belonged to the Alarodian stock, or to some other family now extinct. At all events, they were neither Semitic nor Aryan. The leading nation of Armenia were the Minni or Mannai of Van, who have left us undeciphered inscriptions, and were probably Alarodian. The present Aryan population of Armenia did not enter the country before the 7th century A.C., when they followed in the track of the Medes. Before their arrival Armenia was divided into the two kingdoms of Minni and Ararat, the latter lying to the north-west (Jer. li. 27), both of which are often mentioned on the Assyrian monuments. Jeremiah associates the kingdom of ASHKENAZ, perhaps the Ashkenaz, or Black Sea, with Ararat and Minni; in Gen. x. 3, Ashkenaz is enumerated among the sons of GOMER. Now Gomer is the Gimirai of the Assyrian inscriptions, the Kimmerii of the Greeks, who represent the Sakai or Scythians of the Persian texts, and were almost certainly Aryans. They had been driven from their seats on the Taurus or Dnieper by the nomad Scythians shortly before the first unsuccessful siege of Nineveh by Cyaxares, and while Psammethichus was king of Egypt (Hist. i. 162-164; iv. 11, 12). In 677 A.C. they were already in Khuzestan (north of Armenia) under a chief Toupa or Tolpa, when defeated by Kiar-haddon and driven westward. After sacking Sinope, they overran Lydia, and in 645 B.C. Gyges, king of Lydia, the GOG of the O. T., sent two of their chiefs as a present to Nineveh. Gyges was afterwards slain in battle with them, but his name became in the East a representative of the nations of Asia Minor, just as in the West the name of Sardanapalus represented Assyria. MAGOG, over which Gog or Gyges ruled (Ezek. xxxviii. 2), is probably Met-Gyges, "land of Gyges," a synonyme of LUD (Ludil) or Lydia. The Lydians were Aryan, and their language, like the other Aryan languages of Asia Minor, belonged to the European and not to the Asiatic branch of the Aryan family. Sardanapalus states that the very name of Lydia was unknown at Nineveh before the embassy of Gyges in 605 B.C.; and we must therefore identify the LUD of Gen. x. 22, who is made a son of Shem, with the Rutenu or Syrians of the Egyptian monuments. Perhaps both Lot and Lotan (Gen. xxxvi. 20) are to be compared, while Knobel refers to the Arab Laud, the ancestor of the Amalekites and other prehistoric tribes. On the other hand, LUD would be Lydia in Isa. lxvi. 19, and perhaps Ezek. xxvii. 10; xxx. 5. The "ISLES" of the Greek Sea are represented as the allies of the Lydian Croesus in Isa. xli. 5, 6; they are sometimes termed "the isles of the Gentiles" (as in Gen. x. 5), and in Ezek. xxvii. 7, "the isles of Eliahah". Eliahah is pretty certainly Hellas, the Greek mainland, visited from an early period by Phœnician merchants. According to Gen. x. 4, Eliahah was a son of Javan, along with Tarshish, Kittim, and Dodanim. It is doubtful whether the three "sons" of Gomer, Ashkenaz, Riphath and Togarmah (Gen. x. 3), are to be regarded as Aryan or Alarodian, since the expression merely denotes their geographical position in regard to the Kimmeri. At all events, TOGARMAH would probably be Alarodian if Dr. Fr. Delitzsch is right in identifying it with the Tûl-Garmi of the Assyrian inscriptions, which was situated in Melitene, i.e. the extreme east of Cappadocia. Neighbours of the Ashkenaz on the Black Sea were the Sapardai (Sephardai in Ob. 20), who are described in a late Assyrian inscription as combining with the Medes and Kimmerians in the invasion which ended in the destruction of Nineveh.

(d) Egypt.—In Egypt the population had undergone several changes. An Ethiopian dynasty had ruled over the country, the Semites of the Delta had intermingled with the natives, and the land had been overrun and conquered by the Assyrians. The African Cush became well known to the Jews, and the black skin of the ETHIOPIAN was recognised as marking him off from the fairer races of the North (Jer. xlii. 23).

(e) India and China.—Tiglath-Pileser II. (B.C. 745—727) had carried his arms across Sagartia (Zikruti) and Arachosia (Arakutis) to the frontiers of India, which was thus opened up to the Semites of the West. Indeed, Von Böhlen has suggested that "the land of Ha-nod" (Gen. iv. 16) should really be Hind or India. It is even possible that the Chinese are mentioned under the name of SINIM in Isa. xlii. 12, since Thain was the name of the great feudal empire in the west of China, established after the breaking up of the empire about 1100 B.C.

IV. THE TIME OF CHRIST AND HIS APOSTLES.—The New Testament introduces us to the Roman world, comprising the Aryan races of Europe and Asia Minor, the Berber tribes of Northern Africa, the mixed population of Egypt, and the Semites of Carthage and Western Asia. It included also such non-Aryan populations as the Ligurians of Northern Italy and the Basques of Spain, the latter of whom constitute a race sui generis, generally termed Iberian. On the East it touched upon the empire of the PARTHIANS, apparently a Turanian or Finno-Tatar people. Among the Aryan populations of Europe were included, besides Greeks and Italians, Kelts, Teutons, and Thracio-Ilyrians; while in Asia the Aryan Armenians, who belonged rather to the Asiatic than to the European section of the family, formed part of the empire. The JEWS were scattered over the whole world, which was divided, from the religious point of view, into Jew and GENTILE. Socially the Greek division into Greek and barbarian was adopted, though the Romans were also necessarily classed with the Greeks (see Acts xxviii. 2). St. Paul, however, lays down that God "hath made of one blood all nations of men for to dwell on all the face of the earth" (Acts xvii. 26; comp. Deut. xxxii. 8), refuses to admit the distinction between Jew and Gentile (Rom. x. 12), and derives all mankind from the same forefather Adam (1 Cor. xv. 22), though these statements must be taken rather in a religious than an ethnographical sense. The ethnology of Palestine itself had undergone considerable change. Judea, indeed, was inhabited by pure-blooded Jews, though the Roman supremacy had introduced a small number of Italians, and the rule of Herod may have brought with it Idumean settlers. The population of SAMARIA, however, consisted mainly of foreign elements, imported from Hamath, Babylonia, and Eiam by the Assyrian kings (2 Kings xvii. 24; Ezra iv. 9, 10), intermingled with the survivors of the Israelites and Canaanites, and further enlarged by Greek and Latin colonists. "GALILEE of the Gentiles" in the north was thickly peopled with Greeks, Phœnicians, and Syrians, and the Jewish portion of the community does not seem to have been very large. On the eastern side of the Jordan Jewish or Israelitish blood was still more rare. The great conquering civilizations of Babylonia, Persia, Greece, and Rome, had, however, tended to destroy local dialects and languages, and to spread three languages—Aramaic, Greek, and Latin—throughout the known world. Here and there, no doubt, the old dialects still struggled on, as in GALATIA or Lycaonia (see Acts xiv. 11), and beyond the Roman dominion Persian and other tongues were widely spoken. But the introduction of universal languages, together with the belief of the Greek that every other tongue but his own was "barbarous", had brought linguistic differences into prominence, and occasioned that confusion between philology and ethnology which is even now not extinct. Race and language were made convertible terms, and to speak a "barbarous" tongue was to be a "BARBARIAN". Hence dialectical differences were exaggerated, as in Acts ii. 9–11; and the Gospel was commanded to be preached to "every nation, and kindred, and tongue, and people" (Rev. xiv. 6; cp. Dan. iii. 4, &c.).

I. THE GEOGRAPHICAL POSITION OF PALESTINE must be carefully borne in mind, since it was this which brought the Israelites into contact with their heathen neighbours, and in spite of the commands of the Law and the protests of the Prophets, made them fall so readily under the influence of foreign customs and beliefs. Palestine stands midway between the two great powers of the ancient world, the empires of ASSYRIA and BABYLONIA on the east, and the empire of EGYPT on the south-west. Whenever these powers came into collision with each other, Palestine was the chosen battle-field, while ARAM was the inevitable scene of the wars and conquests through which the two great empires of the East oscillated towards each other. The northern part of Palestine itself was occupied by the PHENICIANS, of the same race and language as the Israelites, and therefore all the more likely to influence them for good or for evil. The Phœnicians were the most important relics left of the old Canaanite inhabitants of the country, and they were pre-eminently a commercial people, with their cities, Tyre, Sidon, Gebal or Byblos, &c., on the sea-coast, and their merchantmen trading to the furthest limits of the known world. Eastward of the Israelites came the kindred tribes of Moab, Ammon and Edom, as well as the Midianites, the Ishmaelites, the Kedarites, and other wandering and lawless Bedouins who occupied the desert of northern and central Arabia. Next to the Phœnicians, however, the Egyptians with their venerable civilisation exercised most influence over the Israelites. This was owing partly to their close proximity, partly to the fact that Palestine had once formed a portion of the Egyptian empire and been garrisoned by Egyptian soldiers, partly to the superior culture of the ancient monarchy of the Nile. It was only in the later period of Hebrew history that first Assyria and afterwards Babylonia and Persia took the place of Egypt. The Assyrians extended their conquests to the shores of the Mediterranean, and carried the Ten Tribes into captivity (B.C. 721); the Babylonians overthrew the Jewish kingdom and led the Jews into exile, and the Persians not only included Palestine in their dominions, but conquered Egypt as well.

II. THE HISTORICAL AND POLITICAL RELATIONS OF EGYPT, ASSYRIA, BABYLONIA, PERSIA, ARAM, AND THE PHENICIANS, WITH THE ISRAELITES.

(a) EGYPT, the Biblical MIZRAIM, Mizraim being a dual form, meaning "the two Mazors" or "fortifications". These represented Lower and Upper Egypt, the latter being properly called PATHROS (Isa. xi. 11; Egyptian, Pe-to-res, "land of the south"). Lower Egypt was Mazar, as in Isa. xix. 6, xxxvii. 25, where it is mistranslated "defence" and "besieged places", and was so called from the line of fortification which defended the country from the attack of its Asiatic neighbours on the east. Egypt is the oldest kingdom of which we know, though scholars have not yet settled the date to be assigned to Menes the founder of it. Mariette Bey makes it B.C. 5004; Brugsch Bey, B.C. 4400; Lepsius, B.C. 3892; Bunsen, B.C. 3643; Peas, B.C. 3917; Poole and Renwick, B.C. 2700. These various views show how uncertain is the whole subject of Egyptian chronology, and oblige us to reckon by successive dynasties of kings and dynasties, Manetho, the flourished in the third century B.C. from Menes to the (B.C. 340), occupying 5328 years are not yet agreed as to which dynasties are to be regarded.

Egyptian history is usual periods of the Old Empire, the New Empire. (1) Under the i.—vi., MEMPHIS (Exo. ix. 6), capital. To this period belongs the higher perfection of art that has been attained. After the fall of the empire came a period of confusion, and then (2) under the xi. revived in the Middle Empire, No. i.e. Thebes in the south. The weakness followed, and afterwards invaded by swarms of wanderers known as the Hyksos or themselves in northern Egypt, while the native princes in the south. It would seem that HAN, JOSEPH, and JACOB were during the occupation of the Hyksos. The latter would be a Semitic race as themselves, to give them a favourable re-rose up a new king over Joseph". The Hyksos were prince ruled from one end of the New Empire was composed of the xix. dynasty, who restored and splendour, conquered Mesopotamia. The Israelites, whom the Egyptians with the most bitter hatred, sions was accordingly begun EXODUS. Probably this the xix. dynasty, two of whom Rameses, like one of the Israelites (RAAMES, Ex. i. 11). PHILISTINES, Phœnicians, or the Delta, had been an Egyptian outpost in the Palestine; but Palestine itself of Egypt. The conquest of Israelites under JOSHUA was the losses they had suffered in. After the close of the xix. fell into decay, and the high-urged the regal power. married by SOLOMON was a subordinate king who reigned end of this period. But S founder of the xxii. dynasty. Early in his reign he received 'adversary' (1 K. xi. 40), and captured Jerusalem (1 K. his conquests, with a list of both Judah and Israel, is inscribed S. wall of a temple at Karnak Osorkon I., is the Biblical XXII dynasty was a foreign one, coclared, Egypt was a "broken reed". Sabaot's successor, Sabaot, was defeated at Raphia by SARGON in B.C. Tirhakah was defeated at Eltahak by SENNACHERIB in 701, and Egypt was finally conquered and made into an Assyrian province by ESAR-HADDON. Sennacherib revolted, however, under Phammeti-as I. of Sais, B.C. 680, and the wars of his successors, Necho and HOPHERA, or Apries, against BLYONIA caused them to come into conflict with him, now a tributary state of the Babylonian king. JONAH was slain at Megiddo by Necho, when he was on his march against Nebuchadnezzar (Kings xxiii. 29), and the Egyptian monarch subsequently deposed JEREMIAH, making JEREMIAH king in his stead, and laid the land under a tribute of talents of silver and one talent of gold. HOPHERA sent an army to the assistance of ZEDEKIAH when asked by NEBUCHADNEZZAR (Jer. xxxvii. 5, 7, 11), and was into Egypt that the Jews fled, carrying Jeremiah with them, after the murder of Gedaliah. HOPHERA was deposed and put to death by his subjects, his successor, Amasis, had a long and prosperous reign. Hardly was he dead, however, before Egypt was invaded by Cambyses, king of Persia, and made to the condition of a Persian province, B.C. 525.

The title of PHARAOH, given to the Egyptian sovereign in the Bible, is the Egyptian per-aa, or "great House"; a title which may be compared with that of the "Sublime Porte" or Gate.

b) ASSYRIA and BABYLONIA. The two great kingdoms of the Tigris and Euphrates come before us in the Old Testament. NIMROD, we are told (Gen. x. 10), made BABEL or Babylon, Erech (now Uruk), Accad, and Calneh, the beginning of his kingdom, and out of SHINAR or Sumir, that is, northern Chaldaea, Asshur went forth and built REVEN, Ir-Baboboth ("the city of streets"), Calneh (now Nimrud), and Resen, called Res-eni, "the end of the fountain", in the inscriptions. At Babel, "the Gate of God", which the Greeks named into Babylon, the confusion of tongues took place; and in UR of the CHALDEANS, now Mesopotamia, on the western bank of the Euphrates, the capital of the first Chaldean kings of whom we know, ABRAHAM was born. The first inhabitants of the country, who built the great cities there and invented a system of writing, spoke an agglutinative language like that of the Finns or Turks, which is usually termed Accadian; the Semites had already settled among them, the seat of the latter at the time being in Shinar or Uruk rather than in Accad, the south-eastern division of the country. From time to time Babylonia was overrun by the mountaineers of ELAM, whence the Accadians had themselves originally come, and Semite dynasties ruled in Chaldaea. One of these Elamite princes was CHEROD-LOMER or Cudur-Lagamar, the servant of the god Lagamar, who commanded three vassal sovereigns, Tidal or Targal of Gutium, the tract of country, in part of which the kingdom of Assyria afterwards arose, ARIOCH or Eri-Acu, king of Elam, possibly the Babylonian town Larsa (now Susa), and AMRAPHEL, king of Sumir, in their campaign against the West (Gen. xiv.). At this period Babylonia was still governed by Accadian monarchs, as shown by the proper names Targal, Eri-Acu, the servant of the Moon-god, and Amraphel, the Semite who obtained the upper hand; the Accadian language became extinct, and even the names of many of the cities were changed. Thus the city which was called Co-dimerra, "Gate of God", was named into its Semitic equivalent, Babel. One of the Semite kings, Sargon I., was a great patron of literature, and caused the books of his Accadian predecessors, under tribute, and his son and successor, Shalmaneser II., defeated BENHADAD of Damascus, and AHAZ of Israel, with their allies, in a battle at ARCOR. Benhadad and his successor, HAZARI, were weakened in a series of campaigns, which accordingly allowed the Israelites to gain advantages over the Syrians (1 Kings xx.). In 843 B.C. Shalmaneser states that he received tribute from "JERU, son of Omri", and the Jewish tribute-bearers are represented on a black marble obelisk, now in the British Museum. In 745 B.C., TIGLATH-PILESER II., an usurper, ascended the throne, the old line of Assyrian kings having ended with ASSURNIRARI. In 742 B.C. we find Tiglath-pileser overthrowing HAMATH, then allied with ASARAH (USARAH) king of Judah, and in 738 receiving tribute from MENAHEM of Israel, and REZIN of Syria. Considerable difficulty is occasioned by the mention of "PUL, the king of Assyria" in 2 Kings xv. 19, as no such king is known to the Assyrian monuments, and the tribute said to have been given to Pul is claimed by Tiglath-pileser to have been given to himself. Different explanations of the difficulty have been suggested; but perhaps it is best to regard Pul as a corrupt reading for Tiglath-pileser. In 734 B.C. Tiglath-pileser states that he invaded the PHILISTINES, and about the same time received tribute from AHAZ, of Judah; conformably to what we read in 2 Kings xvi. 8. As he calls the king of Judah Jehoahaz, it would seem that the Biblical writer has dropped the sacred name which properly formed the first part of the name of Ahas on account of the latter's wickedness. In return for the submission of Ahas, Tiglath-pileser attacked Israel, and laid siege to Damascus, which he captured, B.C. 732. Rezin, its king, was put to death, and Syria became a province of the Assyrian empire. Three years afterwards Israel was overrun (2 Kings xv. 29), HOSHEA was appointed king of Samaria in the place of the murdered PEKAM, and a tribute of 10 talents of gold and 1000 talents of silver was exacted. B.C. 727 Tiglath-pileser was succeeded by SHALMANESER (IV.), who undertook the siege of Samaria in consequence of Hoshea's revolt. Before Samaria was taken, however, Shalmaneser died, and the throne was seized by SARGON (B.C. 721), who took the Israelitish capital, carrying 77,280 of the inhabitants into captivity. The rest were allowed to remain under the government of vassal kings appointed by the Assyrians. One of these kings, Menahem II., is mentioned by Sennacherib in 701 B.C.; another, Abi-beal, by Ezer-haddon. About 685 B.C., the kings were replaced by a governor, which explains Isa. vii. 8. The change of government was probably in consequence of another revolt, which was suppressed by ESAR-HADDON, who carried away the remaining Israelites, and supplied their places with foreigners (see Ezer iv. 2). Perhaps the ASSAPPER of Ezer iv. 10 is Assur-bani-pal, or Sardanapalus, the son and successor of ESAR-HADDON. However this may be, SARGON (B.C. 721-704) laid all Palestine under tribute, and in 711 effected the formation of an alliance between MERODACH-BALADAN, k. of Babylon, on the one side, and HESERIAH with the Philistines, Edomites, Ammonites, Moabites, and Egyptians, on the other, by invading Palestine, taking Jerusalem as it would appear (see Isa. x. and xxii.), and utterly destroying Ashdod, the centre of the confederacy (Isa. xi. 1.), before the Babylonians were ready to move. Merodach-Baladan, who is called the son of Yagina or Yagus, was originally the chief of a tribe named CALDI or CHALDEANS, on the Persian Gulf. He had made himself master of Babylon, where he ruled from B.C. 721 to 709, when he was driven out by Sargon. His embassy to Hezekiah (2 Kings xx. 12-19) was sent with the purpose of forming the confederacy against the common enemy. In B.C. 704, Sargon was murdered, and SENNACHERIB his son mounted the throne on the 18th day of Ab, or July. Three years after (A.C. 701) occurred his well-known campaign against Hezekiah, which ended with the destruction of his army and the overthrow of his schemes of conquest in the West. After defeating Hezekiah's ally, TIRHAKAH of Egypt, at Eltakah, and severely punishing the leading men of Ekron, who had revolted against Assyria and delivered their king Padi, who was faithful to Sennacherib, into Hezekiah's hands, the Assyrian monarch overran Judah and shut up Hezekiah in Jerusalem "like a bird in a cage". Sennacherib claims to have received at the same time a tribute of 30 talents of gold and 500 talents of silver (comp. 2 Ks. xviii. 14), besides Hezekiah's daughters, wives, and eunuchs, and an immense quantity of precious stones and other objects. This was sent to Lachish (a representation of which, in a bas-relief, is now in the British Museum) in the vain hope of inducing Sennacherib to spare Jerusalem (2 Ks. xviii. 14). But Sennacherib, after sending into captivity 200,150 Jews with their cattle and camels, and capturing 46 fortified cities and numberless villages, despatched the three officials, the Tartas or "commander-in-chief", the Rab-shakeh or "prime minister", and the Rab-seric or "lord chamberlain", to besiege Jerusalem. It has been conjectured that the Rab-shakeh was a renegade Jew, since he spoke Hebrew instead of the Aramaic or Syriac (not Assyrian) language, which was now the language of trade and diplomacy, like French in modern times (2 Ks. xviii. 26). After the destruction of his army Sennacherib returned home, and the next year carried his arms into Babylonia, which had revolted with the help of the ELAMITES. Twenty years later (681 B.C.) his two elder sons, Adar-malik (Adrammelech) and Nergal-shareser, jealous of the favour shown to their younger brother Bear-haddon, murdered him (2 K. xix. 36, 37). After the murder they fled to Armenia, against which Bear-haddon was at the time conducting a campaign, and along with the Armenians were defeated by their brother in a battle in eastern Cappadocia. BEAR-HADDON conquered Egypt, which he divided into 20 satrapies, and is probably meant by the "cruel lord" of Is. xix. 4. Among his tributaries he names MANASSEH, the idolatrous king of Judah, who was afterwards carried captive to Babylon and temporarily confined there (2 Chron. xxxiii. 11). Babylon, which had been destroyed by Sennacherib, was rebuilt by Bear-haddon, who held his court there during half the year; this accounts for the fact that "the king of Assyria" brought Manasseh to Babylon, and not to Nineveh. In A.C. 670 Bear-haddon associated his son Assur-bani-pal with him on the throne (on the 15th day of Iyyar, or March), and two years afterwards, on Bear-haddon's death, Assur-bani-pal became sole king. The attempted revolt of Egypt under Tirhakah (who had taken refuge in Ethiopia) caused a terrible vengeance to be taken on Nia or Thebes, the Biblical NO-AMON or "No of the god Amun" (not "populous No," as A. V.). It was sacked, its monuments destroyed, and its people carried into captivity. This destruction of Thebes establishes the date of the prophecy of NAHUM, who refers to it as a recent event (Nah. iii. 8). After the death of Assur-bani-pal the empire began to break up, and at length Nineveh was besieged and destroyed by CYAXARES, king of Media, and Nabopolassar, the rebel viceroy of Babylonia. NEBUCHADREZZAR (B.C. 604-561), the son of Nabopolassar, founded the Babylonian empire, and adorned his capital, Babylon, with great buildings, such as fortifications, palaces, temples, and hanging gardens, which are mentioned in his inscriptions. JEHOIAKIM and the Jewish nobles were carried into captivity in Babylon by him in 586 B.C., and in 562 came the destruction of Jerusalem and the temple, the overthrow of the Jewish monarchy, and the beginning of the Exile. The last king of Babylon was Nabu-nahid, or Nabonidus (A.C. 555-538), who refers in his inscriptions to his "eldest son Bel-sarra-yutur", the BELSHAZZAR of Daniel. In 538 B.C. Babylon was taken by the Persian king CYRUS, Belshazzar was slain, and his father Nabonidus surrendered to the conqueror, who made him governor of Carmania.

(c) PERSIA. CYRUS founded the Persian empire by conquering those of Media, Lydia, and Babylonia, and thus making himself master of all Western Asia. The Persians belonged to the same Aryan race as the modern Persians and most of the European nations, and they inhabited the mountainous regions on the south-east of ELAM. The Aryan Medes, who had invaded and overcome the old Turanian inhabitants of Media in the 8th century B.C., were a branch of the same race; indeed, the Persians being originally but a Median tribe, the frequent association of 'MEDES and PERSIANS' is not surprising (e.g. in Is. xlii. 'Medes' includes Persians). Moved by God, in fulfilment of Jeremiah's prophecies (Jer. i. 1), and perhaps also in return for the assistance the Jewish exiles seem to have rendered the Persians on their invasion of Babylonia, CYRUS allowed them to return home and rebuild the temple. A large number of the priests took advantage of the permission, though comparatively few of the rest of the people. Under Sinsharrazar or Sinsharib, Ezra and Nehemiah, the temple was restored, the walls raised, and the injunctions of the Law carried out. Owing to the opposition of the SAMARITANS, however, the building of the temple was stopped for 15 years, that is to say, during the last seven years of the reign of CYRUS and the reigns of Cambyses and the Magian usurper GOMATES, who professed to be Berdes the brother of Cambyses. But in the second year of DARIUS Hystaspis, A.C. 520 (or more probably A.C. 518, after the capture of Babylon and the death of the rebel king Nidintab, who called himself Nebuchadnezzar, son of Nabonidus, in the June of that year), the original decree of CYRUS was found at Ecbatana in Media, and a fresh and favourable decree issued by Darius. EZRA the priest was despatched by ARTABANUS Longimannus, the grandson of Darius, in B.C. 520, to organise and reassure the Jews at Jerusalem who had fallen into a state of great weakness and confusion, and shortly afterwards NEHEMIAH, the cup-bearer of the same king, was appointed Towshah or governor of Judaea. To Nehemiah was due the restoration of the walls and the settlement of internal affairs, which enabled the Jews once more to maintain themselves against their heathen neighbours, and to establish a compact state. XERXES, the father of Artaxerxes, seems to have been the ALEXANDER of the book of Esther. The monotheism of the Persians, and their hatred of idolatry, naturally produced a certain sympathy between them and the Jews, who repaid the favours they had received at the hands of the Persian monarchs by acting as a military check upon Egypt. This monotheism probably led to Cyrus' opposition to idolatry and vocation as the "Anointed", Is. xlv. 1. When Alexander of Macedon overthrew the Persian empire, and Persian monotheism replaced by Greek polytheism, the feelings of the Jews towards their Imperial masters gradually changed, and finally resulted in the wars and victories of the MACCABEES.

(d) PHENICIA. Though Phenicia had been included in the Promised Land, its inhabitants successfully resisted the attempts of the tribe of ASER to expel them (Judg. i. 31), and LAUS seems alone of the ZIDONIAN towns to have fallen into the hands of the Israelites (Judg. xlviii. 27). Subsequently, the intercourse between the Phenicians and the Israelites was of a peaceful character. HIRAM, son of Abihai, king of TYRE, courted an alliance with the powerful David, and continued the friend of his son Solomon. The Phenicians were at the time the chief traders of the world, and famous for their artistic skill: Hiram, accordingly, sent cedar wood, precious metals, and workmen for the temple and other buildings erected by Solomon in Jerusalem. Among the various works in brass executed by the workmen were palm trees, lilies, lions, oxen, and cherubim (1 Ks. vii. 12-26), the favourite subjects of such Phenician works of art as have come down to us. Hiram also lent Solomon sailors for his trading expeditions to India, and received in return corn and oil (comp. 2 Ks. xii. 28), some cities of little value, and the use of the port of EXION-GEBA in the Red Sea (1 Ks. ix. 11-14, 26-28).

x. 23). After the division of the kingdom, Judah was cut off from any contact with Phœnicia, though Tyre occupies a prominent place in the writings of the Jewish prophets in consequence of the evil influence its wealth and idolatry exercised upon their countrymen. With the northern kingdom, on the other hand, Phœnicia continued in friendly relations; a result of which was the marriage of Ahab with JEZEBEL, the daughter of ETZBAAL, or Ithobal, king of Sidon (or, according to Masander, the Phœnician historian, of Tyre), and the introduction of Baal-worship among the Israelites. The reforms of JOASH naturally excited the religious fanaticism and hatred of the Phœnicians who bordered on the kingdom of Judah after the overthrow of that of Israel, and we find the Tyrians, therefore, rejoicing over the fall of Jerusalem (Isa. xxvi. 2). But they were themselves besieged by Nebuchadnezzar for 13 years, though apparently without success. They had, however, already suffered at the hands of the Assyrians. Under LULIYA or ELULISA, Tyre had been besieged by Shalmaneser king of Assyria, and though apparently not captured by Shalmaneser, the city lost its former supremacy over SIDON, ACCO, or Ptolemais' Acre, and CYPRUS (CHITTIM). In a.c. 702, Elulisa was again attacked by Sennacherib and fled to Cyprus, and one of his successors, Baal, sent tribute to Esar-haddon in a.c. 678. Shortly afterwards, the latter revolted in concert with TIRHAKAH, and Tyre was besieged by the Assyrians. It submitted to Assur-bani-pal after a long siege, YAHIMELECH, the eldest son of Baal, arranging the conditions of peace. SIDON had fared even worse than Tyre. Elulisa had reduced it to subjection to Tyre, from whose yoke it had previously revolted, and it was consequently besieged and taken by Sennacherib during his war with Tyre in 702 a.c., and Tubal appointed king. For a while Sidon became the leading city of Phœnicia, until, in 679 a.c., it revolted from Assyria, but was speedily captured and utterly destroyed by Esar-haddon. It must soon have risen from its ruins, however, as it is mentioned in Jeremiah (xv. 22; xxvii. 8), and in Persian times it was the most prosperous state in northern Palestine. Tyre had probably been much weakened by the siege of Nebuchadnezzar, and the internal dissensions caused by the tyranny of the last king, Baal II., who was deposed in 502 a.c., and annual Sages or 'judges' appointed. Royalty was restored 6 years later. Tyre took its name from the word Twr, "a rock", the island on which it was situated being so named (see Isa. xxiii. 2). Here was a great temple of BAAL Melcarth, the Sun-god, which the priests affirmed to have been built a.c. 2750. The city is mentioned in the Travels of an Egyptian Mohar or officer who visited Palestine one or two centuries before its conquest by the Israelites. Opposite insular Tyre was another city called Palæstyrus, or Old Tyre, which sometimes appears as an independent state, but was more usually regarded as a suburb of Tyre proper. Sidon also was a double city, since Sennacherib mentions both GREAT SIDON (see Isa. xix. 28) and Lesser Sidon. Sidon, i.e. "The Fishing Town", was the oldest city of Phœnicia (Gen. x. 15), the native name of Phœnicia being CAPHAR or the "Lowlands", which was afterwards extended to denote the whole of Palestine. In the Egyptian inscriptions Phœnicia is called Keft, the inhabitants being Kefa, and since Keft-ur or "Greater Phœnicia" was the name given to the Delta of the Nile, from the Phœnician colonies settled upon it, the Philistines who came from CAPHOR or Keft-ur (Deut. ii. 23; Amos ix. 7; Jer. xlvii. 4) must have been of Phœnician origin. Like commercial nations generally, the Phœnicians were great colonisers; among their colonies may be mentioned CARTHAGE or Kition in Cyprus, from which the whole island takes its name in the Old Testament (Gen. x. 4; Nam. xxiv. 24; Isa. xxiii. 1, 12; Jer. ii. 10; Ezek. xxvii. 6), and Carthage on the northern coast of Africa, founded, it was said, by Elissa or Dido, the sister of Pygmalion king of Tyre (a.c. 870).

(d) ARAM and the HITTITES. To the north-east of Phœnicia were the highlands of Syria, the cities of the Hittites, and the plateau of Mesopotamia. In the Old Testament this tract of country is known as ARAM. Mesopotamia, enclosed between the Tigris and Euphrates, is called ARAM-NAHARAIN, "Aram of the two rivers" (Gen. xxiv. 10; Deut. xxiii. 4; Judg. iii. 8), though only the northern portion of it is designated Naharaina and Nahri or Nairi on the Egyptian and Assyrian monuments. Elsewhere it is termed PADAN-ARAM (Gen. xiv. 29; xxvii. 2), identical with the country of Padan mentioned in an early Babylonian inscription, as well as simply Aram "the highlands" (rendered "SYRIA" in the A. V.; see Gen. xiv. 29; xxxi. 20, 24; Deut. xvi. 5; Judg. iii. 10). Naharaina was the leading antagonist of Egypt in Asia in the time of Thothmes I (xviii. dynasty); one of its kings, CUSHAN-RISH-ATRAIM, extended his conquests to Palestine shortly after the Israelitish conquest (Judg. iii. 8-10); and the numerous principalities of Nahri were engaged in constant wars with the Assyrian monarchs. Strictly speaking, PETHOR, which lay on the western bank of the Euphrates, close to the B. Sajur, ought not to be included in this division of Aram (Deut. xxiii. 4). It was situated rather in ARAM-ZOBAR, conquered by David (2 Sam. x. 6, 8; viii. 3; 1 Chron. xviii., xix.). In the time of Saul, Zobah was ruled by several petty kings (1 Sam. xiv. 47), who were subsequently reduced by HADADREZER, David's antagonist. Hadadreseer seems also to have made Damascus tributary to him (2 Sam. viii. 6; 1 Chr. xi. 23, 24). The territory of Zobah which extended into the desert towards Palmyra adjoined ARAM-REHOB and ARAM-MACRAN (2 Sam. x. 6). ARAM-Macraah, again, bordered on GESHUR "in Aram" (2 Sam. xv. 8; iii. 2), and both formed part of the territory allotted to MANASSEH (Josh. xiii. 11, 13); however Rehob and part of Zobah alone are included under the name of Aramu or Aram in the Assyrian inscriptions, which place them on the west bank of the Euphrates, southward of Pethor and the B. Sajur. After the middle of the eighth century b.c., the Assyrian inscriptions speak of another tribe of Arameans, also called NABATHIANS, which inhabited the marshes south of Babylonia. West of Zobah and north of Damascus (but separated from it by the chain of Antilibanus) lay HAMATH (now Hama), in the valley of the Upper Orontes, or N. part of the Mid-Lebanon valley. At the sources of the Orontes lived a people called Patinai, east of whom came the powerful kingdoms of the Hittites. The HITTITES are first mentioned in the Egyptian inscriptions of Thothmes III., and in the time of the xix. dynasty they take the leading place previously occupied by Naharaina. At this period they had two capitals, Kadesh, near Emesa, on Lake Kades, or Homs, in the south, and CARCHEMISH, now Jerabis, south of Biredjik, on the Euphrates, in the north. Kadesh was stormed and taken more than once by the Egyptians. In the age of the Assyrian king Tiglath-pileser I., a.c. 1130, the Hittites had receded towards their northern capital, Carchemish, which in the 9th century b.c. absorbed the smaller states and remained a rich and powerful rival of Assyria until captured by Sargon a.c. 717. A treaty exists made between the Egyptian king Rameses II. and a prince of the Hittites, the Hittite copy of which was on a plate of silver. Under Solomon horses were imported from Egypt for sale to "all the kings of the Hittites", "and of Syria" (Aram), 1 Kin. x. 29; see Judg. i. 28 and 2 Kin. vii. 6, and among Solomon's wives were Hittites (1 Kin. xi. 1). In the Patriarchal Period a branch of the Hittite race seems to have settled in the S. of Palestine, in the neighbourhood of HEBRON. It was this branch that is usually meant in the O. T. when the Hittites are named. To it belonged EPHRAIM (Gen. xxiii.), Judith and Bashemath, Esau's wives (Gen. xxvi. 24; comp. xxvi. 2, 3), Ahimelech, David's companion (1 Sam. xxvi. 6), and probably also URIAH (2 Sam. xi.). Near Hebron was Debir, the city of the 'Oracle', the early name of which was KIRJATH-SAPHIR or 'book town' (Josh. xv. 15). The Hittites, in fact, were a literary people; a scribe, Kirath-sar or 'prince of Aleppo', is mentioned on the Egyptian to some of which temples may have been erected by Solomon. They had frequent wars with the Syrians of Hamath and of DAMASCUS, which after the fall of David's empire became the dominant Syrian state (1 Kin. xi. 23-25; xv. 18; 2 Kin. vii. 6). In B.C. 854, however, a confederacy under BEN-HADAD of Damascus, which included Hamathites, Ammonites, and 2000 chariots and 10,000 men from Ahab of Israel, was defeated at Aroer by Shalmaneser the Assyrian king. The blows inflicted on Ben-hadad by the Assyrians probably encouraged Ahab to attack Ramoth-Gilead (1 Kin. xxii. 1-4). In B.C. 842, Shalmaneser defeated HAZAEL, the murderer and successor of Ben-hadad (see 2 Kin. viii. 15), who subsequently ravaged Israel. REZIN, the last king of Damascus, in alliance with Pekah of Israel, endeavoured to overthrow the dynasty of David in Jerusalem and replace Ahab by a creature of his own (Isa. vii. 6). Ahab, however, summoned Tiglath-pileser II., king of Assyria, to his assistance; Damascus was besieged and taken and Rezin slain, B.C. 732. Both in peace and in war Damascus exercised considerable influence upon the northern kingdom of Israel, part of its important trade (Ezek. xxvii. 18) being diverted thither. Ahab acquired trading privileges at Damascus, where he made "streets" or merchants' quarters (1 Kin. xx. 34), as Ben-hadad had previously done in Samaria, and Amos (iii. 12) refers to the "damask couches" of Samaria (not "in Damascus" as A.V.). The same intimate relations that existed between Israel and Damascus seem to have existed between Judah and HAMATH. In the time of Thothmes III., Hamath belonged to the Hittites; in the time of David its king, Toi, made an alliance with the Hebrew monarch (2 Sam. viii. 10). Store-cities were built by Solomon in its territory (2 Chron. viii. 4), and in B.C. 740 Azariah formed an alliance against Assyria with the king of Hamath, which however, was overthrown by Tiglath-pileser, and Hamath and its 19 districts were conquered by the Assyrians. In B.C. 720, Hamath revolted under a usurper, named Paku-biddi, perhaps of Jewish origin, since his name is compounded with the sacred name of the God of Israel. He was, however, captured at Aroer and flayed alive, while Hamath was placed under an Assyrian governor, and its inhabitants transported to Samaria (2 Kin. xvii. 24, 30). The only Hamathite deity known to us is Ashima or Asimath (2 Kin. xvii. 30), but worship was also probably paid to the two divinities of Damascus, RIIMON and BABIA.

III. THE INFLUENCE ON ISRAEL—OF THE RELIGIONS.

(a) OF EGYPT.—The foundation of Egyptian religious belief was the worship of the Sun, which was adored under various forms, as the rising sun, the midday sun, the setting sun, &c. When Egypt was organised under one government, the different local deities, such as Ptah of Memphis, or Amun of Thebes, were united in a single system, and eventually all resolved into manifestations of the Sun-god. The predominance of a city was marked by the predominance of its deity: thus when Thebes (No, No-AMON) was the capital, Amun stood at the head of the gods. The cult of Osiris was a particular development of solar worship. The Egyptian religion as professed by the priests and educated classes, became pantheistic. All that is was however, all believed after a reaction of the body, the immortal judgment to come, and a heaven connection with the belief in the body that embalming was practised. Superstitions never attracted the commandment was directed against of idols and symbolical images; and esp. against the worship of a calf-worship was not connected with the bull Apis, but, as to Assyrian and Phœnician inf expressed personality of God in which is sometimes even demorphic language, is in direct pantheism. The references to passages as seem to ignore it, in mind quite different from that of the Semites. The danger feared by they opposed any alliance of course between Judah and Egypt, not from Egyptian idolatry of the Semites settled the ecclesiastical system of the essentially. The Egyptian priest measure secular, like that of various civil functions, and the priesthood was hereditary, all being alike included in an Egyptian of any class or rank. Along with the priests there were nuns, who lived in cells attached to all this there is no trace in W. R. Cooper's Egypt and the Sons, 1875).

* From the excavations about to be undertaken on the site of Carthensish we may soon expect to obtain a large number of inscriptions and a clue to the decipherment of the characters in which they are written, as well as monuments of the art and daily life of the Hittites. Meanwhile, the scantiness of the materials at present at our disposal forbids any attempt to trace Aramaic and Hittite religion, science, literature, or art. Hence, no mention of Aram and the Hittites has been made under the headings that follow.

(b) OF ASSYRIA AND BABYLON.—The primitive Accadian popular Shamanistic, that is to say, even nature had its "spirit", good, compelled to confer a benefit, harm by certain magic rites as to the Shamans or sorcerers priests. Subsequently a hierarchy established, at the head of which was Ea "the deep", and Elum or Eshum "the world". The seat of the summit of "the mountain north-east, the central pivot of the sky and its stars rested (see Isa. should translate "the mountain the gods") in the extremities of the Semites settled in Babylon with the Accadians, the we assumed large proportions, as applied to the sun became as heroes. At the same time the brought with it star-worship; identified with the planets. The of the old Shamanistic creed was "the 300 spirits of heaven", as earth". As the worship of nature of the religious belief of the deductive powers of nature seem well as a male element, every with a goddess, who was redoubtable. In this way by the Semitic beliefs there was formed a system, which included an almanac of deities, each arranged in precedence. Into this system astro-theology, or worship of the about B.C. 2000. After the extinction of the whole of this religion by the Semitic Babylonians and such old Accadian beliefs and practices as the sacredness of the number seven (in reference to the 7 planets), the division of the month into weeks of 7 days, and the observance of the seventh as a day of rest, the observance of feasts at the new moon, the institution of religious prostitutes, the conception of vicarious punishment, and human sacrifices, especially by fire. The Chaldean sabbath was observed on the 7th, 14th, 19th, 21st, and 28th days of the month, and was called "a day of completion of labours" in Accadian, and a "Sabbath" (explained as "a day of rest for the heart") in Assyrian. A Babylonian saint's calendar for the intercalary month Elul lays down the following prescriptions for the first sabbath of the month:—"A sabbath: The prince of many nations may not eat the flesh of birds and cooked fruit. He may not change the garments of his body. He may not put on white robes. He may not offer sacrifice. The king may not ride in his chariot. He may not legislate in royal fashion. The general may not appoint by word of mouth a place of garrison. Medicine may not be applied for the sickness of the body". Many of these beliefs and practices were adopted by the Phœnicians (who also adopted some of the Babylonian gods), and probably increased the fatal attraction of the Phœnician religion on Israel. The observance of the Sabbath, though reinforced in the Law, went back, like the rite of circumcision, to the age of Abraham. Direct Assyrian and Babylonian influence upon Israel and Judah did not begin till the 9th and 8th centuries a.c., and was naturally extremely strong during the Exile. Thus in Amos v. 26, a passage which should be translated "Siccut your king, and Chama your image, the star of your god", we have an allusion to the two Assyrian deities Sakrut and Carvanu, the planet Saturn. MANASSEH, again, worshipped "the host of heaven" (2 Kings xxi. 3), and the exiles are described in Isa. lxx. 3, as "sacrificing in gardens and burning incense upon the bricks", in contrast to the idolatrous worship of their fathers upon the HIGH-PLACES and hills of Palestine (c. 7). Small images or TERAPHIM were set up behind the doors of private houses (Isa. lvii. 8; Ex. ix. 1, 2), like the clay images found under the floors at Nineveh. Horses and chariots were dedicated by the Jewish kings to the sun (2 Kings xxiii. 11), as among the Assyrians, and later the Persians; and in Ezek. viii. 14, we read of "women weeping for TAMMUZ in the north gate of the temple. Tammuz signified in Accadian "the offspring" or "only son", and was a name of the Sun-god, called by the Semites Adonal (Greek, Adonis), "lord". The wintry descent of the sun after the summer solstice was commemorated by a feast of wailing, which was among the other religious customs that had passed from the Assyrians to the Phœnicians. It is therefore uncertain whether the worship of Tammuz was borrowed by the Jews directly from the Assyrians or mediately through the Phœnicians. This is not the case, however, with the worship of the sun, moon, planets, and stars suppressed by JOSEPH (2 Kin. xxiii. 5; see Jer. xix. 13; Lev. i. 5), which must have been imported directly from Assyria or Babylonia, the seat of ancient astronomy and astrology. This worship may possibly have been introduced by AHAB, whose inclination to adopt a foreign idolatry is shown by the altar modelled after me he saw at Damascus, which he ordered Urijah to set up in the temple (2 Kin. xvi.), and whose acquaintance with Babylonian astronomy is indicated by the fiat he erected in Jerusalem (2 Kin. xx. 11). We may notice that Ahab used the brazen altar in the temple for the purpose of divination (2 Kin. xvi. 15), an art in which the Babylonians were the instructors of the ancient world; cp. the history of BALAAM, Nwm. xxiii. 2; xxiv. 1. Connected with star-worship was the worship of the moon. The moon was naturally one of the chief objects of adoration among a nation of astronomers like the Babylonians, and though the attributes of the Babylonian moon-god were transferred by the Phœnicians to their ASHTORETH, it is probable that the worship of "the queen of heaven" among the Jews, and the cakes or buns that were offered to her by the women of Jerusalem (Jer. vii. 18), were due to the immediate influence of Assyria. During the Exile the worship of even the inferior Babylonian deities spread among the Jews; and in Isa. lxx. 11, we read that some, forgetful of God's "holy temple" at Jerusalem, "prepare a table for GAN, and furnish the drink-offering unto MENI" (A.V. morpim). Meni was the god of destiny, called Manu in Assyrian, and Gad was the god of good luck, whose name reappears in that of the city Baal-gad (Josh. xi. 17; xii. 7). The demonology of the later Jews may equally be traced back to Babylonia, where the inhabitants lived in daily dread of evil spirits, of whom Asmodeus, in the book of Tobit, may be taken as a type. It was only in this life, however, that the spirits, either good or bad, were to be feared. The Assyro-Babylonians looked forward to a dreary future, to an underground Hades, where the phantoms of dead kings and heroes sat on thrones (see Isa. xiv. 9), where all was darkness and equalor, and where the spirits of the dead flitted like bats, with dust only for their food. Seven gates had to be passed before Hades was reached, and the souls of the dead might be called up from it by the magical rites of necromancer (see Isa. lxx. 4; viii. 19). For a select few only was "the land of the silver sky" reserved, where the happy spirits feasted in light.

(c) OF PERSIA. The Persians were monotheists, disciples of their great prophet Zoroaster. Ormazd (Ahura-mazda, "the wise Being"), the principle of light and goodness, was held to be the one God who had created the world. In his name the Persian kings destroyed idols and idolatry in the countries they conquered. By the side of Ormazd was placed Ahriman (Angro-mainyu), the principle of darkness and evil, who had introduced sin and misery into the creation of Ormazd. While the world lasts Ormazd and Ahriman were believed to be equal in power; though finally Ahriman would be overcome, and evil destroyed. This dualism was opposed to the strict monotheism of the Jewish faith, and allusions to it may possibly occur in such passages as Isa. xiv. 7. Under Ormazd and Ahriman were vast multitudes of subordinate spirits, good angels and wicked demons. The angels were formed into a hierarchy, at the head of which were the six Ameshaspentas or archangels. The Persians further believed in a fall of man, brought about by Ahriman, in a saviour, in a future state, and in the resurrection of the body. But beyond the sympathy caused by a common monotheism, it is difficult to discover any marks of influence exercised by Persian religion on the Jews, though attempts have been made to ascribe to such an influence the increased prominence given, after the Exile, to the doctrine of a future life, as well as the conception of Satan as prince of the devils and of this world, and opposed to God as darkness to light. In Job i. 6-12, Satan appears among "the sons of God" or angels (see 1 Kin. xxii. 21-23). And the Pharisees, in opposition to the Sadducees, admitted the existence of angels and spirits and the doctrine of the resurrection (Acts 23. 8). An attempt has also been made to connect the belief of the post-exilic Jews in hierarchies of good and evil spirits, of whom Asmodeus in Tobit is an example, with the similar belief of the Zoroastrian Persians. But though Asmodeus is undoubtedly a Persian word (Aeshmâ-dævo, "the spirit Aeshma", the demon of anger), the belief itself goes back to the Babylonians, from whom it was probably derived by the Persians as well as by the Jews.

(d) OF THE PHŒNICIANS. A common language and kindred, as well as proximity and commercial intercourse, caused the Israelites to be more strongly attracted by Phœnician belief and practices than by those of any other people. The Phœnicians shared the same religious beliefs as the Canaanites, Moabites, Edomites, Ammonites, and Philistines, and, as has been already noticed, a large part of their mythology and their deities was originally borrowed from Babylonia. Phœnician religion may be characterized as a sensual nature-worship, in which the worship of the Sun-god held the chief place. The Sun-god, called by the general name of BAAL (lord), or MOLOCH, MILCOM (king), was worshipped under a great variety of forms and attributes, each of which became a separate god. As the hot sun of summer he was called Baal-Khamman (Ammon), and as such placed at the head of the gods; as the waning summer sun, TAMMUS or Adonis; as the god of destiny, Baal-Gad; as the patron of Tyre, Baal-Tsur and Melkarth ("king of the city"); as the sun with long hair or rays, Baal-Schemem. In short, the number of BAALIM was infinite; each state had its own peculiar ones, and there was a new Baal for each aspect under which the sun could be adored. In course of time the word Baal became synonymous with "god", and so even the deity of the river Tammus was termed Baal-Tamar. Among the Philistines the sun was compared to a great fly, and accordingly worshipped under the name of Baal-zebub, "lord of flies". The oracle of Baal-zebub at Ekron, where answers seem to have been obtained from the hum and motions of flies, was consulted by AHAZIAH (2 Kis. i. 2, 3, 6); and among the later Jews the name became a synonyme of Satan, whence the Beelzebub of the N. T. While the more spiritual side of sun-worship was reflected in the Assyro-Babylonian Bel-Merodach (Jas. xli. 1), its grosser side was represented in the worship of the Moabites (and Midianites) Baal-Peor (Nam. xiv. 3, sq.; Deut. iv. 3). When addressed as "king" the sun was called MOLOCH by the Israelites, MILCOM or MALCHAM by the Ammonites (2 Kis. xxiii. 13; 2 Sam. i. 5), Melkarth by the Tyrians, and Malik by the Assyrians. In Jer. xli. 1, we should render "Malcham" rather than "their king", and the probable meaning of the word translated "brick-kiln" in 2 Sam. xii. 31, is "place of Moloch". Among the Moabites the name Moloch or Milcom was replaced by CHEMOH (1 Kis. xi. 7), but both gods were essentially the same. To both children were burnt to death in sacrifice (Jer. vii. 31; 2 Chron. xxviii. 3; 2 Kis. iii. 27), a custom which we now know was ultimately of Accadian origin. The same wish to propitiate the fierce deity of summer heat caused the priests of Baal to cut themselves with knives (1 Kis. xviii. 28). Since however the heat of the sun creates as well as destroys, the Sun-god was worshipped as both creator and destroyer, and symbolic pillars were accordingly dedicated to Melkarth. The ox, the sun's usual symbol, denoting his strength, was originally derived from Babylonia, where the image of the winged bull, called the krabus or cherub, guarded the house from the entrance of evil spirits. The cherub was adopted into Phœnician art. The two cherubs made for Solomon (1 Kis. vi. 23-28), the "carved figures of cherubims and palm-trees and open flowers" (1 Kis. vi. 29), were the work of Phœnician artists, with whom palm-trees and open flowers were favourite devices. Like the rest of the Semitic race, the Phœnicians were worshippers of nature and its generative powers, and every god therefore was provided with a goddess. Thus, by the side of Baal stood Baaltis or ASHTORETH, the Greek Astarte, in Assyrian Istar (1 Kis. xi. 5, 33). Ashtoreth was properly the female reflection of the sun-god when regarded as the Creator, and consequently there could be as many Ashtoreths or ASHTAROTH as there were Baals or Baalim. Hence it is that we have the plural in the sense of "goddesses" in Judg. x. 6; 1 Sam. vii. 4; xii. 10; and corresponding to Baal-Khamman, we find in Phœnician inscriptions Tanith, "the face (i.e. reflection) of Baal". In time, however, Ashtoreth came to represent the moon, which might be considered the fainter reflection or wife of the sun whence the title Ashtoreth-Karnaim, "of the two horns" (Gen. xiv. 5), as the moon Ashtoreth was addressed as "QUEEN OF HEAVEN" (Jer. vii. 18). In Assyria, after the establishment of the system of astro-theology, Istar or Ashtoreth was identified with the planet Venus, and was further divided into two deities, one the goddess of love, and the other of war. But in Assyria the female deities took a rank and determinate character, which they never had among the Phœnicians. As might be expected, we find Ashtoreth worshipped by the Philistines (1 Sam. xxxi. 10). Quite distinct from Ashtoreth was ASHERAH the goddess of fertility, symbolised by a cone of stone, or the upright stem of a tree stripped of its branches. Both the goddess and her symbol were called by the same name, Asherah. The word is mistranslated "grove" and "groves" in the A. V. (2 Kis. xxi. 7; xxiii. 13-15; Judg. vi. 25-28). Besides these deities the Phœnicians also worshipped various subordinate gods, such as Pagan, Saknan, the 8 Kabiri (the makers of the world, the inventors of civilisation, of ships, and of medicine, of whom the eighth was Kahmun, identified by the Greeks with their Æsculapius); and they also adored deified rivers, like the Kishon, and deified mountains, like Peniel and Kasius. This sketch of Phœnician religion makes it hardly needful to point out the close resemblance between the forms assumed by Israelitish idolatry and Phœnician religious belief. The Israelites were influenced by it (1) indirectly and (2) directly. Indirectly, the Israelites, like their Phœnicians kindred, were inclined towards sun-worship; hence the WORSHIP OF THE HIGH-PLACES, which were exposed to the rays of the sun, and the representation of the LORD under the image of a CALF, or rather ox (Exod. xxxii. 4; 1 Kis. xii. 29-32; How. viii. 5, 6; x. 3). In thus representing their national God, the Israelites identified Him with the Baal or Sun-god of the other Semitic tribes, and though professing to regard Him as the one true God, nevertheless came to worship Him under as many forms or manifestations as there were high-places. Still it must be remembered that calf-worship was professedly a recognition of Jahweh, and the prophets of SAMARIA accordingly, while sanctioning it, regarded themselves as "prophets of the LORD": 1 Kis. xxiii. 5, 6, &c. The direct establishment of Phœnician superstitions was due to the marriage of Ahab to JEZEBEL: 1 Kis. xvi. 31, 32. The Baalim of Phœnicia were introduced into Samaria and Judah, and the worship of the covenant God of Israel in a degraded shape was put on the same level with, or even below, that of these foreign idols. The way had already been prepared by Solomon (1 Kis. xi. 5); and the whole people had "served Baalim and Ashtoreth" and "Asherah", "the gods of Aram, and the gods of Zidon, and the gods of Moab, and the gods of the children of Ammon, and the gods of the Philistines" in the time of the Judges: Judg. iii. 7; x. 6. JOASH, Gideon's father, had an altar to Baal, under which name, however, he may have worshipped Jahweh (Judg. vi. 25); and as soon as GIDEON was dead, the Israelites worshipped Baal-berith, "Baal of the Covenant", at Shechem; while JONATHAN, Moses' grandson [not Manasseh, as A.V.] was priest to the tribe of DAN of a graven image, which seems to have been a Baal: Judg. xviii. 30. The immoral institutions connected with the Phœnician religion were common in Judah as early as the reign of REHOBOAM (1 Kis. xiv. 24; 2 Kis. xxi. 7), and in both the northern and southern kingdoms children were burnt or made to pass through the fire in honour of the Sun-god. MANASSEH was the first, however, who ventured to set up an image of Asherah and build altars to the host of heaven in the temple itself: 2 Kis. xxi. 4-7; xxiii. 6, 11, 12.

IV. COMMERCIAL RELATIONS.

The trade of Western Asia in ancient times followed FOUR main ROUTES—two inland, two searoutes. (1) The first inland caravan-route led out of EGYPT, through Palestine, eastward across Coele-Syria to CARCHEMIS (near the modern Biredjik) on the Euphrates; then across Mesopotamia by Harran to the Tigris, and so by Nineveh to Babylon and the Persian Gulf. (2) The second caravan-route led along the western coast of Arabia, through Mekka and the ancient MIDIAN into northern Egypt and Palestine. (3) The first of the sea-routes was from Phœnicia by Cyprus or CHITTIM and the islands of the Egean to Sicily and Malta, the northern coast of Africa, and finally Tartessus (probably near Gibraltar) in Spain. At an early period Phœnician sailors seem to have ventured through the Straits of Gibraltar into the Atlantic, and even to have made their way to the Casasterides or Scilly isles. (ii.) The second sea-route started from EZION-GEBER, in the Gulf of Akabah, down the Red Sea, and along the southern coast of Arabia (Hazar-maveth: Gen. x. 28) to OPHIR or Abhira, at the mouth of the Indus. The sea-routes were followed by the PHCENICIANS, the first of the inland routes by the MIDIANITES and ISHMAELITES (Gen. xxxvii. 25; xxxix. 1), the TEMANITES and SABEANS (Job vi. 19), the DEDANITES (Iso. xli. 13), and other nomad tribes; and the second of the inland routes by the Syrians. This latter route formed the military road followed by CREDORLAOMER (Gen. xiv.) and the later kings of Assyria, Egypt (2 Kiv. xxiii. 29), and Babylonia. There was also direct maritime trade between Phœnicia and the Delta; two maritime routes from the mouth of the Euphrates, followed by the CHALDEANS (Iso. xliii. 14), one to India, the other along southern Arabia to Africa; a caravan-road traced out by the conquests of Tiglath-pileser from Nineveh across Persia and Afghanistan to the SINIM of Dardistan (Iso. xli. 12) and the Punjab; and another caravan-road across Asia Minor from Carchemish to the Hellespont. Under the later Assyrian kings, whose wars with Tyre and Zidon were made in the interest of the Assyrian merchants, CARCHEMISH, close to the great ford over the Euphrates, became the chief centre of inland West-Asia trade. Along this road must have been brought the goodly Babylonish garment mentioned in Jos. vii. 21, as well as much of the ivory used by the Israelitish and Phœnician kings and nobility (1 Kiv. x. 18; 2 Caros. ix. 17; 1 Kiv. xxii. 39; Amos vi. 4; Cant. vii. 4; Ezek. xxvii. 6), though a good deal of this was also supplied by the caravans of Arabia (Iso. xli. 13; Ezek. xxvii. 15), and the ships that traded to Ophir (1 Kiv. x. 22). Lapis lazuli, moreover (A. V. "sapphires") would have come from Babylonia (Cant. v. 14; Ezek. xxviii. 12). In order to secure this trade, SOLOMON built or fortified BASILBek and TADOR (? Palmyra) to the south of Carchemish and the usual route (1 Kiv. ix. 18), and the stream of commerce was thus for a time diverted to a new and more direct road across the desert. But it soon returned to the old track, while the trade, whether of northern or of southern Arabia, remained in the hands of the nomads: Iso. ii. 6, 7. This trade was for the most part in spices and gold: 1 Kiv. x. 15. It was through his commercial relations, probably, that Solomon became known to the queen of SHEBA. His alliance with HIRAM of Tyre was a strictly commercial one. The united fleets of Israel and Phœnicia sailed every three years from ELATH and EZION-GEBER to Ophir, bringing back gold, silver, ivory, sandal-wood, ebony, precious stones, apes, and peacocks. The Mediterranean, however, the Phœnicians kept in their own hands, although the Israelitish merchantmen were called "ships of TARSISH," like the Phœnician merchantmen whose main destination was Tartessus. It is little wonder that this commercial alliance should have brought with it the introduction of Phœnician manners and customs, luxury and idolatry. Solomon also organised an inland trade with Egypt, whence he imported horses and chariots (*1 Kiv. x. 28, 29), some of which were afterwards sent to Carchemish, and resold to the Hittites and Syrians. A horse cost 150 shekels of silver, a chariot with its three horses 600 shekels. This trade in horses with Egypt brought the Israelites into contact with Egyptian idolatry, and was therefore strongly opposed by the prophets: Iso. xxx. 16; Dent. xvii. 16; Ps. xli. 7. After the death of Solomon and the division of the kingdom, Israelitish trade languished, only to be revived at intervals of prosperity. Thus JEROSHUA-

PHAT made an unsuccessful attempt to revive the trade to Ophir (1 Kiv. xxiii. 48, 49), and the "ships of Tarshish" or merchantmen spoken of by Isaiah (ii. 16), taken in conjunction with the fact that JONAH "found a ship going to Tarshish" at JOPPA (Jow. i. 8), would imply that in the later days of the monarchy the Israelites became rivals of the Phœnicians, even in the Mediterranean itself. Indeed, JERUSALEM is described as a commercial rival of TYRE in Ezek. xxvi. 2, and Hosea (xii. 7) refers to the merchants of SAMARIA. The latter carried on an export trade in oil by sea with Egypt (Hos. xli. 1), and fine linen and girdles of home make were sold to the merchants: Prov. xxxi. 24. Commercial intercourse with Phœnicia continued to be carried on at all times, and had doubtless much to do with the introduction of Baal-worship. Wheat, honey, oil, and balm were exported thither (1 Kiv. v. 11; Ezek. xxvii. 17; Acts xli. 20), timber, fish, and other "wares" being received in return (1 Kiv. v. 6, 9; Ecce iii. 7; Neh. xlii. 16).

V. SCIENCE, LITERATURE, AND ART.

It is difficult to trace Egyptian influence upon the Israelites in either one of these respects. It is otherwise as regards Assyria and Babylonia. The dial of Ahas points to his acquaintance with Babylonian science, and we may gather from Prov. xxv. 1 that HEZEKIAH established a library where scribes were employed in copying and editing old books, like the libraries with their staff of scribes and copyists found in every great Babylonian and Assyrian city. Though papyrus or parchment were generally used for writing purposes, in Jer. xxxii. 10, 11 we seem to have a reference to a contract inscribed in the Assyrian manner on a clay tablet, and, after the signatures of the witnesses, covered by an outer coating of clay, on which the heads of the contract were written, with a docket of papyrus attached to it by a string. In art, the Israelites were the pupils of the Phœnicians (see 1 Kiv. vii. 13, 14; v. 6, 13, &c.), and Phœnician art was mainly borrowed and adapted from Assyria and Babylonia. Thus the devices of cherubs, palm-trees, pomegranates, lions, and the like in SOLOMON'S TEMPLE were Phœnicio-Assyrian, and the architectural details of the temple itself have been traced back to Phœnicia and Assyria. Babylonia was the original home of the column as used in Western Asia and Europe, as also of seas or reservoirs in temples: 1 Kiv. vii. 23. The cherubs seen by Ezekiel (x.) resemble those of Assyrian art, and the Assyrian and Babylonian gods were carried about in arks. The "pattern" of the altar at Damascus, again, which AHAZ was to be imitated in the temple at Jerusalem (2 Kiv. xvi. 10, 11), was no doubt Assyrian. Just as the Phœnicians borrowed the Egyptian sphinx, so also did they borrow the Assyro-Babylonian cherub; but whereas the sphinx was not represented among the Israelites, probably on account of its idolatrous connection, the cherub was freely introduced into the decoration of the temple. To the Phœnicians the Israelites also owed their alphabet, which had been adapted from the Egyptian hieroglyphics by the Phœnicians of the Delta at a very early date. What influence the Phœnicians may have had upon Hebrew literature it is impossible to say, but when we remember that Kirjath-sepher "the book-town" (Jos. x. 15; Judg. i. 11) was among the places conquered by the Israelites upon their entrance into Canaan, and that Phœnician literature, more especially historical literature, went back to a period anterior to that of Hiram and David, we are justified in believing that some influence it must have had. At all events, Josephus, quoting from Menander of Ephesus and Dina, asserts that Solomon and Hiram propounded riddles to one another on the penalty of paying a fine if they were not guessed, and that Hiram was unable to solve the riddles of Solomon until a Tyrian named Abdesmon came to his aid.

* The word rendered "Hinn yarn" in the A. V. should rather be "caravans."

- II. The first trustworthy synchronism with secular history, and consequent calculations. Other synchronisms: Egypt, Assyria, Babylon, Persia, and Greece.
- III. Note on New Testament chronology.
- IV. The Era of the Creation.

I. It is in the Bible itself that all chronological data for the Scripture history must be sought from the beginning to about 1000 years B.C. The material is to be found first in the genealogies, afterwards in other notes of time. With occasional breaks and uncertainties, the main conclusions are tolerably clear.

Four periods may be specified before we come into any contact with the authentic dates of secular history:

(1) From the Creation to the Deluge.—The dates of this era are ascertained by easy calculation from Gen. v.—“the book of the generations of Adam”—where the age of each antediluvian patriarch at the birth of his eldest son is given. The total of 1656 years is thus readily reached; this being the date accepted by Usher, and specified in the “common chronology” as that of the Deluge. But this computation is peculiar to the Hebrew text; the Septuagint adding to the lives of six of the patriarchs 100 years each before their eldest sons were born, and six years to that of one other (Lamech). The whole genealogy, therefore, is 606 years longer in the LXX.; and Dr. Hales, accepting the authority of the latter (save in the six years added to Lamech), makes the total duration of the era 2256 years. This, it may be added, is the reckoning of Josephus.

(2) From the Deluge to the migration of Abram, out of Haran into Canaan. The dates here are supplied in Gen. xi. 10–26, “the generations of Shem;” the calculation being exactly similar to the preceding, and giving, according to the Hebrew text, 292 years up to the birth of Terah’s sons. The Septuagint, however, (1) adds 100 years again to the lives of six of the patriarchs before their eldest sons’ birth; (2) adds 50 to the life of one (Nahor); and (3) interposes a Cainan between Arphaxad and Salah, making a difference of 130 years. This raises the total, up to the birth of “Abram, Nahor, and Haran,” to 1072. To each of these numbers add 75 for the age of Abram at his entrance upon Canaan (Gen. xii. 4), and we have for this period, Hebrew 367, LXX. 1147 years. According to Josephus, the period was 1068 years. But Usher, in following the Hebrew text, finds it necessary to add 60 years to the age of Terah at Abram’s birth (comp. Gen. xi. 32 with xii. 4), raising the date of the migration to A.M. 2083, as in the Table (1656+367+60). Hales, though in the main agreeing with the LXX., concurs in adding this 60 years, but rejects the 130 years of Cainan as an interpolation (notwithstanding Luke iii. 36). His date is, therefore, A.M. 2083 (2256–1147+60–130).

With regard to the comparative probability of the two computations, it may be observed, that according to the shorter or Hebrew reckoning, the patriarch Shem, living for 502 years after the Flood, would have been contemporary with Abram for 210 years (or at least for 150), and that the time specified could hardly have been sufficient for the spread of population and the growth of kingdoms, e.g. that of Egypt. The longer computation, therefore, as adopted by Dr. Hales, seems the more consistent with the facts of the history.

(3) From Abram’s migration to the death of Joseph.—Here some computation in detail is necessary. Abram, being 100 years old at the birth of Isaac (Gen. xxi. 5), had at that time been in Canaan for 25 years; Isaac was 60 at the birth of Jacob (Gen. xxv. 26), and Jacob was 130 when he stood before Pharaoh (Gen. xlvii. 9). We thus reach a total of 215 years between Abram’s entrance into Canaan and Jacob’s departure. Again, Joseph was 30 years old when made governor of Egypt (Gen. xli. 46). Add to this the seven years of plenty and two of famine, and we find Joseph to have been 39 when his father was 130; so that his death, at the age of 110 (Gen. i. 26), would be 71 years after, i.e. 286 years after Abram’s migration. This gives, according to Usher, A.M. 2369, according to Hales, A.M. 2619.

(4) From the Death of Joseph to the Exodus.—This period is the most difficult of all to determine accurately from the Scripture data. The Apostle Paul, indeed, seems to throw light upon it in Gal. iii. 17, where the interval between the call of Abraham and the giving of the Law is set down as “430 years.” But it is uncertain whether he specified this date on his own inspired authority, or simply adopted the current computation, according to the LXX. version of Exod. ii. 40 (where the words in italics are an addition to the Hebrew text): “Now the sojourning of the children of Israel and their fathers, who dwelt in Egypt and in Canaan, was four hundred and thirty years.” According to the Hebrew (and English authorised) text of this passage, the time seems limited to the residence in Egypt. Compare also Gen. xv. 13; Acts vii. 6 where the round number 400 years appears to be assigned to the period of oppression.* The genealogies, however, seem to forbid the hypothesis of so long a sojourn in Egypt; and a possibly decisive clue to the clearing of this perplexed period is the statement that land was brought out of Egypt “in the fourth generation” (Gen. xv. 16). Moses, who appears to have been the great grandson of Levi (Exod. vi. 16–29), being 80 years old at the Exodus. Usher and Hales adopt the reckoning of St. Paul, and adding 430 years to the date of Abram’s migration, bring out that of the Exodus as A.M. 2515 and 2703 respectively. This gives 144 years as the time from the death of Joseph to the departure from Egypt.

II. In proceeding to investigate the chronology of the period after the Exodus, we for the first time are aided by an important synchronism with secular history:

(1) This was, it is true, many generations subsequent to the settlement of Israel in Canaan; but it enables us to aid of Scripture data to trace backward with some certainty. This earliest point of contact between Bible history and the annals of the nations is given us by an inscription in the palace-temple of Karnak, relating to the exploits of Sheshonk, or Sesonk, king of Egypt, the Shishak of Scripture. The hieroglyphic represents, among other conquests, the subjugation of the kingdom of Judah, and bears the date of the 21st year of Sheshonk’s reign. The Greek accordingly, of which we read in 1 Kings xiv. 25, may be assigned to the 20th year of that king, who is chronised therefore with the 5th year of Rehoboam. Now the Egyptian data† enable us to place the accession of Shishak approximately a few years later than 1000 B.C.—probably, according to the most exact chronologers, six or seven years later, or 993—in which case the invasion of Judah must be assigned to about A.M. 2500.

(2) This, calculating backwards, gives the following series:—

- Accession of Rehoboam, 5 years earlier . . . 2495
- “ of Solomon, 40 years earlier (1 Kings ii. 42) . . . 2455
- “ of David, 40½ years earlier (2 Sam. v. 5) . . . 2415
- “ of Saul, 40 years earlier (Acts xiii. 22) . . . 2375

(3) For the period between the Exodus and the accession of Saul, the Scripture data are apparently irreconcilable. These are—

- a. The explicit statement (1 Kings vi. 1) that the

* Adam, Seth, Enos, Cainan, Mahalaleel, Enoch.
† Arphaxad, Salah, Eber, Peleg, Reu, Serug.
‡ This may be vindicated from Gen. xi. 26, by supposing Abram the youngest of the three, mentioned first because he was greatest.

* It is possible, however, to refer this number to the date of the statement of the verse.
† See Brugsch’s Histoire de l’Egypte, etc.; Bawlin’s Antiquities of Egypt; and Smith’s Dictionary of the Bible, etc.

a trans-Jordanic territory, i.e. since the close of the years' wandering.

d. The successive periods of oppression and deliverance specified in the Book of Judges, amounting to 40 years,* or with the judgeship of Eli to 410. If to this be added the period of Joshua and his immediate successors, the reckoning is approximately made out.

e. The genealogies, as of David and several others, which cover the interval between the conquest of Canaan and the days of Saul.

On these it may be remarked, that a is a definite historical statement, which can scarcely be said of any of the rest. The reading of b is doubtful, and is in fact rejected by Lechmann, as well as Tischendorf (in its last edition), on the authority of the earliest MSS., which by a transposition supply the 450 years to the period between the birth of Isaac and the occupation of Canaan. In d the recurrence of the number 40 (as to 39 and 80) suggests a want of literal exactness; sides which, it is more than probable that some of the oppressions and judgeships were contemporaneous different parts of the land. The computation of phthah, c, if strictly taken, disagrees with all the other reckonings, and is probably only a rough estimate. But the genealogies in e seem decisive in their affirmation of a, being utterly inconsistent with any other reckoning.† With much confidence, therefore, I revert to 1 Kings vi. 1 as the basis of calculation, the assumption that the number 490 is a mistake of the scribe being as needless as it is unsupported. According to Josephus, the number of years is 592.

Reckoning back then 490 years from the fourth year of Solomon, or a.c. 1014, we should have the Exodus \pm 1494; the entrance on Canaan a.c. 1454, and from that time to the accession of Saul, a.c. 1099, there would be 355 years to account for, including (1) the remainder of Joshua's life (25 years according to Josephus); (2) the days of the elders who "overlived Joshua" (generally set down at 10–20 years); (3) oppressions by the Philistines and deliverances by the Judges; (4) Eli's judgeship of 40 years; (5) the judgeship of Samuel (more or less than 20 years, 1 Sam. vii. 2, but how long is not stated). The dates covering this period, as given in the Table, embody the most probable conjectures, as supported by minute indications, which it would occupy too much time to specify in detail.

4) The discrepancies between the different systems come slightly as the history advances, and when we reach the period of the kings of Israel and Judah, the course is comparatively easy. Of both kingdoms the chronological annals are carefully furnished by the scriptural writers; but it will be found that the sum of the years in the northern kingdom falls short of that in the southern by 19 years, † a discrepancy which is met, however by supposing an interregnum twice in the history of Israel; the first time after the reign of Jeroboam II., the second after that of Pekah; or else by adding 10 years to the reign of the former monarch, and 9 to that of the latter.

5) The synchronisms in this period are established by the comparison of the sacred records with the dates given in the "Canon of Kings" preserved in the works of Ptolemy, the mathematician and astronomer (2nd century A.D.), who computes from the "era of Nabonassar," a.c. 747; as also with the monumental inscrip-

See Judges iii. 8, 11, 14, 30; iv. 3; v. 31; vi. 1; viii. 29; ix. 22; 1 S. 5; xii. 6, 9, 11, 14; xv. 30; xvi. 12; 1 Sam. iv. 18.

See on this point Introduction to Judges in Speaker's Commentary, though the period there proposed seems too short.

The reasons, such as they are, for taking the phrase (in the 19th year, &c.) as an interpolation, may be seen in the Speaker's Commentary, supplementary note on 1 Kings vi.

An ingenious attempt has been made to reconcile all the calculations by interpreting the "coming out of the land of Egypt" of the settlement of Israel peacefully in Canaan. Josh. vi. (Westcott Conder, C.E., in Cassell's Biblical Dictionary, i. 311). The phrase, however, will hardly admit of such a turning.

The numbers are, in Judah from Rehoboam until the 8th year of Hezekiah, 329 years; in Israel, from Jeroboam to the fall of Samaria in that year, 240 years. But it must be noted that in many of the incomplete years are given as complete. The dates in the Table mostly correspond with those of Canon Rawlinson's c. Hist.

firmation of the sacred records.

Thus, the date assigned to Zerob (Osorkon II.) on the Egyptian monuments corresponds with that of Asa's reign (2 Chron. xiv. 9); while the death of Shalmaneser and the accession of Sargon the usurper (Isa. xx. 1) nearly correspond in the Assyrian records with the downfall of Samaria* in the Bible history. A considerable difficulty is then encountered in the adjustment of the Ninevite and Jewish histories during the contemporaneous reigns of Sennacherib and Hezekiah; and this is perhaps hardly yet settled; the main facts, however, as detailed in Scripture, being abundantly confirmed. Two points of further contact between the Jewish and Gentile world are in the battle between Josiah and Necho, son of Psammetichus king of Egypt, in which the Jewish monarch was slain, and in the destruction of Jerusalem by Nebuchadnezzar. The dates of these events are well ascertained from independent sources, Biblical and secular. In fact, from the rise of the Babylonian empire onwards there is practically no difference between chronologists. Usher places the downfall of Jerusalem in a.c. 586; Hales, a.c. 588. The dates of Cyrus, of Darius, of Xerxes (the Ahasuerus of Esther), and of Artaxerxes Longimanus (Xerxes vii.), are all determined with equal clearness from Greek and other authorities; and here the Old Testament history ceases.

III. The chronology of the New Testament is associated with that of the early Roman empire, and may be accurately determined, almost from year to year. The "Harmony of the Gospels" has naturally enlisted much thought and research for its elucidation; and although certainty is unattainable, the labours of Gresswell, Dr. Robinson, Tischendorf (in his Synopsis Evangelica), with a host of others, have brought out valuable, and in the main concurrent, results. A main question is that of the feast referred to in John v. 1, which, with the majority of critics, we take to be the Passover. The dates in the Acts are chiefly determined by the time of Herod Agrippa's death, a.d. 44; with the annals of the Roman emperors and procurators.

IV. It only remains to note the relation between the two eras, a.m. and a.c. In the earlier part of the Table it will be seen that the date of the creation is placed by Usher at 4004 a.c.; by Hales at 5411. The former reckoning makes exactly 4007 years between the Creation and the birth of Christ (4 a.c.), the Christian era, as adopted in the sixth century from Dionysius Exiguus, a Roman abbot, having been placed, as it is now generally agreed, four years too late. Partly perhaps the Jewish notion that the world is to last through 6000 years of conflict and 1000 of peace, these millenniums corresponding with the six days and the sabbath of creation, has led to an arrangement so suspiciously symmetrical; the advent of the Saviour thus coinciding with the dawn of the "fifth day" of the world's history. The estimate of Dr. Hales rests on no such a priori ground, but is taken simply from the comparison of dates. Perhaps the question is one that cannot be even approximately determined. If, however, we take the LXX. reckoning (in the main, as adopted by Dr. Hales) of 5768 years from the Creation to the Exodus, while by another computation we have shown that the Exodus probably took place 1494 years a.c., we have 5275 years from the Creation to the Christian era; and this is as near to a positive determination as we can arrive. De Vignoles, in the preface to his Chronology of Sacred History, asserts that he collected upwards of two hundred different calculations, the shortest of which reckons only 3483 years between the creation of the world and the commencement of the vulgar era, and the longest 6984.†

* It is observable (2 Kings xviii. 9, 10) that Shalmaneser came up against Syria, and at the end of three years "they (the Assyrians) took it." It would seem as though Shalmaneser were in some way removed before the final capture of the city. His death and the accession of Sargon is an explanation all the more remarkable, as the name of the latter is not given in the history. See Rawlinson's Ancient Monarchies, Vol. II. pp. 29, 30.

AN HISTORICAL EPITOME OF THE HOLY BIBLE;

WITH THE CHIEF EVENTS OF THE PERIOD BETWEEN THE TESTAMENTS.

"Believers in Christ are the true Israel; the Church of Christ is only a continuance of the plan according to which God called Abraham and separated his descendants to be His peculiar People."—SPEAKER'S COMMENTARY.

NOTE.—On the Chronology, see Dr. Green's art. Bases of Biblical Chronology.

PART I.—OLD TESTAMENT.

Dates in A. V. margin (Usher).	Genesis	The Creation and Fall of Man.
	i.—ii. 3.	THE CREATION. —A history of the stages in the earth's development, and of its progressive adaptation to become the habitation of mankind, concluding with an explanation of the origin of the Sabbath. Days (? periods or stages) of Creation, viz. 1. Light and darkness: day and night.—2. The 'firmament' (see Glossary) or atmosphere.—3. Water and land: vegetation.—4. The 'heavenly bodies' and their order.—5. Animal life, in water and air: Fishes and Fowls.—6. Animal life on land—from insects to Man in God's 'own image' having dominion over created life.—7. God rests from his creative work. [Hence Heb. 'Sabbath': cp. Heb. iv. 9, 'a rest', Gk. 'a Sabbath-rest'.]—A second history, dealing specially with the origin of Man. The animals affording no suitable companion, Woman is formed to be his 'help.' ('Meet for him,' i.e. corresponding, adapted to him.) THE FALL. —Adam and Eve, expelled from Paradise, are doomed with their descendants to live by toil, and to suffer pain and death, but are promised ultimate redemption through a descendant of Eve.
	ii. 4—25.	The World Peopled. —Line of the 'Promised Seed' till the Flood (Luke iii. 36—38). Birth of (1) Cain, (2) Abel.—Abel's sacrifice is accepted and Cain's rejected (see Heb. xi. 4; 1 John iii. 12). Cain, through envy, murders Abel. The curse on the first murderer. The Origin of Civilization and different arts. The Generations of Adam, i.e. the account of Adam and his descendantal.—Birth of Seth, Abel's successor, and heir to the Promise. The Sethites—contrasted with the worldly Cainites. Seth's direct descendants, viz. Enos; Canaan; Mahalaleel; Jared; Enoch; Methuselah; Lamech: Noah.
4008. 3875. 3874.	iv. 1, 2. 5—10. 17—24. 25, 26.	The public worship of a Covenant-God (Heb. Jehovah) begins among the Sethites. Adam dies, aged 930 years. Enoch, whose life 'pleased God,' is taken up to God (Heb. xi. 5; Jude 14). Noah, son of Lamech, the future father of the world renewed after the flood, is born Great and increasing corruption of mankind—asccribed to inter-marriages of the 'sons of God' with the 'daughters of men.'
3769. 3074. 3017. 2948.	iv. 26. v. 5. 23, 24. 28—29. vi. 1—8.	The Generations of Noah. —God commissions Noah, alone found faithful, to preach repentance and to build the ark (Heb. xi. 7; 2 Pet. ii. 5), during a respite of 120 years before the flood (1 Pet. iii. 20). Meanwhile, i.e. after his 600th year, Noah's 3 sons are born, viz. Shem, Ham, and Japheth. Birth of Shem, the ancestor of Abraham, and through him of the Promised Seed. Methuselah dies, aged 969.—Noah enters the ark in his 600th year, with his wife, his three sons and their wives, and with every species of living creature by sevens or pairs. The flood destroys mankind, except the eight persons preserved in the ark (1 Pet. iii. 20).
2469.	9—22.	The World re-Peopled. —The 'Promised Seed' from Noah to Abram 'the Hebrew.'
2448. 2349.	v. 32. 26, 27. vii. 1—viii. 12.	The flood subsides; Noah, &c. leave the ark. Noah offers in thanksgiving a burnt-offering, which God accepts. God enters into a covenant with promises (attested by the rainbow as a sign or seal) with Noah as the representative of surviving humanity, giving
2348.	viii. 13—22. ix. 1—7. 8—17.

B.C.	Genesis	marking dominion over the animal creation and permitting them to use animals as food, but He forbids them to eat blood, and commands them to respect human life. He promises never again to destroy the earth by water (Is. liv. 9; 2 Pet. iii. 6, 7).
2347.	ix. 20-27.	Noah blesses Shem and Japheth for filial conduct; but curses Canaan, 4th son of Ham and ancestor of the Canaanites. [Ham's evil disposition, transmitted to the Canaanites, explains their disposition and almost total destruction by Israel, cp. ch. xv. 16-21, &c.]
	x.	The Generations of the sons of Noah. —[See the 'Origin of Nations' and Sayce's art. Etiology . The historian deals with the origin of the nations involved in the Armenian plateau, watershed of W. Asia, and later from the valley of the Euphrates and Tigris.]
2346.	xi. 10-26.	The Generations of Shem, i.e. Shem's descendants in the line of the Promised Seed, viz. Arphaxad (born two years after the flood); Salah; Eber; Peleg, in whose days the earth 'was divided'; [?] = mankind dispersed from Babel; Keturah; Nahor; and Terah father of Abram.
2318.	x. 8-12.	Nimrod founds the Assyrian, the first recorded monarchy, in the rich plain of Shinar [between the rivers Tigris and Euphrates, the later Padan Aram, or Aram: i.e. highland Naharaim (i.e. of two rivers), Gk. Mesopotamia]. Surviving monuments suggest that Nimrod's prowess as a destroyer of wild beasts was connected with his elevation to lead men and found a kingdom around the tetrapolis of Babel, Erech, Accad, and Calneh, and later of Nineveh, Rehoboth, Calah, and Resen to the N. in Assyria.]
2247.	xi. 1-9.	Babel is built (the later Babylon: 'Babel,' in Assyrian, means 'Gate of God'), as if to concentrate mankind. A confusion of language disperses the builders.
2188.	x. 13.	Mizraim (pl.), son of Ham, gives his name to the kingdoms of Upper and Lower Egypt [still 'Misr' in Arabic: 'the land of Ham,' Ps. cv. 23, 27].
2056-1990.	xi. 27-29.	The Generations of Terah. —In Ur of the Chaldees, Terah's sons Nahor, Haran, and Abram (1096) are born; Nahor marries Haran's daughter Milcah and has issue. Haran begets Lot and dies. Sarai, Abram's half-sister (ch. xx. 12) and future wife, is born, B.C. 1966.—Noah dies, aged 950 years, B.C. 1998 (ch. ix. 28, 29).
1923.	31.	The Migration of Terah. —Terah (sth from Shem), with Abram and Sarai, and with Lot, remove from Ur to Haran (Charran, Charran) in Mesopotamia, 'the city of Nahor,' Gen. xxiv. 10 & xxvii. 43. Terah, aged 206, dies in Haran.
1921.	32.	The Patriarchs.—The Covenant Family ('The God of Abram, Isaac, and Jacob').— Call of Abram (cp. Acts vii. 2-16; Ps. cv. 5-23).— The Promises.
	xii. 1-3.	The first of the Promises is made to Abram, viz. that he should be the father of a great nation, and the medium of a world-wide blessing. God bids Abram leave Haran and his kinsfolk [?] to preserve the 'Promised Seed' from idolatrous influences, 'strange gods,' Josh. xxiv. 2, 15].
	4-8.	The Migrations of Abram. —Abram, aged 75 years, with Sarai and Lot, leaves Haran, and crossing the R. Euphrates ('the Hebrew' may mean the Crosser) with his clan (A.V. house) and stock, adopts a nomad life. In faith, he wanders southward; at length, in Canaan, when encompassed by the Oak (A.V. plain; of Moreh (Shechem), he receives the second Promise, viz. that his seed should inherit Canaan. Abram believes, erects a memorial altar, and moves near to Bethel (see Acts vii. 4; Heb. xi. 8, 9).
1920.	10-20.	Famine in Canaan. Abram enters Egypt. Pharaoh takes Sarai, who passed as Abram's sister, into his harem (cp. Esth. ii. 3, 12), but surrenders her when undeceived.
		NOTE.—The 400 years of the sojourning of the children of Israel in Egypt' dates hence. See Ex. xii. 40; Gal. iii. 17.
1918.	xiii. 1-12.	Abram and Lot return into Canaan, to Bethel. Their stock exceeding the pasture and water-supply (cp. Num. xxii. 3, 4), Abram magnanimously offers Lot the choice of country: Lot selfishly and recklessly, chooses the tropical and well-watered valley of the infamous Pentapolis of the Plain of the Dead Sea, and settles in Sodom.
1917.	10.	Abram receives the third Promise—an emphatic repetition and enlargement of the two former. He encamps by the Oak (A.V. plain) of Mamre, near Kirjath-arba (Hebron).
1913.	xiv.	Lot, captured in Sodom by Chedorlaomer, is rescued at Laish (Dan) by Abram and his allies, Aner, Eshcol, and Mamre. Melchisedek (? a faithful Canaanite patriarch, cp. Job, Jethro, &c.) meets Abram (see Heb. vii. 1-4). Lot returns to Sodom.
	xv.	Abram, lamenting his childlessness, receives the fourth Promise, viz. of a son whose seed, numberless as the stars, shall inherit Canaan [from Egypt to the R. Euphrates, fulfilled under Solomon]. Adopting as a sign or pledge the customary covenant-sacrifice, God also reveals the intervening 400 years of exile from Canaan and of bondage in Egypt, and the return of Abraham's seed as a great and wealthy nation into the land of Promise in the fourth generation, when the cup of Canaanite iniquity should be full. Abram believes (see Rom. iv. 3)—but Sarai gives to Abram Hagar her handmaid [whom child would reckon as Sarai's, ch. xix. 3, &c.]. Next year, Hagar bears Ishmael, whose even Abram regards as the promised heir (ch. xvii. 18).
1911.	xvi. 1-3.	In Abram's 99th year God makes an 'everlasting covenant' with Abram and his seed, ordaining circumcision as its perpetual national sign. God confirms the Promises and changes significantly the names of Abram and Sarai to Abraham and Sarah. God promises Sarah a son, Isaac, to be heir to the new 'everlasting covenant'; and reveals Ishmael's future. Abraham immediately adopts circumcision.
1910.	15, 16.	Abraham (still at Mamre) entertains three angels unawares, who repeat to him and Sarah the Promise of a son. God reveals the doom of the five cities of the plain; Abraham intercedes for Sodom (see Heb. xiii. 2).
1898.	xvii.	Two angels urge Lot to flee from Sodom. Lot permitted to intercede for Bela, i.e. Zoar, escapes thither. The other four cities are destroyed. Lot's wife perishes. Lot and his two daughters leaving Zoar dwell in the mountains (see Luke xvii. 29; 2 Pet. ii. 6-8; Jude 7), the future home of Moab and Ammon, Lot's descendants by his two daughters [and so kinsmen and future neighbours, but generally foes, of Abraham's seed].
	xviii.	Abraham migrating S. sojourns in Gerar; Abimelech the Philistine king acts as Pharaoh B.C. 1920 in respect of Sarah.
	xix. 1-30.	Birth and circumcision of Isaac in Abraham's 100th year.
1897.	xvi. 1-7.	Ishmael and Hagar are sent away. Ishmael settles in the Wilderness of Paran and marries an Egyptian. Abraham settles at Beersheba.
1892.	8-21.	Abraham's faith and obedience, being tested by the command to sacrifice Isaac, is rewarded by a confirmation of the Promises. Abraham still at Beersheba.
1891.	22-34.	Sarah dies in Kirjath-arba (Hebron), aged 127, and is buried in the Cave of Machpelah, E. of Mamre, Abraham's sole possession in Canaan.
1872.	xxii.	Abraham [?] to keep the heir of the Promises in Canaan, yet to protect him from local idolatrous influences) obtains a wife for Isaac of his own kindred from Haran, viz. Rebekah, daughter of Bethuel, the Aramean (A.V. Syrian) of Padan Aram, Nahor's son.

HISTORICAL EPITOME OF THE HOLY BIBLE.

R.C. 1857.	Genesis xxv. 19.	The Generations of Isaac —Esau and Jacob, twins, are born to Isaac in the Negeb (Beer-lahai roi, ch. xxiv. 62 & vi. 14). Before their birth, God reveals that 'the elder (nation) shall serve the younger' (see Rom. ix. 10—12).
1853.	1—6. 19—19.	Abraham marrying Keturah becomes the ancestor of six Arabian and Midianite tribes on the S.R. frontiers of the Promised Land. Ishmael's descendants (Nebaioth, Kedar, Teman, &c.) occupy the Arabian wilderness, between Egypt and the R. Euphrates, A.C. 1850.
1822. 1806.	7—10. 29—34.	Abraham dies, aged 175; Isaac and Ishmael bury him in the cave of Machpelah. Esau recklessly sells his birthright (with its temporal and spiritual privileges). See Heb. xii. 16, 17.
1804.	xxvi. 1—31.	A second famine in Canaan. Isaac migrates into Gerar, but is forbidden to enter Egypt; the Promises are confirmed to him on his remaining in Canaan. Isaac settles and cultivates land in Gerar. His growing wealth provoking jealousy, he moves S. to Beersheba, where the Abimelech (1806) makes a treaty with him, and God confirms again the Promise. But here Esau, aged 40, profanely marries two native Hittite wives.
1796. 1780.	34, 35. xxvii. 1—45.	In about Isaac's 180th year, Rebekah induces Jacob to supplant Esau by beguiling Isaac into making him the heir of the full covenant-blessing of Abraham. Fearing lest Esau kill Jacob, but on the pretext that Jacob also might marry a Canaanite, Rebekah induces Isaac to send Jacob into Padan-Aram to seek a daughter of his uncle Laban, in marriage, and to confirm consciously the stolen blessing. God assures to Jacob, asleep by the wayside, the Promises made to Abraham, and confirmed to Isaac. Jacob vows on his safe return to commemorate (1732) the dream, and God's protection at the spot, which he names Bethel (God's house).
1753. 1749 1745.	xxix. 36. xxx. 22—24.	Jacob loves Laban's younger daughter Rachel, and serves him seven years for her. Laban substitutes the elder, Leah, but gives Rachel to Jacob for a second seven years of service. Leah bears her third son Judah, the destined ancestor of David and the Promised Seed. Rachel at length bears Joseph. Jacob, obliged to provide for his family (viz. Reuben, Simeon, Levi, Judah (Leah's sons), born A.C. 1753—42; God, Asher (Zilpah's sons—Leah's), born A.C. 1749—8; Dan, Nephthali (Bilhah's sons—Rachel's), born A.C. 1748—7; Issachar, Zebulun, Dinah (Leah's children), born A.C. 1747—6; and Joseph), consents to a fresh compact with Laban. Laban's sons grudge Jacob's great prosperity.
1730.	25—43. xxxi. 1—2. 3—55.	After 20 years' service, God bids Jacob return to Canaan, and promises His protection. Jacob escapes. Laban overtakes him at Galeed (Gilead) and makes a treaty with him. Jacob, again encouraged at Mahanaim (two hosts) and at Peniel (face of God), prays for deliverance from Esau. At Peniel he is named ISAAC (prince of God). He is reconciled to Esau, who abandons Canaan to Jacob, and returns to Mt. Seir (= ancestor of the Hittites, or see Revelations , ch. xxi. 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48, 49, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60, 61, 62, 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 71, 72, 73, 74, 75, 76, 77, 78, 79, 80, 81, 82, 83, 84, 85, 86, 87, 88, 89, 90, 91, 92, 93, 94, 95, 96, 97, 98, 99, 100).
1732.	18—20. xxxi. xxxv. 1—8.	In Canaan, Jacob buys land at Shechem near Shechem (cp. Josh. xxiv. 32), erects an altar El-Elohe-Israel (God the God of Israel), and settles. Simeon & Levi avenge Dinah's dishonour on the Hivite chiefs Hamor and Shechem. God bids Jacob remove to Bethel, where, after solemnly putting away the Aramean idols of his household, Jacob builds an altar. God confirms (1760) the Promises to him and his seed. As Jacob migrates S. towards Ephrath (Bethlehem, Mic. v. 2), Rachel dies in bearing Benjamin. Jacob settles near Isaac at Mamre (Kirjath-arba, later Hebron). Esau and Jacob bury Isaac there in his 180th year.
1716.	21; 27—29. xxxvi. xxxvii. 2—36. xxxix.—xl. xli.	The Generation of Esau .—Account of chiefs and kings of Edom. The Generations of Jacob .—Joseph, sold into slavery in Egypt (see 17—30) by his jealous half brethren, becomes steward to Potiphar, commander of Pharaoh's bodyguard, but is long imprisoned on a false accusation. Interpreting Pharaoh's dream he is released and made viceroy of Egypt to provide for the foretold 7 years of famine.
1712-11. 1707. 1706.	50—52. xli.—xlii. xlii. 1—15.	Joseph's wife, daughter of the priest of On (Heliopolis), bears Manasseh and Ephraim. During the famine, Joseph's ten brethren fetch corn from Egypt. (In their second visit they bring Benjamin, and Joseph discloses his identity and God's purpose in sending him beforehand to preserve Jacob's family (and so to prepare for the sojourn and development of a Hebrew nation in Egypt as foretold to Abraham). Jacob hesitates to accept Pharaoh's invitation, but moves from Hebron to Isaac's sanctuary at Beer-sheba: there God encourages him (1804) to leave Canaan and enter Egypt by a vision and promise—that of the restoration of his seed thence to Canaan as a great nation and ch. xv. 13—14). Jacob with seventy sons and grandsons enters Egypt in his 130th year: Pharaoh settles them in the pasture-land of Goshen on the N.E. frontier.
1702—1.	8—27. xlii. 28—xlii. 12. 13—26.	Joseph acquires for Pharaoh all the money, cattle, and land (the priests' excepted); of the Egyptians.
1689.	xlviii. xlix. 10.	Jacob adopts Ephraim and Manasseh, prophetically preferring the younger, and fore-shadows in blessings pronounced on his twelve sons the character and fortunes of the tribes of Israel. He foretells the descent of the Promised Seed from Judah (for the genealogy through Pharez son of Judah and Tamar, see ch. xxxviii. 6—30; Ruth iv. 18—22; Matt. i. 3—16). Jacob dies, aged 147. His sons bury him in the cave of Machpelah with great pomp and mourning. Joseph reassures his brethren.
1635.	23—26. Exodus i. 8—22.	Joseph pledges them to carry his body also into Canaan when God should fulfil the Promise quoted by Jacob in ch. xlviii. 21, and dies, aged 110 years.
1571.	ii. 1—10.	Towards the fulness of time (see Acts vii. 17) a new Pharaoh (? Rameses II.) tries vainly to check the increase of Jacob's descendants by (1) excessive levies for forced labour on public works, (2) by ordering (a) the destruction, (b) the exposure of all Hebrew male infants.
1531.	11—22.	Moses, younger brother of Aaron and Miriam (Num. 26, 29), a great-grandson of Levi (ch. 6, 16—21), is born and exposed, but is saved and adopted by Pharaoh's daughter. Educated in Pharaoh's family in all the wisdom of the most civilized nation of the age, Moses becomes famous, but prefers to share his people's fortunes (see Acts vii. 29—32; Heb. xi. 23). Moses, aged 40, enquires into the oppression of his people. He slays an Egyptian and takes refuge with Beuel or Jethro, the patriarchal priest-prince of Midian, marrying his daughter Zipporah, who bears a son Gershom (see Acts vii. 23—29; Heb. xi. 24—27).
1491.	iii. iv. 1—17.	The Hebrew Nation .— The LORD, the God of the Hebrews (Jehovah)— The Exodus . God reveals Himself to Moses in Mount Horeb from a burning bush as the God revealed to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, now purposing to deliver His people, and to transplant them into Canaan (1913). God commissions Moses to conduct the Exodus, promising (as a pledge or earnest) that Israel shall leave Egypt and worship Him in that range. God bids Moses deliver this message to the assembled elders of Israel, further encouraging him with a new revelation of Himself as JEHOVAH (the Eternal Self-existent, A.V. the Lord), and with signs and wonders of his mission to be repeated before Pharaoh. Moses hesitates, and Aaron is assigned to be his spokesman (see Acts vii. 30—31).
	18—31. v.	Moses returns to Egypt: Gershom is circumcised, and Aaron meets Moses in Horeb. The elders joyfully accept God's message; but when Pharaoh—scorning the God of the Hebrews and His demand that His people should go three days' journey out of Egypt (A.C.

Though smitten by blood, (2) Frogs, (3) Lice, or Gnats (the magicians' imitations cease), (4) Flies, (5) Murdains, (6) Boils (the magicians suffer also and retire), (7) Hail, (8) Locusts, (9) Darkness, (10) and the threatened Death of the firstborn—Pharaoh refuses to let Israel go (see Pa. lxxviii. 43—51; ex. 25—30).
xii. 1—28, 43—49.	The Passover is instituted for 14th Abib, henceforward the first month (May 4), to commemorate the sparing of Israel's firstborn and the Deliverance from Egypt (see Heb. xi. 28).
xiii. 1—16.	—On the 15th at midnight (plague 10) all the firstborn of the Egyptians and their cattle die.
xiii. 29—41.	Urged, and even paid by Pharaoh and the Egyptians, the Hebrews start (bearing Joseph's bones) in the 430th year after Abram's visit to Egypt (see Gen. xii. 10), viz., 600,000 adult males, besides children and a mixed multitude (cp. ch. xxxviii. 26). They march (1) from Rameses to Succoth, (2) to Etham, avoiding the direct coast route N.E. to Canaan, through warlike Philistia; (3) southwards to Pi-hahiroth, along the wilderness W. of the Red Sea. The Shechinah leads and shrouds them and covers their night march through the Red Sea, miraculously divided. On the Arabian shore, the nation gives thanks for its deliverance from Egypt and Pharaoh's pursuit (see Pa. cvi. 11, 12; Heb. xi. 29).
xiv.	The Hebrews march B. along the E. shore of the Sinaitic Peninsula through the wilderness of Shur (three days) to the bitter wells at Marah, which Moses cures, pacifying the people; thence inland to Elim and again to the Red Sea, reaching the wilderness of Sin, between Elim and Sinal, on the 16th of the second month after the Exodus.
xv. 1—21.	Lacking food, and recalling the plenty of Egypt, they murmur against Moses and Aaron. God provides quails and a supply of manna daily (the Sabbath excepted) during 40 years (i.e. until a second generation having crossed Jordan eats Canaanite corn in Gilgal). On the commemorative pot of manna, see Neh. ix. 16; Pa. lxxviii. 23—25; John vi. 31—49.
Num. xxxiii. 8.	Encamping for a week here and at Dophkah and at Alush (Num. 33. 12—14), they reach Rephidim, where Moses miraculously provides water, naming the spot 'Massah' and 'Meribah' ('temptation' and 'chiding'). See Pa. lxxxi. 7.
Exod. xv. 27.	The Amalekites in possession of the scattered pastures of the Peninsula, attack Israel. Joshua directs the defence, while Moses prays—the altar Jehovah-Nissi and Aaron's sentence of extermination on Amalek (executed by Saul, Israel's first king, see Deut. xxv. 17—19; 1 Sam. xv.) commemorate the victory.
xvi. 1.	Jethro visits Moses, bringing Zipporah and her two sons, and holds a covenant-sacrifice and feast with him. On Jethro's advice Moses delegates his judicial authority in minor causes to the tribal heads of fifties, hundreds, and thousands.
xvii. 1—7.
8—16.

xix.	The Covenant Nation.—The Law given at Mount Sinai.
xx. 1—17.	In the third month, Israel encamps 'before the Mount' in the wilderness of Sinal. God offers through Moses a Covenant (conditioned on obedience), and on the 3rd day delivers directly to the people the Ten Commandments, having descended in fire upon Mount Sinal amid clouds, thunder, lightning, and earthquake (see Heb. xii. 18—21).
18—21.	Moses, as intermediary between the terrified people and God, receives further ordinances for the regulation of civil life and elementary religious observances called (ch. xiv. 7) 'The Book of the Covenant,' and executes with the people the formalities of the New Covenant. (See Heb. ix. 17—20.) Moses, Aaron, Nadab and Abihu, and 70 elders, are permitted to see God's glory and to hold the Covenant feast ('eat and drink') in the mountain.
xx. 22—xxiii. 19.	Moses summoned into the mountain receives the tables of Stone, the Law, and other details of the Theocratic constitution, and after six days spent there with Joshua, is called up into the cloud alone. During 40 days' absence, Moses is instructed as to (1) making a Tent of Meeting (see ch. xxv. 22; xxix. 42, 43; and xxxiii. 7—11) between God and the people (A.V. tabernacle of the congregation) and its furniture; (2) the Aaronic priesthood; (3) the Services, ritual, and materials used; finally Moses receives the two Tables of the Decalogue inscribed by God (see 2 Cor. iii. 3; Heb. ix. 1—10).
xxiv. 1—11.	The people's faith failing during the withdrawal of the Shechinah and of Moses into Mount Sinal, the Covenant is forfeited by (Pa. cvi. 20) a heathenish worship of Jehovah, under the idolatrous representation of Aaron's Golden Calf.
xxiv. 12—xxxi.	God reveals to Moses this relapse and His purpose to destroy Israel, and make of Moses' seed another Covenant-nation; but Moses' intercession is accepted, and he returns (with Joshua). Seeing the festival afar, Moses in righteous indignation drops and breaks the two Tables. He destroys the calf, upbraids Aaron, and calls on the faithful to execute the faithless. The tribe of Levi responding slays 3,000 men, thus earning the privilege of the Holy Tribe to be accepted in lieu of the dedicated firstborn. Moses returns into the mount, and God accepts his intercession for the people, but sends plagues, and announces that His Angel and not He Himself would henceforward be their guide. But the people's mourning is accepted, and, at Moses' intercession (in the Mount), God promises to resume His personal leadership; and permits Moses (as visible evidence) to see His glory.
xxxii. 1—6.	God summons Moses again into the mountain with two new tables of stone. At Moses' intercession, God renews the broken Covenant between Himself and Israel, and promises to displace the Canaanites if Israel make no terms with them and generally will be faithful. During this second absence of 40 days, Moses is instructed afresh in the moral and ceremonial laws of the Covenant; and on his return, a dazzling reflection of God's glory irradiates his face, as on subsequent interviews with God in the Tent of Meeting (see 2 Cor. iii. 18—16).
7.	Moses invites contributions of materials and labour towards a Tent or Tabernacle of Meeting (described in detail to him in the mount), and aided by Bezaleel and Aholiab completes it with its furniture. On New Year's Day of the second year after the Exodus, the Aaronic priesthood is consecrated, and the Shechinah descending signifies God's acceptance of the Tabernacle—it abides thereon during Israel's wanderings. On the 14th of Abib, the Passover is kept.
30.	Nadab and Abihu, Aaron's two elder sons, offering incense with ordinary fire ('strange,' i.e. not from the altar) are miraculously destroyed.

The Shechinah rising from or settling on the Tabernacle signals the march or halt, and the Priests' silver trumpets start the tribal groups.
x. 11-28.		The chiefs of the Tribes present offerings at the Dedication of the Tabernacle at Altar. Moses, entering the Tabernacle, hears the voice of God from the 'mercy-seat' in cloud on the cover or lid of the Ark).
ix. 15-x. 8.	vii.	The March .—In the 14th month after the Exodus, the Covenant-nation leave their Canaan (the usual 11 days' journey occupy four months, Deut. i. 2; Num. x. 11-12), and encamp in the wilderness of Paran . After three days' march, discussion begins as to Taberah (burning), and many are burned miraculously. Moses interceding, the march ceases. (Henceforward, God being visibly present as their Leader, the Israelites are punished by miracle for want of faith, discontent, disobedience, &c., as rebel against Himself.) Again, at Kibroth Hattavah (the graves of lust), led by 'the miragim' (i.e. their Egyptian kindred), Israel regrets the ease and plenty of Egypt, and demands ordinary food as a change from the heavenly. Moses adduced and overruled their labours. (Contrast Ex. xviii.) Quails settle round the camp in extraordinary quantities, but a great plague follows (see Ps. lxxviii. 27-31).
35; xii. 1-15.		At Hazeroth , the Cushite (or Ethiopian) wife of Moses excites Miriam's jealousy. Aaron and Miriam claim equal prophetic authority with Moses. The Shechinah descends, God summons the three leaders (Ex. xv. 20; Micah vi. 4), but declares to Moses that Moses interceding, she is healed in seven days; the march is meanwhile suspended.
16; xiii.		After several encampments in the wilderness of Paran (i.e. the limestone plateau Tih , which rises from Sinai to the S. border of Canaan) Israel reaches Kadesh , but hesitates to enter Canaan (Deut. i. 20, 21). The people suggest the sending of twelve spies; who return after forty days to Kadesh, having searched Canaan from the wilderness of Zin (i.e. the Arabah , or valley S. of the Dead Sea) to Hebah in the W. Lebannon valley and back W. and S. by the coast and 'the South' (i.e. the Yam of Hebron, whence they bring a sample cluster of grapes (Eshcol). Caleb and Joshua, faithful, urge an immediate advance, but the other ten spies dilate on the strength of the Canaanite cities and stature of the Anakim. Doubting the promises, notwithstanding the miracles of the Exodus and the march, the people openly rebel, and purpose to return to Egypt, and would have stoned Joshua and Caleb, who protest and encourage faith. But the Shechinah descends, and God tells Moses that he will destroy Israel and send him the father of a better and mightier nation. Moses intercedes and pleads for his generation of the Exodus is condemned to wander 40 years outside the Promised Land, year for each day of the spies' absence, and to die in the wilderness; only Joshua and Caleb should enter Canaan. The ten spies die in a plague.
		The Penal Wanderings in the Wilderness Forty Years.
30-45.		At the order to march back into the wilderness, the people repent, and attempt their forbidden, to enter Canaan. The Canaanites and Amalekites rout them at Horeb . [Of the next 37 years few events are recorded, as if this generation had no power in the history. The Israelites probably had their headquarters at Kadesh or Edrei (Judg. i. 17, now Sebatia), while roaming or partly settled in the pastures of the Paran of Sinai after the manner of the Patriarchs. Apparently circumcision (Josh. v. 4-9) was neglected, the Sabbath deserted (yet see Num. xv. 32), and idolatry was practised (Ezek. xx. 10-26; Amos v. 25, 26, but see Variations ; Acts vii. 42, 43;—the Passover is mentioned Num. ix. 5—Josh. v. 10, i.e. between Sinai and Gilgal.)
1471.	xvi.	Korah, a Levite, as if jealous of the exclusive priesthood of Aaron's family, asserts religious equality of the nation. Dathan and Abiram, Reubenites, as if asserting patriarchal privileges of the tribe of the firstborn against the supremacy of Moses, join him of tyranny and oppression, and of deluding the people with false promises. He conspires with 250 tribal chieftains and protest openly against Moses and Aaron. God adopts Moses' test of 'who are His representatives' and 'who is holy', and the earth swallows up Dathan, Abiram, &c. Korah, and the 250 offering incense (as though past) are miraculously burned; yet, next day, the people accuse Moses and Aaron of murdering them. Aaron's intercession stays the consequent plague. Altar plates of Haroph censors, with Aaron's rod that budded, commemorate God's vindication of the priestly of Aaron's family (the 2nd branch of Levi).
		March of the New Generation towards Canaan.
1463.	xx. 1-13.	In the 1st month of the 40th year, the Israelites reassemble at Kadesh , where Korah is buried. Lacking water, they murmur against Moses and Aaron. Moses strikes the rock twice (Meribah) and speaks unadvisedly as if he and Aaron would wrout the manna (cp. Acts iii. 12). For assuming glory due to God only, both are sentenced to die outside the Promised Land (see Ps. cvi. 33). Moses, forbidden to attack Israel's kindred Moab, Moab, and Ammon, asks of the Edomite king a free passage (probably by pass A. Petra leading to the fords of Jericho); his refusal obliges Israel to march round the S. and E. of Edom. In the border of Edom: on Mt. Hor, in the 4th month, Aaron, aged 123, after the transfer of the High Priesthood to his son Eleazar.
1452.	xxi. 1-3.	The Canaanite king of Arad (Variations), in 'the South' (i.e. the N. of the Arabian Desert), Hormah, but is destroyed (see Judg. i. 16, 17). The Israelites discouraged by the circuit murmur and are plagued with serpents, but turned on repentance and faith, which the Brazen Serpent is a test (see 2 Kings xviii. 4; John iii. 14, 15). At Edrei , across the brook Zered into Moab, and the B. Arnon into the territory of Ben Ammi the Amorites, lately won from Moab (e. 26), and reach the plain of the Arnon where the ridge of Pisgah overlooks the plains of Moab beside Jericho opposite Jericho .

- xxii. Balak, king of Moab S. of Arnon (ch. xxi. 26), and his Midianite confederates (Josh. xii. 21), dismayed at Israel's numbers and success, hires Balaam, a famous but unscrupulous prophet of God, from Pethor in Mesopotamia, to help him to conquer and expel Israel. Covetousness outweighing God's prohibition, Balaam accompanies Balak's second mission, but is rebuked by the ass and overruled to utter God's messages only; Balaam blesses Israel from three idolatrous 'high places', and finally foretells its glorious future, the destruction of Edom, Moab, and Amalek, and the later supersession of the Semitic race by a Western power (ships from Chittim, i.e. Cyprus). See 2 Pet. ii. 15, 16; Jude 11.
- xxiv. 24. Balaam remaining among the Midianites advises the corruption of Israel through the impure worship of Baal-Peor practised by the Midianite women [as if to weaken or destroy it through the wrath of Jehovah]. The chief apostates are executed and the votaries slain or destroyed (24,000) by a plague, which Phinehas by an act of righteous zeal stops, thereby earning an everlasting priesthood. God sentences the Midianites to destruction (see Ps. cxi. 28-31).
- xxvi. The Census at Shittim.—The warriors now number 601,730; the Levite males, from a month old, 23,000. The only survivors of the census at Sinai are Joshua and Caleb.
- xxvii. 1-11. Moses is commanded to divide Canaan, assigning a territory to each tribe proportioned to its numbers in a situation decided by lot. The case of Zelophehad's daughters decides that (to keep inheritances and the tribal territory unbroken) daughters may inherit, but must marry within their tribe.
- 12-23. God bids Moses view the Promised Land from the range of Abarim or Pisgah before his death. Moses prays for another leader for Israel, and is commanded to publicly appoint and instruct Joshua, to whom God will communicate His will through the High Priest.
- xxxi. Phinehas, son of Eleazar the H.P., with 12,000 men exterminates the Midianites in a sacred war; Balaam and five chiefs perish, but no Israelites. The people spare the flocks, &c., and the women and children, but Moses destroys all the males and married women, and halves the spoil between the combatants and the rest.
- xxxii. Reuben and Gad ask to have their allotment in the newly conquered pastoral downs and forests E. of Jordan. On condition that they fully share the conquest of Canaan, Moses allots (1) from the E. Arnon to the S. slopes of Mt. Gilead to Ruben; thence (2) along Jordan to the Lake of Chinnereth (Gennesaret) to Gad; and (3) N.E. Gilead and Bashan as far as Mt. Hermon to half-Manasseh.
- xxxiv. Moses defines the bounds of Canaan and delegates its allotment to Eleazar, Joshua, and a prince of each tribe; Levi to receive 48 dispersed cities, each in a square of pasture ground (A.V. suburbs), six of the Levitical cities to afford sanctuary in cases of blood-feud for accidental homicide; he appoints Bezer in Reuben, Ramoth-Gilead in Gad, and Golan in Manasseh, as the Transjordanic Cities of Refuge (see Deut. iv. 41-43; xii. 1-10).
- Deut. In the 11th month of the 40th year Moses, aged 120, delivers three parting addresses to all Israel, his prayer to be spared to enter Canaan being denied. (1) He recapitulates the history of the present generation from its departure from Horeb (chs. i.-iii.), emphasising (ch. iv.) the Spirituality of Jehovah. (2) He reiterates—a) The Ten Commandments, expounding the lessons thence deducible as to the Israelites' duty towards their God, and urging them by the memory of the past to be faithful to Him (chs. v.-xi.); (b) The Book of the Covenant (Ex. xx. 19-xxiii. 19), expanding it and giving the Israelite a manual to guide him in his duty to his neighbour (chs. xii.-xxvi.); concluding with an injunction to inaugurate the Law publicly by a ceremony at Shechem (ch. xxvii.) and with a declaration of the consequences of faithfulness and disobedience, respectively (ch. xxviii.; cf. Ex. xxiii. 20-33 and Lev. xxvi.). (3) Finally, he charges Israel and Joshua, commits this (written) law, to the priests' custody for septennial public reading, and teaches Israel a song, as a perpetual forewarning of the consequences of disobedience.
- xxxv. Moses blesses Israel, and after viewing Canaan from Mt. Pisgah, dies, aged 120.
- xxxviii.-xxxiv. The Conquest and Allotment of Canaan.
- Joshua i. In Shittim, after the mourning for Moses (Deut. xxxiv. 8), Joshua is appointed to lead Israel across Jordan, and settle it in Canaan.
- ii.-iv. Joshua's two spies, saved at Jericho by Rahab, report the discouragement of the Canaanites. Joshua encamps by Jordan, and Israel crosses it at its fullest dryshod; memorials of the miracle are set in mid-stream and at Gilgal (ch. v. 9), the first encampment in the Land of Promise. The new generation being circumcised keeps the Passover and Feast of unleavened cakes, made of the old corn of Canaan. The manna ceases.
- v. 1-12. Siege and fall of Jericho, the key to the fords of Jordan and to the E. passes into the central highland. Rahab is saved. After a reverse, due to Achan's sacrilegious covetousness, Ai is destroyed and Israel established on the highland. The prescribed ratification and public reading of the Law (Deut. xxvii. 2-8, 11-26) take place in the vale of Shechem (Gen. xii. 6, 7 & xxiii. 19).
- v. 13-vi. League of S. Canaan.—The Gibeonite confederacy, which controls the chief W. pass (Beth-horon), craftily makes peace, and Gibeon is besieged by Adonizedes of Jerusalem, and four kings of the league. Joshua relieves Gibeon, and in the pursuit, miraculously prolonged, captures Makkedah and Libnah, and executes the five kings. In the campaign following, Joshua captures the fortified towns S. of Gibeon and Gilgal (except Jerusalem) as far as Kadesh-barnea and Gaza, i.e. he conquers (1) the highland S. of Jebus with the Anakim, (2) the steppes of the Negeb ('south') beyond, (3) the W. foot-hills ('springs' or slopes), and (4) the plain of the coast or Shephelah ('vale').
- vii. League of N. Canaan.—Joshua at L. Merom destroys Jabim and his allies, their chariots, &c., and conquers Jordan-valley and the plains of Kishon and of the sea coast to Dor.
- viii. 1-29. In a long war (? 7 years), Israel united under Joshua destroys 31 kings and 8 nations.
- 30-35. Joshua, being old, is ordered to allot to the 9 tribes W. of Jordan (Levi omitted; Joseph = 14) the conquered territory with the unconquered, viz. the Philistine and Phœnician sea coast and the Mid-Lebanon valley to the entering in of Hamath. He charges the several tribes to complete the conquest of their allotments.
- ix. Allotments to Judah and Joseph are made in Gilgal.
- x. Caleb claims and conquers the district of Hebron. The bounds and cities of Judah, of Ephraim (Gazer unconquered), and of half-Manasseh (the Canaanites of the sea coast and plain of Kishon unconquered).
- x. 1-16. League of S. Canaan.—Joshua at L. Merom destroys Jabim and his allies, their chariots, &c., and conquers Jordan-valley and the plains of Kishon and of the sea coast to Dor.
- x. 17. In a long war (? 7 years), Israel united under Joshua destroys 31 kings and 8 nations.
- x. 30-35. Joshua, being old, is ordered to allot to the 9 tribes W. of Jordan (Levi omitted; Joseph = 14) the conquered territory with the unconquered, viz. the Philistine and Phœnician sea coast and the Mid-Lebanon valley to the entering in of Hamath. He charges the several tribes to complete the conquest of their allotments.
- x. 36. Allotments to Judah and Joseph are made in Gilgal.
- x. 37. Caleb claims and conquers the district of Hebron. The bounds and cities of Judah, of Ephraim (Gazer unconquered), and of half-Manasseh (the Canaanites of the sea coast and plain of Kishon unconquered).
- x. 38. Joshua, being old, is ordered to allot to the 9 tribes W. of Jordan (Levi omitted; Joseph = 14) the conquered territory with the unconquered, viz. the Philistine and Phœnician sea coast and the Mid-Lebanon valley to the entering in of Hamath. He charges the several tribes to complete the conquest of their allotments.

PART I.—OLD TESTAMENT.

B.C. 1096. 1063.	1 Sam. xii. xiii. 2 xiii.	and the constitution is solemnly ratified at Gilgal. Samuel formally resigns his civil judgeship.
1087. 1078.	xiv. xv.	Saul forms a small standing army, the Philistines having disarmed the Hebrews. Jonathan begins a war of independence. Saul's 3 characteristic failures—(1) At Gilgal, at the outset of the war, the king offers sacrifice instead of awaiting the prophet's arrival; Samuel pronounces Saul's rejection—(2) Saul's rash curse mars Jonathan's victory and makes Israel to sin—(3) Saul neglects to fully execute God's commission against Amalek; Samuel repeats the sentence of rejection, and ceases to visit Saul.
1063.	xvi.	Samuel is inspired to anoint David, Jesse's youngest son, summoned from the sheepfold, as Saul's destined successor. David slays Goliath and wins Jonathan's friendship. David, summoned to court to soothe Saul's melancholy by his harp, wins Saul and becomes his armourbearer. By successes against the Philistines, David becomes popular at court and with the people (see 2 Sam. v. 2). Saul indulging jealousy of David attempts David's life directly and by inciting him to dangerous expeditions against the Philistines, but these involve David's marriage to Michal, Saul's daughter, and increase his renown. Finally, Saul vows his intention to kill David, but is reconciled to him by Jonathan.
1062.	xix. 1-7. 8-24	David's further successes against the Philistines. Saul attempts his life and sends emissaries to kill him at his house. Michal aids David to escape to Samuel at Naioth in Ramah, where Saul's fourfold attempt to capture David is foiled by the prophetic spirit seizing even himself.
	xx.	David seeks Jonathan's protection; the friends vow mutual fidelity and Jonathan risks his life in ascertaining Saul's real intention to kill David. David's flight. Aided at Nob by the H.P. Ahimelech, David escapes to king Achish at Gath, and thence to the Cave of Adullam, where Jesse and his family and a band of 400 warriors join him (cp. Jephthah). Marching into Moab, he places his family in safety and occupies 'the hold' (Gadite) and other warriors join him, 1 Chr. xii. 8) until the prophet Gad bids him return into Judah.
	xxi. xxii. 1-6.	David in the Forest of Hareth. Saul hearing of his return accuses Jonathan and other chief officials of conspiring with David. Doeg to clear himself implicates Ahimelech, and by Saul's orders destroys Nob, with the priests and the H.P. Ahimelech, whose son Abiathar alone escapes (with God's oracle). David relieves Keilah; but warned by Abiathar, who joins him there, escapes, now with 600 warriors, from Saul into the wilderness of Ziph, E. of Judah. Saul vainly pursues, and Jonathan meets and comforts David. The Ziphites betraying David's haunt, he escapes into the wilderness of Maon, whence Saul is recalled by a Philistine invasion.
1061.	14-28.	David moves to Engedi. Saul renews the pursuit, but desists on David sparing his life. Death of Samuel. David moves into the wilderness of Paran, and there protects the flocks and herds of Nabal, &c.; he marries Abinoam and Abigail, Nabal's widow, Saul having married Michal to Phalti of Gallim.
1060.	xxiii. 29; xxiv. xxv.	The Ziphites again betray David; Saul renewing the pursuit, David surprises the camp and again spares Saul. Saul again desists, admitting David's innocence and his own guilt. David enters the service of the Philistine king. Achish gives him Ziklag, and his band increases (1 Chr. xii. 1-7, 20-22). By crafty enterprises David secures Achish's confidence and friends in S. Judah (ch. xxx. 26-31).
1068.	xxvii.	The Philistine invasion. David and his band form Achish's bodyguard, but, through the suspicions of the Philistine chiefs, are sent back. They find Ziklag sacked by Amalekites, but recover all.
1066.	xxviii. 1, 2 xxix; xxx.	Saul, Godforsaken, consults the witch at Endor; he learns his fate and David's future. Saul and his sons fall in the battle of Mt. Gilboa; the Hebrews retreat across Jordan, and the Philistines occupy the abandoned towns.
	xxviii. 3-26. xxxi.	David mourns for Saul and Jonathan. (The song of 'The Bow,' vs. 19-27.)
	2 Sam. i. ii. 1-11.	David, instructed by Abiathar, returns into Judah to Hebron where he is selected and anointed king over his tribe. Abner makes Ish-bosheth, Saul's only surviving son, king, with Mahanaim in Gilead as his capital. Having driven back (in 6 years) the Philistines, Abner makes Ish-bosheth's kingdom co-extensive with the future kingdom of Israel, for 3 years.
1063.	ii. 12-iii. 1.	Abner makes an expedition against Judah. David's army under Joab defeats him at Gibeon. In a long war David makes steady progress. Amnon, Absalom (by a princess of Geshur), Adonijah, and 3 other sons are born to David in Hebron.
1048.	iii. 6-iv. 12.	Ish-bosheth quarrels with Abner. Abner treats with David. Joab murders Abner, whereupon Ish-bosheth is assassinated.
	v. 1-3. 4-10.	David, recognised by all Israel as the Lord's Anointed and a proved leader, is anointed king in Hebron (see 1 Chr. xii. 23-40), aged 37½ years. Joab captures the citadel of Jerusalem, henceforward called the City of David, i.e. his capital.
1047. 1043.	17-26. 11-13.	Hearing of David's accession, the Philistines invade Judah, but are twice routed in the valley of Rephaim. David overruns Philistia to Gezer. David builds a palace and assumes royal state.
1042.	vi.	David, desiring to make his capital the religious centre of the nation, transfers the Ark with great pomp from Kirjath-jearim to a new tabernacle in Jerusalem, after a detention at Obad-edom's house, due to Uzzah's irreverence and death. David is forbidden to build a temple, but receives the promise ('the sure mercies of David') of an everlasting kingdom.
1040.	vii. Ps. 80, 49; Is. 65, 3. 2 Sam. viii.	David extends his dominions by conquering the Philistines and Moab, the Syrians of Zobah and Damascus, Ammon, Edom, and Amalek (cp. Ps. xviii. 43). The spoils of gold, silver, and bronze, and like tribute from neighbouring nations, are dedicated to Jehovah.
1037-6. 1035. 1034.	ix. x. xi.	David gives Mephibosheth, Jonathan's son, sole relic of Saul's house, Saul's patrimony. David's successful war with the Ammonites and their Syrian allies. While in the 3rd campaign Joab besieges the Ammonite capital Rabbah, David lingering in Jerusalem commits adultery with Bath-sheba, procures Uriah's death, and marries her. Nathan announces David's punishment by the child's death and lifelong quarrels in his own family.
1033. 1032. 1027.	24. xiii. xiv.	David is present at the capture of Rabbah. Bath-sheba bears Solomon. The feud between Absalom and Amnon; Absalom murders Amnon (s. 6, 1630), flees to Geshur. After 3 years, Joab persuades David to recall Absalom and, after 2 years, to forgive him.
1024. 1023. 1022. 1017.	xv. 1-12. xv. 13-xvii. 20. xviii.-xx. xxiv.	Absalom conspires against David in Hebron. David retires to Mahanaim. Absalom crossing Jordan is defeated and slain. In the restoration of David, Judah forestalls the other tribes; recriminations ensue, and Sheba's rebellion, which Joab promptly suppresses. David numbers Israel; the consequent plague is stayed at Araunah's threshing-floor, which David purchases for the site of an altar.
1016.	1 Kings i. 1 Chron. xxviii.-ix.	Adonijah, David's eldest surviving son, prepares to dispute the succession with Solomon, and is supported by Joab, the H.P. Abiathar, and other chief officials. David publicly designates Solomon, as chosen by God to succeed him and to build the Temple, and transfers the revealed patterns with the accumulated materials. Solomon is re-anointed. Solomon pardons Adonijah. David charges Solomon. Death of David.
	1 Kings ii. 1-11.

HISTORICAL EPITOME OF THE HOLY BIBLE.

B.C. 1014.	1 Kings ii. 13-45.	Adonijah's conspiracy is renewed; Abiathar is deposed and exiled, Zadok becoming H.P. (see 1 Sam. ii. 36; 1 Chr. xxiv. 3). Joab is executed; Shimei also. Solomon being established on the throne, marries Pharaoh's daughter, with captured Gazar for dowry. In Gilead, where Moses' altar and tabernacle were, God bids Solomon ask a gift. Solomon asks a discerning spirit; God adds riches and honour. The two harlots' suit, & 3,000 maxims & 1,000 songs based on observation of men & nature, compiled or composed, illustrate his wisdom; his magnificent court, the extent, populousness & security of his realm, his army, courier-service, & commerce, prove his prosperity.
	iii. 1; ix. 16. iii. 5-15. iii. 16-iv. 24.
	v. vi.	By treaty with Hiram, Sidonians with 300,000 Hebrew and 153,000 Canaanite workers, all led by Solomon, prepare timber and stone in Lebanon, and in the 450th year after the Exodus the Temple begins to rise silently. In 7½ years (Solomon's 11th year) it was finished, the Sanctuary (as distinguished from its courts) consisting of 3 parts like the Tabernacle but doubled in its dimensions (see 330). At its dedication, the descending Shekinah attests God's acceptance; a national festival of 14 days follows Solomon's thanksgiving and prayer.
1004.	viii.	Solomon completes his palace, its pillared hall of state ('forest of Lebanon') and porch of judgment—Pharaoh's daughter's palace, and Jerusalem's fortifications (superintended by Jeroboam). God again appearing, encourages and warns him. Solomon conquers Hamath-Sobah. Solomon's wisdom, buildings, and magnificence around the queen of Sheba.
992.	vii.
	ix; 2 Chr. viii. 2. 1 Kings x.
	Neh. i. 7-9.	Israel's decline. The divided kingdom to the Captivities.
	1 Kings xi. 1. 4-8.	SOLOMON multiplies foreign wives, who introduce the worship of their gods, for which in his old age he builds temples on Olivet, opposite the Temple. His character now declines, till his empire, which realized Abraham's covenant (Gen. xv. 18) is forfeited. Yet for David's sake God re-grants 'one tribe' to Solomon's heir, transferring 10 to Jeroboam, an Ephraimite, by Adijah. Jeroboam escapes into Egypt (to SHISHAK) from Solomon's jealousy. Solomon's other adversaries, Hadad, prince of Edom, & Rezon, founder of the Syrian kingdom, trouble him, by God's permission, all his days. Solomon dies after a reign of 40 (39) yrs. Ecclesiastes is designed as a review of his unparalleled experience, by a later inspired writer.
984.	9-12. 29-40. 14-25.	All Israel assembles at Shechem, the patriarchal sanctuary, to crown REHOBOAM, Solomon's son by Naamah an Ammonite princess, aged 41. Jeroboam, returned from Egypt (984), heads a deputation to ask relief from the burdens of Solomon's magnificence. Rehoboam, disregarding Solomon's aged counsellors, replies despotically, & provokes ever-ready Ephraim & the nation to abjure David's dynasty (8 promises). Judah is divided, Benjamin, Simeon, & Shimon, & Judah, & the 2 tribes acquiesce, but wars occur till Jehoshaphat's reign. Rehoboam fortifies cities chiefly on the S & W. (agst. Egypt), dispersing widely therein his sons by many wives.
980.	iii. 12. xii. 2; 2 Chr. x.	JEROBOAM, elected king of the separated tribes ('all Israel'), Ephraim, makes Shechem (at later Tirzah) his capital, & fortifies Penuel E. of Jordan against Syria. Mistrusting God's promise & fearing lest religious intercourse with Jerusalem cause reunion, he expiates a worship of Jehovah under the emblem of Aaron's golden calf at the extremities of his kingdom, Bethel and Dan, utilizing the people's usage of time-honoured sanctuaries. He builds a state-temple at Bethel, replaces the Mosaic hierarchy by a priesthood from the tribes indiscriminately (Heb.), & adds a feast; but preserves generally the institutions of Moses' Law (Hos. ii. 11, &c.), & counterfeits the ritual of the Temple. God repudiates Jeroboam's dedication of his new altar at Bethel by a prophet from Judah, who foretells the desecration of altar & priesthood by Josiah of David's scorned house. Miracles on king, altar, & prophet confirm the message.
975.	Ex. xxxiii. 8. 1 Kings iii. 2. 2 Chr. xi. 14. xiii. 9. 1 Kings xiii.	The priests, Levites, & God-fearing Israelites, migrating into Judah strengthen it morally & physically for Rehoboam's first 3 years. With security, Judah's idolatry (984) becomes gross & general; it is punished by the invasion (941) of SHISHAK, who sacks Jerusalem & the Temple, & makes Rehoboam tributary. Judah repenting at Sheshak's preaching, God repents her.
	2 K. xxiii. 9, 16. 2 Chr. xi. 17. 1 K. xv. 22-26. 2 Chr. xiii. 2-12.	ABIJAH (Abijah, Chr.), Rehoboam's son by his favourite wife, Maasehah (941), repents his father's sins, but is spared for David's sake. After his appeal to Israel on Mount Gerizim, God enables him to crush Jeroboam's offensive power. He allies himself with Syria.
974.	2 Chr. xi. 17. 1 K. xv. 22-26. 2 Chr. xiii. 2-12.	Abijah tells the wife of Jeroboam the doom of his promising son, of the dynasty, & kingdom.
972.	1 K. xv. 22-26. 2 Chr. xiii. 2-12.	ASA, Abijah's son, for piety like David's enjoys 10 years' peace. (Revolutions in Israel.) Jeroboam dies, by God's visitation (Chr.); NADAB his son adopts his policy. BAASHA of Issachar kills Nadab in his 2nd year & extirpates Jeroboam's race; but, for cruelty & maintaining Jeroboam's policy, incurs a like doom which Jehu son of Hanani announces B.C. 925.
968.	2 Chr. xi. 21-22. xiii. 4-20.	ASA, reforming corruptions of 3 reigns, destroys the images, &c. The people maintain the 'high places' until B.C. 726. Whilst enjoying peace, Asa fortifies Judah, i.e. rebels against Egypt.
967.	1 Kings xv. 19. xiv. 1-18. xv. 8. 2 Chr. xiii. 20. 1 Kin. xv. 25-34. xvi. 1-7.	ZERAB the Ethiopian (Oscarion II., k. of Egypt) invading Judah, God answers Asa's prayer by victory at Marreshah, & Judah recovers independence (971). Encouraged by Asa's appeal, Asa purges his kingdom of idols, &c., and deposes the idolatrous queen mother Maasehah (968). Judah and immigrants of Ephraim, Manasseh, and Simeon renew the Covenant.
961.	2 Chr. xiv. 3-8. 1 Kings xv. 14. 2 Chr. xiv. 9-13. xv.	Baasha invading Judah fortifies Hamath (6 m. N. of Jerusalem) to blockade his approaches; Asa, bribing Benhadad I. to transfer his alliance from Baasha, is relieved by his direction on N. E. Israel, and fortifies Gaba and Minjah. N. of Ramah. Baasha announces Asa's fortification of peace (and victory over Syria) for this lack of faith; Asa persecutes him and others.
940.	9-15. xvi. 1 (margin).	ELAH, Baasha's son, succeeds. In his 2nd yr. ZIMRI murders him, & destroys Baasha's race.
930.	7-10. 1 Kings xvi. 8.	OMRI, made king by the army, captures Tirzah seven days later, Zimri burning the palace over his head. Omri defeats and kills Tibni after four years' civil war, and in his 7th year removes to his new capital Samaria. He is worsted in war with Syria (1 K. xvi. 34).
929.	16, 22. 23.	AHAB son of Omri exceeds him (as Omri his predecessors, c. 25) in apostasy. Marrying Phoenician Jezebel, he makes her the state-religion, building a temple to Baal and a 'grove' in Samaria, & establishing priesthoods to each (400 & 450). Jezebel almost extirpates Jehovah's prophets and worship. Hiel rebuilding Jericho, suffers Joshua's curse.
925.	xx. 24. xvi. 29-34.	Asa becomes diseased in his feet, & relies unduly on physicians. He dies 2 yrs. afterwards.
918.	xix. 14, 18. 2 Chron. xvi. 12. 1 K. xxii. 41-3. 46.	JEHOSHAPHAT, Asa's son, aged 33, fortifies Judah, especially its N. frontier, & continues his father's reformation, walking 'in David's first ways'. Israel's evil example notwithstanding. His commissioners 3 princes, 2 priests, 9 Levites teach the Law throughout Judah. He prospers exceedingly by peace, tributaries (Philistines & Arabs of South), & gifts (see 719 & Ps. lxxiii. 36).
916.	2 Chr. xvi. 6-19. (see xv. 3).	During 34 years of drought invoked by him ravens and a Phoenician widow feed 50,000.
910.	1 K. xvii. Jas. v. xviii. [17]. xix.	Elijah, after the test-sacrifice on mount Carmel, begins a reformation (1 K. xvi. 6-11, cp. 2 Chr. xv. 13), & rain is given at his prayer. In Horeb, God reveals to him—designated as a fugitive from undusted Jezebel—the completion of His work by Elisha. Hazael & Joram & Jehoram are called. Jehoshaphat's son Jehoram marries Athaliah, daughter of Ahab & Jezebel.
908.	2 Chr. xviii. 1. 1 Kings xx. 2. 23-40. xxii. 1.	God aids Ahab in 2 successive invasions by a great Syrian confederacy; but after the decisive victory at Aphek, Ahab wrongly spurs Benhadad II., accepting his promise to restore the Gileadite cities lost by Omri (including Ramoth-Gilead, and unfulfilled, &c. Peace lasts 3 years.

1 Shebakh I., whose triumphs are recorded on the Temple at Karnak (Thebes). 2 Egypt is apparently unopposed or friendly till B.C. 822.

2000	1 Kings xxi. 17.	Elizah meeting Ahab in the vineyard of Naboth, judicially murdered by Jezebel's order, sentences Ahab, Jezebel, and their race. Ahab repenting, its fulfilment is postponed [884].
897.	xxii. 2-40.	Ahab summons Israel to recover Ramoth-Gilead, the key of S. Gilead, from Syria; Jehoshaphat, then Ahab's honoured guest, assists, & has a narrow escape. On his way home, he is rebuked by Jehu the son of Hanani for this ungodly alliance. Ahab's death, in spite of his disguise, literally fulfils Elizah's and Micaiah's prophecies. Moab rebels against Israel. 1
896.	2 Chr. xviii. 2-34.	HAZAZIAH retains his father Ahab's idolatries, & openly dishonours God by sending to consult Baal-zebub of Ekron; Elizah replies & foretells his death (see Lk. ix. 54). Jehoshaphat's commercial alliance with Hazaziah is rebuked by Eliezer of Marashah (Chr.) & not renewed.
	2 K. i. 1; iii. 5.	Jehoshaphat makes a progress throughout Judah to reform religion & the judicial system. Moab with Judah's vassals Ammon and Edom invading Judah from the S.E., Jehoshaphat proclaims a fast and Judah assembles at Jerusalem (cp. Joel i. 14). His prayer is answered through Jahaziel , a Levite. Finding the confederates self-destroyed near Tekoa, the army celebrates God's deliverance in the valley of Berachah ('blessing'). Peace follows.
	1 K. xxi. 51.	JEHORAM, succeeding his childless brother Hazaziah in Jehoshaphat's 18th year, destroys Ahab's image of Baal, and partly reforms Israel (cp. ch. x. 27; xiii. 6), but retains Jeroboam's state-religion. Elizah being translated, Elisha succeeds him. See O. T. Miracles .
	2 K. i. 2-16.	Jehoram, aided by Jehoshaphat, invades Moab from the S. by the wilderness of Edom (Judah's vassals), the Syrians commanding the N. approaches [897]. The allies lacking water are, for Jehoshaphat's sake, saved through Elisha and promised Moab's complete re-conquest.
	1 K. xxi. 48, 49.	King Mesha 1 sacrifices his firstborn to Chemosh. Elisha , besides other miracles (2 K. iv. 1-37; vi. 6), cures Naaman, & saves Jehoram often, & himself at Dothan, from Syrian invaders.
	2 Chr. xiv. 4-11.	Samaria besieged; Jehoram threatens Elisha . 'The Syrians' flight changes famine to plenty. Jehoshaphat, grown old, disperses his sons in fenced cities, making JEHORAM, aged 32, king-consort 2 (cp. 1 Chr. xxix. 22). Jehoram murders his brothers, & influenced by Athaliah his wife, forcibly establishes the Ahabite idolatries [899], building a temple for Baal in Jerusalem.
894.	Ex. xiv. 13, 14.	Elisha foretells a 7 years' famine, during which he miraculously cures poisoned potage for the prophets' school at Gilgal, & feeds 100 men with 20 loaves 'of the firstfruits' (cp. Lev. ii. 14).
893.	2 Kings i. 17.	Jehoshaphat dies. Edom revolts from Judah, though defeated at Zair (fulfilling Gen. xxvii. 40). Jehoram (Jehoshaphat's son) receives Elizah's 'writing', prophesying his lingering death, & disaster to his house & Judah. Philistines & S. Arabians [912] take Jerusalem, kill all his sons but Jehozahaz the youngest, & Jehoram dies miserably after 2 years' illness, unregretted.
892.	iii. 6-27.	Elisha visiting Damascius is consulted by Benhadad II. through Hazael, but foretells his death & Hazael's succession & oppression of Israel (884-849). The 7 years' famine [891] ends.
891.	ii. 6-27.	Jehozahaz or AHAZIAH, aged 22, succeeding Jehoram (Jehoshaphat's son), by his mother Athaliah's counsel maintains the Ahabite idolatries & alliance. He helps Jehoram (Ahab's son) to recover Ramoth-Gilead from Hazael, now king, & visits Jehoram lying wounded at Jezreel.
890.	vi. 8-23.	JEHU anointed by Elisha's order 'to execute judgment' on Ahab's house and policy (1 K. xix. 16), heads a revolution and reformation. Beside Naboth's vineyard, he kills Jehoram, Ahaziah escaping mortally wounded (Chr.); Jezebel, Ahab's 70 sons, & Ahaziah's brethren (i.e. kinmen, see 887), perish successively, with their adherents. Jehu destroying Baal's public worship, is promised the throne for 4 generations [772]. Jehu neglects this opportunity to abolish Jeroboam's state-religion; Hazael overruns the trans-Jordanic provinces. 3
889.	2 Chr. xxi. 3-6.	ATHALIAH, sole survivor of Ahab's & Jezebel's family, usurps the throne on Ahaziah's death, & massacres the survivors of David's line except Jehoshaphat's son, Ahaziah's infant son, & Jezebel's daughter, whom Jehoshabea, Ahaziah's sister & wife of Jehoiahaz the high priest, hid 6 years in the pillaged & partly ruined Temple. Athaliah maintains Baal worship.
888.	2 K. xii. 1-4.	In the 7th year of the reigns of Athaliah & Jehu, and 8th of Josiah's age, Jehoiahaz consents with the five commanders of the royal guard and their supporters secretly assembled at Jerusalem, the restoration of David's dynasty, apparently extinct by successive massacres (see 892, 887, 884). He produces and crowns JOASH in the Temple, executes Athaliah outside, & restores David's Temple-service. The people renew the Covenant and destroy Baal's temple and high priest Mattan. During Jehoiahaz's lifetime (d. B.C. 850, aged 130), Joash is faithful [840]; Jehoiahaz chooses him two wives. Amaziah is born, B.C. 864.
887.	2 K. xii. 5-21.	Joash of Gath-hepher threatens Nineveh, Israel's destined scourge; it repents, & is spared. Joash interposes in his 23rd year, Jehoiahaz and the priests not having repaired the Temple as ordered [726]. The people respond liberally, and the workmen's zeal and honesty leave a surplus for replacing the sacred vessels, &c., given to Baal by Athaliah's sons.
886.	2 Chron. xxiii.	JEHOAHZAH, Jehu's son, retains Jeroboam's innovations, & still tolerates Ahab's Asherah. 5 Hazael crushing Israel (Amos i. 3-5) limits its army to 10 chariots, 50 horse, and 10,000 foot. —Jehozahaz repenting and praying, God in pity grants Israel deliverance (after Jehozahaz's death) by his son Jehozahaz & grandson Jeroboam II., as Elisha & Joash successively foretold.
885.	2 K. xiv. 1-28.	Joash (Ahaziah's son), yielding to the princes, relapses with Judah into Baalism [878]. Successive prophets vainly appeal & protest; & Jehoiahaz's son Zechariah is stoned 'between the Temple and altar' by ungrateful [878] Joash's order. The Syrians capture Gath, defeat Judah's great host, kill the princes, take as Jerusalem's ransom the sacred offerings of four reigns, & so 'execute judgment against Joash', who, left in great diseases, is assassinated.
884.	2 Chr. xxiv. 2, 3.	AMAZIAH, JEHOASH's, & Benhadad III. succeed their fathers Joash, Jehozahaz, & Hazael. Amaziah, respecting Moses' Law, spares the children of his father's murderers, and at a prophet's bidding dismisses 100,000 Israelite mercenaries, who, returning, spoil cities of Judah. Joash seeks Elisha in his death-sickness, but curtails God's favour by want of faith [842].
883.	xxv. 1-14.	Elisha dies (aged 99?); a dead man, laid in his grave during a Moabite invasion, revives. Joash, by the 3 victories promised through Elisha , recovers Hazael's conquests.
882.	2 K. xiv. 1, 2, 6.	Judah also revives, until Amaziah, puffed up by his re-conquest of Edom, silenced a prophet's rebuke of his adoption of Edom's idols; God-forsaken, he persists in provoking war with Israel. Joash, having replied (thistle and cedar) captures Amaziah at Beth-shemesh, breaks down 400 cubits of Jerusalem's N. wall, & returns with hostages, & the sacred & other treasures [839] to Samaria. Amaziah outlives Joash 15 years, during which he apostatises.
881.	2 K. xiv. 17-21.	JEROBOAM II., Joash's son, retains Jeroboam's state-religion, yet through God's pity realises Joash's prophecy, delivering Israel from Syria to its original frontiers (Hamath to E. Arnon, Num. xxvii. 12), and reconquering [895] Moab (Amos vi. 14) & Solomon's lost suzerainty over Damascus, perhaps weakened by Assyrian aggression [862, 771].
880.	xv. 1-15.	Amaziah flees from conspirators, who kill him at Lachish. The people make his son UZZIAH (Azariah, Kings), aged 16. Faithful during Zechariah's the seer's lifetime, he is 'marvellously helped'. He recovers Solomon's Red Sea trade by restoring Elath (lost with Edom, 889), & his dominions—to the S.W. (as far as Egypt) S. and S.E.—by conquest of the Philistines, Arabians, Mehunims (i.e. Moabites), and by Ammon's submission [758]. He

They foretell the destruction of Jehu's dynasty [772] & of Israel's strength ('house'), and the nation's extinction (with her calf-worship, &c.) by captivity into Assyria; bidding Judah be warned. Amos , accused to Jeroboam II. of treasonable conspiracy & treated as a false prophet by Amaziah, high priest at Bethel, foretells his dishonour & captivity.

PEKAH, son of Remaliah, a general of Pekahiah, kills him & his Gileadite body-guard. Uzziah dies. God in glory reveals Judah's captivity to Isaiah . Jotham puts down & fines the Ammonites [810]. Judah prospers for his faithfulness, though he tolerates the high places [861]. But formalism & idolatries, injustice & crimes, luxury & wantonness increase, though rebuked by Isaiah & by Micah , who pronounces Samaria's doom for infecting Judah. Jotham strengthens Jerusalem, especially Ophel (the lower end of the ridge), adding the Temple's upper gate. Toward the reign's end, Resin king of Syria and Pekah combine against Judah. AHAZ, Jotham's son, aged 20, reigns 16 years. Weak and foolish, Is. xl. 1, he re-announces [840] the Israelite Baalism and Canaanite worship of Moloch (1 K. xi. 7), sacrifices a son to him (see Mic. vi. 7), and worshipped at the high places. Resin and Pekah invade Judah to set the 'son of Tabeal' on David's throne. After 2 crushing victories, the allies carry thousands captive, Resin to Damascus and Pekah to Samaria (where Oleth 's remonstrance causes their restoration), and besiege Jerusalem. Isaiah , sent to encourage Ahas, predicts their failure, and Syria's captivity and Israel's obliteration (65 years hence) by Assyria (Judah also to be overrun, except Jerusalem [713]). He gives—Ahas refusing to choose—a sign confirmatory of God's aid, viz. the birth of a son (J. Isaiah's) by one then a virgin, type of virgin-born IMMANUEL (see Micah v. 2). Resin deprives Judah finally of Elath [810]; the Edomites and Philistines invade Judah. Ahas, surrounded by foes, hires Assyrian aid, volunteering vassalage, & seeks help of the Syrian gods. TIGLATH-PILESER captures Damascus, fulfilling Isa. viii. 4, & removes the Syrians to Kir, and Naphtali & Israel E. of Jordan with Gentile Galilee (Heb. circuit, i.e. the border, Is. xi. 1) to Assyria. Ahas, through the H. P. Unjah, replaces Solomon's brazen altar by a copy of one at Damascus. Half-relieved & impoverished, Ahas pillages & closes the Temple, and fills Jerusalem & Judah with idolatries.

It falls in the 3rd year [721] Hezekiah's 4th year, apparently to Shalmaneser's successor, the usurper SARGON (Is. x. 1), who carries the rest of the N. tribes captive to Assyria and to his recent conquests in Media.

SENNACHERIB attacks Hezekiah, takes 46 fenced cities, & threatens Jerusalem. Hezekiah buys peace with the Temple's treasures; but Sennacherib demands the surrender of Jerusalem. Isaiah (xxxiii.) repeats his reassurances, and predicts Sennacherib's retreat & a violent death at home (fulfilled 681 B.C.). TIRHAKAH, an Ethiopian king of Egypt, taking the field, Sennacherib threatens Hezekiah in a letter. Isaiah foretells Jerusalem's inviolability & Judah's recovery. That night, the flower of Sennacherib's army perishes.

Immediate reaction shows Judah's hopeless corruption (see Isa. xxxiii. 13). Manasseh restores the 'high places', the Israelite Baal-worship [892, 741], and Moloch-worship in the valley of Hinnom's sons (Tophet), sacrificing a son [741]. He sets up in the Temple & courts Ahas's emblem ('grove') and altars for star-worship, consecrating priests to all; & probably installs in the precincts horses and chariots dedicated to the Sun, Persian-fashion. He practices divination &c. Prognosts vainly appeal and protest, and persecution fills Jerusalem with martyrs' blood (Jer. ii. 39; Matt. xxiii. 37). For guilt greater than that which cost the Amorite Canaan, Judah and Jerusalem are sentenced to Samaria's fate. Assyrian invaders carry Manasseh to Babylon, the favorite residence of ESARHADDON (only); there he repents, and being restored abolishes idolatry, sparing only the illegal worship of Jehovah in the 'high places'. He fortifies Judah and Jerusalem. ESARHADDON (5 by his general Assnapper), colonises Samaria. [SAMARITANS.]

Under AMON, Manasseh's son, Judah reverts to its condition before Manasseh's reformation. After 2 years, conspirators murder Amon: the people execute them & make his son JOSIAH king. JOSIAH, aged 8, grows up amid established idolatries, even in the Temple, parallel with Jehovah's worship (Ezek. xxxiii. 39). Zephaniah describes Judah as openly or secretly idolatrous, godless & past feeling; full of wealth ill-gotten & abused, of tyrannical rulers, rapacious judges, reckless prophets, and time-serving priests. He encourages the faithful remnant to look beyond the Captivity (by a new power, the Chaldeans, Habakkuk i. 5-10) inevitable and hastening through Judah's impotence—to Judah's restoration, and even to that of Israel. In the 5th year of his reign, Josiah seeks Jehovah; and in the 12th, probably after purging the Temple and Jerusalem, begins a progress as far as Naphtali, destroying all idols and erecting for ever the altars and high places, esp. at Bethel (fulfilling 1 K. xiii. 2). year, Jeremiah is called to foretell an invasion ('evil') from the north (606) for Judah's idolatry. About the 17th, NABOPOLASSAR seizes Babylon, and (or 20 years later) allied with the Medes destroys Nineveh and the Assyrian Empire, as foretold by Nabusee & Zephaniah (ii. 12—15). In the 18th year, during the Temple's repair with the contributions of all Israel (see 586), a copy of the Law is found & read to Josiah. In dismay at the penalties incurred (Lev. xvi; Dt. xviii.) he consults Huldah; she foretells their infliction, but, for Josiah's contrition, only after his death. Josiah publishes the Law in the Temple, causes the nation to renew the Covenant, & completes the reformation throughout his dominions. David's Temple service & the ark being restored, a great passover is kept strictly by Judah & the remnant of Israel. Divination (Isa. viii. 19) & c., is suppressed & the administration of justice amended. But Jeremiah exposes the reformation's superficiality. Interval of 13 years. After the Temple's restoration, Pharaoh-NECHO marches against Carchemish, the key of the Euphrates-valley, i.e. NABOPOLASSAR's new kingdom (607); Josiah attacks him, and is mortally wounded near Megiddo. The mourning for Josiah becomes proverbial. The people anoint JEHOIAHAZ, (Shallum, Josiah's 3rd or 4th 'evil' son) aged 23, but Necho returning victorious to Riblah deposes him there 3 months later, & takes him to Egypt; making JEHOIAKIM (Josiah's 2nd son Eliakim), aged 25, tributary king; he reigns 11 years. Jeremiah, threatening the Temple with Shiloh's and Zion with Samaria's fate, for Judah's open idolatry, is tried as a false prophet, but is saved by Ahikam and his party, on Micah's precedent. He denounces Jehoiakim as a heartless tyrant, covetous, and oppressing an impoverished people to build magnificent palaces, reckless of prevailing injustice, and a relentless persecutor, e.g. of Urijah. He foretells Jehoahaz's death in Egypt (Jer. xli. 12). NABOPOLASSAR's son Nebuchadnezzar defeats Necho at Carchemish (610) & sweeps the Egyptians from Syria. The example of the Rechabite refugees in Jerusalem rebukes Judah's apostasy. After 23 years of fruitless appeal, Jeremiah reveals NEBUCHADNEZZAR's mission ('my servant,') against Judah, her neighbours, and Egypt, the 70 years Captivity, and Babylon's (Sheshach) destruction. Jehoiakim surrenders, but is restored as the tributary of Nebuchadnezzar, who sends Daniel, & c., to Babylon for the royal service. The 70 years begin. Baruch reads publicly Jeremiah's collected prophecies; Jehoiakim destroying the roll is doomed to die ignominiously and unsuccessful. Daniel interprets Nebuchadnezzar's dream (the image) of the 4 Empires, followed by Messiah's kingdom. After 3 years, Jehoiakim rebels; Chaldeans, & c. overrun Judah, and probably kill and insult Jehoiakim as foretold. JEHOIACHIN (Jer. Coniah, Jeconiah), Jehoiakim's 'evil' son, aged 18, reigns 3 months and 10 days, and surrendering to Nebuchadnezzar is carried captive to Babylon, as foretold, with the Temple's golden vessels and the flower of the nation, including Ezekiel & the germ of the future restored nation (good sign, Jer. xxiv. 5, 6, 7; see Ezek. xl. 16). Nebuchadnezzar makes Mattaniah, Jehoahaz's brother, king over 'the poor' (Ezek. xvi.). With the title, ZEDEKIAH, Jeremiah opposes a general restlessness, fostered by false prophets in Chaldean & Judah who predict the Chaldean Empire's speedy fall, & restoration to Jehoiachin and the exiles. Zedekiah vacillates, but following the national party brings ruin on himself and Judah's relics, as foretold (Jer. xxvii. 17; xxxviii. 17—23). Jeremiah, in a letter (by Zedekiah's embassy), bids the exiles settle down, promising the restoration of a converted remnant at the 70 years' end; false prophets oppose, & Shemaiah writes urging his punishment. In Zedekiah's 3rd or 4th year, embassies from his neighbours concert a rebellion with him; Jeremiah replies ('jokes'), declaring Nebuchadnezzar's irresistibility. Hamaniah's death discredits his counter-predictions. Zedekiah visiting Babylon in his 4th year, Jeremiah sends his prophecies of Babylon's fall, the preliminary of the Restoration (by Cyrus, Isa. xli. 28; 2 Chr. xxxvi. 20—23). In the 5th year of Jehoiachin's captivity, Ezekiel foretells to the exiles Jerusalem's siege, Judah's captivity, & the restoration of a converted remnant; in the 6th, God's withdrawal from the Temple (polluted by idolatry) & Jerusalem, & Zedekiah's meditated perjury & capture, denouncing the false prophets; in the 7th, Nebuchadnezzar's advance and Zedekiah's & Jerusalem's ruin. Zedekiah, in his 8th year, breaking his oath, allies himself with Egypt (HOPHRA) & rebels. The Chaldeans advance; Judah's late allies join their esp. Philistia, & Edom (denounced by Obadiah). In Zedekiah's 9th year, only Lachish, Azekah, and Jerusalem hold out; he asks God's aid through Jeremiah, but is hidden to submit. In the 10th year, Jerusalem is invested; a fact at once revealed to Ezekiel (xxiv.). On the approach of an Egyptian army, the Hebrew freedmen are re-enslaved; the Chaldeans raise the siege; Jeremiah, again invoked, predicts their return and success, & is imprisoned as a traitor. Zedekiah consults him secretly, and transfers him to the quarters of the royal guard (court of prison), where, in the 10th year, amid the horrors of a protracted blockade, he foretells the Restoration (redeeming Hamameel's field as a sign), and the fulfilment of all God's covenants in a sprout of David's stem when apparently dead, Jehovah our Righteousness. He republishes his prophecies of hope (xxx.—xxxiii. the New Covenant) to sustain the faithful of Israel in captivity. Jeremiah surrendered by Zedekiah to Pashur & c., is left to starve in Malchiah's dungeon; Ebedmelech rescues him. Zedekiah guarantees his life, but fears to adopt his urgent counsel to save Jerusalem by surrender, & leaves him in the guard house till released by the Chaldeans. In Zedekiah's 11th year (4th month) the N. wall is breached. The king is captured (Ezek. xli. 12) near Jericho, blinded at Riblah, & at Babylon (fulfilling Ezek. xli. 13) dies in prison. In the 5th month, Nebuzar-adan destroys the Temple, chief buildings, and the walls, sending 822 of the survivors to Babylon with all valuables. He assigns lands to a remnant (Levitic); Jeremiah choosing to remain is consigned to Gedaliah the governor. Jeremiah writes Lamentations. Refugees gather round Gedaliah, but Ishmael of the blood-royal murders him (in the 7th month). The remnant of Judah fearing Chaldean vengeance consult God through Jeremiah. Bidden to remain, they deny Jeremiah's inspiration, & flee into Egypt, taking him & Baruch by force. In Taphnes, & after their dispersion, Jeremiah warns them of consuming punishment through Nebuchadnezzar's conquest of Egypt (probably in 508 B.C., cf. Ezek. xxx. 17—20), unless they abandon idolatry; as a pledge, he predicts HOPHRA's deposition. Israel's Captivity; the Restored Jewish Nation. The Age of World-Empires. NEBUCHADNEZZAR, though warned by the dream of the tree interpreted by Daniel, indulges in self-confidence, being proud of his victories over Egypt, Judah, and other countries, & the magnificence of his buildings, and is smitten with madness (Levitic). After seven years ('times') spent almost as a beast of the field, his understanding returning, he humbly acknowledges God's power and goodness towards him; and is confirmed in his kingdom. A few years afterwards he dies, having reigned about 43 years. Evil-merodach his son succeeds in the 37th year of Jehoiachin's captivity, and in his 1st year releases and pays the highest honour to this last earthly king of David's line. Evil-merodach reigned 2 years, and after Neriglissar's usurpation, etc., the line of Nebuchadnezzar was restored in Nabonadius (or Nabonedus), the last king of Babylon, with whom his son Belshazzar was latterly associated as king. He commanded in Babylon while Nabonedus took the field against Cyrus. In the first year of Belshazzar's reign in Babylon, Daniel

	Dan. v. 1, 10. Isa. xiii. Hab. ii. Jer. xlv. 12. I. li.	Belshazzar making, during the siege, a great feast to 1,000 nobles, sends for and uses the vessels of the house of the Lord, which Nebuchadnezzar had brought from Jerusalem, to the glory of his idols, and dishonour of the true God. In the midst of the revelry, a band appears writing on the wall of the palace in which the king, his wives, concubines, and princes sit drinking. At the queen's (queen-mother's?) suggestion, Daniel, the former chief of the wise men (Dan. ii. 48), is sent for, and reads and interprets the writing: Mene, tene, cephare ; Tekel, i.e. weighed; Upharsin, i.e. and they are dividing; (with a play on the word Persians); and is proclaimed the 3rd in the kingdom. The same night Belshazzar is slain, Babylon taken by Cyrus, the empire passing, as foretold, to the Persians and Medes.
539 [or 538].	Dan. viii. 1.	In Belshazzar's 3rd year (probably soon after Babylon's capture), Daniel at Susanna (Susa), the Persian capital, has the vision of the ram and he goat, the former part explained by Gabriel of the destruction of the Persian empire by Alexander the Great and his four successors, and the latter usually interpreted of Antiochus Epiphanes, the future Greek king of Syria, the persecutor of the restored Jews and their religion. See B.C. 170-167.
538.	Dan. v. 31.	Darius the Mede, aged about 62, "took the kingdom." The most probable opinion is that Cyrus, while completing his conquests, made Astyages, the king of Media deposed by him, civil governor of the Perso-Median empire, with full royal power.
	vi. 6.	The Perso-Median nobles, as if offended at their supersession by a Chaldean Jew, intrigue to ruin Daniel through his piety, finding his management of affairs unimpeachable. They move the king to decree, that for 30 days no petition be made to god or man, but to himself only, on pain of death by the lions. Daniel, by his customary prayers, places himself in the power of his enemies, but is miraculously delivered from the lions. Darius decrees that all his subjects shall acknowledge the God of Daniel.
	ix. Jer. xlix. 10.	Towards the end of the 1st year of Darius the Mede, reckoned from the fall of the Babylonian empire, begins the 70th year of the Captivity, by Jeremiah's prophecy that, as Daniel now "understood by the books" (Variorum), i.e. by the writings of the prophets; (esp. Jeremiah, cf. Ezra i. 1; in Isa. xl.-lxvi. the exiles are encouraged to confidently expect deliverance: Cyrus, pursuing his conquests, is to enter Babylon and release the Jews, ch. xl. 1-11; xli. 1-3; xliii. 14-29; xlv. 24-xlv. 4, 18, &c.).—To Daniel, praying fervently for the promised restoration of all Israel and Jerusalem, Gabriel announces God's command to that effect, and the prophecy of the 70 weeks.
536. The Persian Empire.	Ezra i. 2. (cp. Is. xlix. 22. 23; Is. 10; Ez. xii. 35, 36.)	Cyrus' 1st (imperial) year (king of Persians 20 years) begins with Darius' death—the 2 years of Darius being included in the 9 years assigned to Cyrus in the Babylonian annals. Cyrus now issues his wonderful edict (cp. Isa. xlv. 28 with Ezra vi. 3) for the rebuilding of the Temple at Jerusalem, probably under Daniel's influence (Dan. i. 21, margin). He permits all God's people to return, taking their property with them, and any offerings of well-affected neighbours for themselves or the Temple.
	Ezra i. 7-11.	Cyrus also restored to Zerubbabel (Sheshbazzar), successor to Jehoiachin through Sedechiah, as the recognised lineal head of the House of David, the 5,400 (2,450 vessels of the Temple, & granted cedars from Lebanon and money for the building, prescribing its dimensions.
	iii. 7; i. 3, 4. 1. 5. 1 Chr. ix. 3. Ezra ii. 63. 2 Chr. xxxvi. 21. Jos. Ant. Jud. xi. i.	The first caravan "of the children of the (Persian) province," i.e. Judaea, including apparently members of the dispersed 9 tribes (esp. Manasseh and Ephraim), was led by Zerubbabel, whom Cyrus made Tirshath or governor of Judaea. Unlike Samaria, the S. kingdom remained unoccupied ("I enjoyed her Sabbaths"), as Jeremiah had foretold. "Many Jews," says Josephus, "remained in Babylon, being unwilling to relinquish their property" (Ant. Jud. xiii. 1-7), and formed part of "the Dispersion" (cp. Jam. i. 1). Only about 50,000 Jews, as they now began to be called, returned to Jerusalem on this first occasion (viz. 42,360 Hebrews and 7,337 servants), with 733 horses, 245 mules, 435 camels, and 6,720 asses. Ps. lxxxix. and cvii. perhaps refer to this journey. Ezra's and Nehemiah's genealogical catalogues give 29,810 and 31,080 respectively, the total of each being 42,360; the Jews supply the deficiency from the 9 tribes who had not preserved their genealogies (Ezra ii. 70; vi. 17).
535.	Ezra iii. 1-7.	After their arrival in the desolated cities of their forefathers, the returned exiles meet "as one man" at Jerusalem in the 7th month. Jeshua the High Priest, and Zerubbabel restore the altar and its service, keep the Feast of Tabernacles, and prepare building material.
535.	iii. 8-13.	In the 2nd year (2nd month) after the return, they appoint Levites to direct the rebuilding of the House of God, whose foundation was laid amid the restored musical services of David, and shouts of joy drowned in the wailing of those who recalled Solomon's Temple.
534.	Dan. x.-xiii.	In the third year of Cyrus, Daniel sees his great vision beside the R. Hiddekel (Tigris), the former part of the revelation possibly relating to the struggles of the future Greek kings of Egypt and Syria (the Ptolemies and Seleucids) for the possession of Judaea, but the whole "closed up and sealed to the time of the end."
	Ezra iv. 5.	The mixed and idolatrous people of Samaria (2 Kings xvii. 41), their claim to share in the Temple's restoration being rejected, hinder the work—on the spot, by intrigues at court during the reign of Cyrus, and later openly—until the 2nd year of Darius (son of Hystaspes).
529. 622.	Ezra iv. 6. 7.	On the succession of Ahasuerus, they venture upon a written accusation (seemingly unnoticed), and again in the reign of Artaxerxes I, whose prohibition of the city's restoration is used to stop that of the Temple. The lukewarm and dejected Jews acquiesce, but are punished by drought, dearth, &c. (cp. Hag. i. 1-11; ii. 14-18; Zech. viii. 9-13).
520.	Hag. i. ii.	In Darius' 2nd year, Zerubbabel and Jeshua renew the work—roused by the aged Haggai and youthful Zechariah (ii. 4), who rebuke the people's neglect, but encourage them to repeat and persevere. Haggai prophesies that this larger but less sumptuous temple shall exceed Solomon's in "glory" (i.e. by the presence and ministry of God manifest in the flesh), and designates Zerubbabel as a "signet" on God's hand, i.e. the object of God's love and favour.
	Zech. i.-vi.	Zechariah promises—besides the Temple's completion by Zerubbabel (ch. iv. 9)—the re-establishment of its priesthood and services under Jeshua (ch. iii.), the restoration of Jerusalem, its re-peopling and that of Judah with exiles (urged to return, ch. ii. 6-11), the subjection of the Jews' adversaries, and such prosperity as shall attract Gentile proselytes.
519.	Ezra v. 6.	Tetral's interference causes Darius to discover and re-enact Cyrus' edict.
518.	Zech. vii. viii.	In Darius' 4th year—midway in the Temple's re-building—deputies (A.V. "unto the house of God," rather) from Bethel, enquire if the 4 annual days of mourning for Judah's chief calamities—Jerusalem's blockade (10th month), capture (4th), Temple's destruction (5th), Gedaliah's murder (7th)—should still be observed. In reply, Zechariah exposes the selfish

- Abasuerus, in Greek HERXES, in the year of his great assembly previous to the Invasion of Greece, divorces Q. Vasthi, and in the year after the invasion's failure (474 B.C. later) marries Hamanash, in Persian Esther, the cousin and adopted daughter of Mordecai a Benjaminite.
- In Abasuerus' 12th year, Haman, the capricious king's favourite, resolves to avenge Mordecai's omission of the customary obeisance, on Mordecai's nation. To find the lucky day and month, he casts Pur, i.e. the lot—whereby the Jews have 11 months' warning.
- Haman obtains a royal edict that on the 13th of Adar (12th mth.) all Jews in the 127 provinces be massacred. Through a wonderful chain of events, Mordecai is promoted and Haman hanged. Esther interceding for herself and her people, the king authorises his numerous Jewish subjects to defend themselves. The feast of Lots, Purim (see Calendar) commemorates this deliverance. The Jews prosper under Mordecai; proselytes join them.
- Meanwhile, in Judaea, Zerubbabel's descendants and David's house sink into obscurity, and the Jews receive Persian governors (cp. Neh. v. 16) subject to the Satrap of the province. Many religious and moral abuses creep in. The Temple remains imperfectly furnished.
- In Artaxerxes' (Longimanus) 7th year, Ezra, a priest (great-grandson of Hilkiah, high-priest in Josiah's reign), and 'ready scribe' 'of the Law of the God of heaven' (vs. 6, 10, 21), eager to reform the Jews, obtains a commission of enquiry with authority to appoint judges and penalties, and to teach Moses' Law and enforce it on the people of the province. The Jews are again authorised to return. The king and Babylonian Jews send offerings of money and vessels to the Temple; its ministers are exempted from royal taxes. Ezra bears orders also on provincial governors to supply up to a fixed amount what he found wanting for the Temple.
- About 1500 families join Ezra at Ahava, by Euphrates' affluent of that name: some of high-priestly and Davidic descent, but no Levites. Ezra fetches 38 Levites and 220 Nethinim from Ctesiph. After fasting and prayer for God's special protection, the caravan without an escort crosses the robber-haunted Syrian waste, and in 14 weeks reaches Jerusalem.
- Finding even the higher ranks of 'the holy seed' demoralized by marriage with idolaters, Ezra after public prayer, with the support of 'princes and elders', summons the people to Jerusalem within 3 days, on pain of forfeiture and excommunication. The assembly, urged by Ezra, orders formal enquiry; the heathen wives are put away with their children in 3 mths. Zechariah foretells Judah's sins and restoration, and Messiah's coming (s.c. 487, Usher).
- Nehemiah, cupbearer of Artaxerxes, confesses to him that reports of Jerusalem's defenceless and ruined state (ch. iv. 2, 10; vii. 4) cause his sadness (see Prayers in Scripture). He obtains leave of absence, and is appointed governor (Tirshatha), with permission to fortify the city, and grants of timber. Nehemiah surveys the city walls secretly, because of the Jews' adversaries, and then declares his commission to the assembled Jews. They divide the work into 48 parts, duly superintended.
- Sanballat, governor of Samaria, and Tobiah 'the slave', (governor?) of Ammon, deride Nehemiah's attempt, and accuse him of meditating rebellion. The walls being half built, they conspire with Geshem, an Arab chief, and the Philistines of Ashdod, to stop the work by force; the local Jews report the conspiracy, and urge the builders to cease temporarily (v. 12, marg.). Nehemiah organises the defence, so that the enemy durst not appear.
- The poorer Jews, obliged by a past 'dearth' (cp. Hag. i. 11; ii. 17) to sell their land and even children to pay the king's tribute and their creditors' interest, are destitute. The nobles, pressed by Nehemiah (who pleads his example in redeeming Jews sold to the heathen, &c.), restore their debtors' lands, all interest (1-100th per month), and forgive their debts.
- Sanballat's party, hearing that the work approaches completion, to entrap Nehemiah invite him to a conference. He excuses himself 6 times, though his loyalty is openly questioned. They bribe Shemaiah to prophesy his assassination, & to urge him to commit sacrilege (Num. xviii. 7) by taking refuge in the Sanctuary; by letters, prophets (esp. Noadiah a prophetess), and through confederates in Jerusalem, Tobiah's connections, they try to alarm him; but through Nehemiah's steadfastness, the works are completed in 52 days.
- The city gates being fixed and the fortified palace (Neh. ii. 8; vii. 2, Heb. Birkah, the Acra, 'tower' or Baris of the Maccabees) adjoining the Temple rebuilt, the walls are given into the Levites' charge. Nehemiah entrusts Jerusalem to his brother Hanani, and to Hananiah, the governor of the fortress, and registers the people (Zerubbabel's register follows to 'cities' &c. v. 73). The people return to their inheritances (between Bethel and Beersheba).
- Ezra, as if on a 2nd visit, reads and the Levites expound the Law (see Scriptures, Levites) at the Feasts of Trumpets and Tabernacles. At a solemn fast, after Ezra's prayer, a covenant is signed: the Jews swear to abstain from heathen marriages, Sabbath trading, usury; to observe the Sabbatical year and its release of debts, and to pay firstfruits and tithes.
- The Jews now first adopt a yearly poll tax to maintain the Temple services (4 shekels, see Tribute under Money) and a wood offering. The rulers settle in Jerusalem; volunteers, and a tithe of the Jews chosen by lot, re-people it (cp. ch. vii. 4).
- The Levites and singers from the country join in dedicating the wall with 2 processions (attended by Nehemiah & Ezra respectively, cp. ch. viii. 9), & sacrifices. The Law is read, the 'mixed multitude' expelled, and the allowances of priests, Levites and singers, and so the continuance of the Temple service, secured. Nehemiah returns (for about a year).
- Revisiting Jerusalem, Nehemiah reforms the renewed abuses. He cleanses the Temple, ejecting Tobiah the Ammonite and Jews' enemy (Neh. iv. 3) from a chamber in it given him by Eliashib the high priest, restores the services, enforces the allowances of the Temple ministers (dispersed through want), the observance of the Sabbath, and the law against heathen marriages, not sparing the high-priest's grandson, Sanballat's son-in-law. Nehemiah, according to 2 Mac. ii. 13, collected some of the Scriptures; but tradition ascribes the Canon of the Old Testament to Ezra and the Great Synagogue—a council of 120 (including Haggai and Zechariah) formed to restore the Jews' religion on the Return.
- Malachi*, the last O. T. prophet—probably in the 2nd backsliding of Neh. xiii. (compare the sins there reformed with Mal. ii. 11; iii. 8-10)—unveils the Jews' self-righteousness, urging them to repent and reform. The priesthood's ignorance and corruption had hastened the people's declension. The Jews, comparing their adversity with the ungodly's prosperity, question God's justice. Malachi declares the drought, dearth, &c. to be God's chastisements, removable by repentance—which he also urges as a necessary preparation for the sudden advent of the expected Messiah, who will come as a discernor of hearts, Purifier and Judge; preceded by a 'messenger' (ch. iii. 1), even 'Elijah the prophet' (iv. 5), &c. John the Baptist.

THE History of the restored Jews, from Nehemiah's second commission to the fall of the Medo-Persian Empire before the Macedonian (the two-horned row before the bounding horizon) is almost a blank; the interval, which would be a century, being bridged only by a list of high priests, ELIASHIR, JOIADA, JONATHAN or JOHANAN, and JADUJA; &c. as most commentators hold, (1) Jaddua was the high priest, who according to Josephus met Alexander the Great; (2) the Darius of v. 22 be the last, DARIUS CODOMANNUS, defeated by Alexander. Apparently, the goodwill of the Persians continued, and Josephus is silent for the Jews the reputation of model vassals.—The Jews themselves were distinctly progressing towards the new state of things of the Gospel Period: (a) The house of David had lost its restored pre-eminence under Zerubbabel, and was sinking into obscurity; (b) the study of the Law and Prophecy, collected and revised by Ezra, &c., and the supplanting of the ancient Hebrew, 'their own language' (see Prologue 2 to Ecclesiastical), by the current Babylonian dialect and alphabet (Aramaic or Chaldean), had called into existence copyists, teachers, and interpreters of Scripture (see Secta, Scribae), the germs of the Rabbinical schools and religious sects; (c) the influence of the high priests and Levites, increased thus, and by the decay of David's house, was becoming at once enlarged and corrupted by accession of temporal power. The same historical fact of the period, viz. the murder of his brother Joshua by the high priest JONATHAN or JOHANAN, on suspicion of aiming at the high priesthood by Persian influence, indicates that Judaea was practically ruled by the high priest, and foreshadows the jealousies and crimes of the priestly families, which took the place of similar quarrels in royal families elsewhere, and heretofore gradually undermined the fabric of Jewish independence, erected by the Macedonians. The religious revival, characteristic of the post-Captivity period, the Book of Daniel, as traced in the Book of Tobit, written about this time, which shows the great reverence in which the Mosaic Law was already held. Indeed, the nation, prompted by Ezra the Scribe, the 2nd founder of the Jewish Commonwealth, and influenced especially by the 2 Books of Chronicles, probably written by him with this object, re-formed itself into a hierarchy on the basis of the Law and Temple. The Davidic monarchy being abolished, and prophecy suspended, the Law alone survived as 'the distinctive pledge of nationality, and a sure guide to truth'. Thus moulded, the Jewish nation gradually severed the austere and ascetic life of the Temple, and after the manner of Daniel's prophecies relating to himself, granted the Jews (everywhere) all their ancient privileges and exemption from taxes in the Sabbatical year. At Alexander's invitation, some Jews came in his army and accompany him to Persia; others settle with full citizenship in his new city Alexandria (320); Samaritans, refused like privileges, rebels and is destroyed. The survivors of the Assyrian colonists &c. (see Samaritans in Jewish Sects), were allowed to settle in Siachen, and Alexander re-peopled Samaria with Syro-Macedonians (see A.C. 169). Palestine enjoys peace till Alexander's death; his conquests spread the Greek languages and civilization. The Diadochi (320), Alexander's generals, the Greek Oriental kingdoms of the North and South, viz. Egypt (PTOLEMIES) and upper Asia, i.e. Syria and Babylonia (SELEUCIDS, A.C. 312) result. Palestine part of Syria; but the 2 kingdoms dispute its possession of intervals during 140 years. ONIAS II., H. P. During the wars of the Diadochi, PTOLIMY I. (SOTER) son of LAGUS, captures Jerusalem on a sabbath, which the Jews scrupled to break even by self-defence, and adds many Jewish captives to the citizens of Alexandria. After its capture and loss by Syria, Judaea is finally annexed to Egypt 18 years later, when, A.C. 301, the battle of Ipsus closes the wars of the Diadochi. The Jews of Judaea prove as submissive to the first 5 Ptolemies as to the Persian Empire, and grow in numbers and wealth—developing commerce, partly transferred to them by the fall of Tyre (332), &c.; the Dispersion extends over the heathen world—large colonies being fostered by the Ptolemies in Africa (esp. Alexandria and Cyrene, cp. A.C. 329, 391). SIMON I. son of Onias, called THE JUST, high priest. His description by Jews as of Siachen, whose commemorative list of 'famous men' closes with Simon, is 'the ideal of the pomp and majesty of a high priest' (Midrash). He had been the Temple and Jerusalem a sign of much independence. According to tradition, he completed the collection of the Canon of Scripture (CANON OF O. T.) begun by Ezra, and was the channel whereby the oral Mosaic tradition (to which the Pharisees later gave such prominence) reached Antiquity. Sochi, the first writer of the Mishna (the text of the Talmud, the treasury of Rabbinical learning) and master of the reputed founder of the Sadducees. (See Jewish Sects). Colonies of Jews are planted by the Seleucids in Syria (Antioch) and Asia Minor (Ephesus) and in Greece (Corinth, &c.), and are subjected to the attraction of the Greek language and civilization. [300.] Even in Palestine, new or restored cities along the lines of communication between Egypt and Syria, esp. along the sea-board (146), receive Greek names, e.g. Azotus (Ashdod), Gaza (Gaza), Ptolemais (the Phœnician Acco, now Acre)—and in the valleys of Esdraelon and the Jordan, e.g. Scythopolis (Bethshan), Pella, Panias (Dan, now Banias). ELEAZAR, bro. of Simon I., H. P. The African Jews (esp. of Alexandria and Cyrene, cp. Acts 6. 9) are so numerous that the 'Book of the Law', perhaps the Pentateuch only, is translated into Greek by learned Jews of Alexandria; traditionally by 70 or 72 translators, and the great version of Ptolemy II. (EULAMPTIC), and named the Septuagint (LXX.). The rest of the O. T. canon was similarly translated, probably at various times during the next century or two, and was the Standard Bible in the Gospel and Apostolic Age. ONIAS II., son of Simon I., H. P., dares withhold the tribute, and so jeopardizes the good understanding with Egypt, which Joseph his nephew restores by his tact, and by establishing former farmers of the taxes of Judaea. Joseph is appointed receiver-general to the king PTOLIMY III. (EUKERGETES) for Coele-Syria, Phœnicia, Judaea and Samaria; and the civil power thus instituted parallel to that of the high priest, leads to interference and rivalry between the two offices, or innovating party arises in Judaea, advocating the abandonment of the scrupulous observance of Moses' Law for Hellenic (Greek) liberty of thought and manners. ANTIOCHUS III. (THE GREAT, B.C. 223), the Greco-Syrian kingdom being at its climax, makes war on Egypt to recover Palestine, &c. [B.C. 201.] PTOLIMY IV. (PHILOMATOR) defeats him at Raphia near Gaza, and visits Jerusalem. For some repulse on his entering the Holy of Holies, Ptolemy persecutes the Jews in Alexandria on his return, and alienates Judaea. The minority of Ptolemy V. (EUPATOR) is expelled from Egypt, and Antiochus wars with Philip V. of Macedonia the partition of the Ptolemaic kingdom; Antiochus captures Jerusalem B.C. 203; Scopas recovers it for Ptolemy A.C. 190. Next year—(ONIAS III., H. P., for his character, see 2 Mac. 4. 35)—Antiochus defeats Scopas and the Egyptians at Panias, and annexes Coele-Syria, Phœnicia, and Palestine. The Jews, alienated further by suffering in the war, and tempted by Antiochus' concessions, join Syria finally. Antiochus secures the long-desired provinces by treaty with Rome, B.C. 188. He forms colonies of Neoplatonian Jews in Ephesus and Byzantium. Religious riots are added to political, caused by the efforts of Antiochus to carry in Judaea ('the synagogue' of 2 Maccabees), which now openly opposes the Law's character, the last [167] Chasidim or Pious. (See Jewish Sects.) The Syrian king holds the balance.

187. 2 Mac. 3. 4. Antiochus is conquered by the Romans at Magnesia, and subjected to an immense tribute (2,000 talents, 2 Mac. 8. 10), which impoverishes the kingdom. SELECTS IV. (PHILOPATOR), his son and successor, informed by Simon, governor of the Temple, who had quarrelled with the godly Onias about some disorder in Jerusalem, sends Heliodorus to demand the surrender of the money deposited in the Temple treasury for safe keeping, which included a fund for widows and orphans, but Heliodorus miraculously expelled, and owes his life to the high priest's prayers.
175.
[176.] 2 Mac. 4. 7. On Seleucus' death, his son Demetrius being a hostage at Rome, his brother ANTIOCHUS IV. (EPIPHANES, i.e. the brilliant, or Epimanes, i.e. the madman), usurps the throne. On his accession, he is called upon to arbitrate between the Jewish factions.—Onias III. being at Antioch to seek the king's aid in preserving the public peace, broken with bloodshed by Simon's faction which Apollonius governor of the province supported. With a contempt for the Jewish religion and manners, due to his education when a hostage at Rome, and tempted by his needs to sell his jurisdiction (cp. 2 Mac. 11. 3, 5), he betrays the king's trust, and Antiochus sells the high priesthood to his brother Joshua, the head of the Greek party, with leave to introduce the Greek civilization, and exchange the name 'Jews' for Antiochians. Joshua takes the Greek name JASON, and builds a gymnasium to educate the Jewish youth in Greek exercises; his party obliterate their marks of circumcision, &c., thus discouraging and perverting even the priests. Jason sends an offering to the festival (games) of Hercules (the Phœnician Melkarth or Meloch) at Tyre. MENELAUS, a Benjamite of the party, brother of Simon [187] (of Jason, Josephus), and a savage tyrant (cp. 2 Mac. 11. 3, 5), outside Jason, and is made high priest. Jason takes refuge with the Jews' ancestral foe, the Ammonites. To bribe the Syrian viceroy Menelaus, who rules the Temple; Onias III. protesting, Menelaus procures his execution, and later that of the Jews who denounced him to the king, for like abuses through his deputy in Jerusalem.
174.
171. 2 Mac. 4. 18, 19. Antiochus Epiphanes, tempted by the minority of PTOLEMY VI. (PHILOMETOR), invades Egypt (4 times), until stopped by Lamas the Roman ambassador. On the report of Antiochus' death, during his 2nd invasion, Jason captures Jerusalem, massacres his opponents, and bloodshed in the city; but Antiochus, an unsuccessful hunter, escapes through Egypt to Sparta, and dies there. Antiochus, instigating this outbreak, and the massacre thousands of Jews in cold blood, sparing neither sex nor age, and sells as many into slavery. Guided by Menelaus, he enters the Temple, carries off its precious vessels, fittings and furniture, and the money deposited in its treasury for safe keeping. He leaves Philip, a 'barbarous' Phrygian, as governor, Menelaus remaining high priest.
170. 39. Apollonius, his chief tribute-collector, sent by Antiochus with an army to massacre the surviving adults and sell the women and young men, treacherously seizes Jerusalem on the Sabbath, sacks and burns it, breaking down Nehemiah's wall. Apollonius (cp. 1 Mac. 6. 18) the 'city of David', i.e. the Akra or Acropolis (A. V. tower, straphoid, fortress on the height of Zion which commanded the Temple, as the Temple commanded the city, see B.C. 141). He lays the Temple waste.

| 1 | Mac. 6. 1. | Antiochus Epiphanes, foiled in Persia [166], and hearing of Judas' successes and consequent military strength and wealth, hastens homewards to make Jerusalem 'the Jews' burying place'; but stricken with a loathsome disease (eaten of worms, cp. Ac. 12. 25), recognises it as a judgment for his treatment of the Jews and the Temple, for which he would find make reparation. After making his foster-brother Philip viceroy and guardian of his son, he dies on the journey at Tabus. Judas proclaims Antiochus IV. Epiphanes V. (165), and the premier of Coele-Syria and Phoenicia, invades Judea with 120,000 men (incl. Greek mercenaries) and elephants bearing iron wooden towers, to relieve the Syrian garrison at Jerusalem, hard-pressed by Judas [166]. During the siege of Bethsura [165] Eleazar the Maccabee kills the largest elephant, supposing it the king's, and is crushed by it. The Jews retreat, Bethsura capitulates, and Lysias becomes the Temple. Supplies fail the Maccabees, owing to the Sabbatical year, but Lysias hearing of Philip's return to Antioch induces Antiochus to make peace with Judas, and grant the Jews their ancient liberties. Antiochus defortifies the Temple. The Romans [190] confirm this peace. |
| 2 | Mac. 9. | Antiochus executing Menelaus' murder of Ptolemy Philometor, the Syrian governor of Coele-Syria and Phoenicia, escapes from Rome [175] conquers, and executes Antiochus Eupator and Lysias. The 'ungodly' party, headed by the H.P. Alcimus, who had quitte Jerusalem with certain renegade Jews, denounces Judas Maccabeus to Demetrius. Bacchides governor E. of Euphrates, is sent to instal Alcimus, and put down Judas. The Assionians , trusting Alcimus as 'a son of Aaron', first make peace; Alcimus alienates them by faithlessly executing his chief opponents. Bacchides kills many others; but, after his departure, Alcimus' tyranny stimulates Judas' strength. Alcimus, taking refuge at Antioch, denounces Demetrius to the king's army under Nicanor. Easing to enter Judea, Nicanor attacks him, but is defeated at Capharsalama , and again at Beth-horon , where he is killed and his army dispersed by Judas. |
| 3 | Mac. 12. 3-8. | The 2nd book of Maccabees (obviously less accurate than the 1st) ends. |
| 4 | Mac. 12. 9-12. | During an interval of peace, Judas obtains an offensive and defensive alliance with Rome, but before receiving the Senate's decree, is killed in battle at Eleson near Beth-horon. |
| 5 | Mac. 12. 13-14. | The 'ungodly' party, encouraged by Judas' death and reinstated by Bacchides, persecutes and disperses Judas' adherents, whom the people, suffering by war and a great famine, desert. Judas, they rally under Judas' younger brother, Mattathias, and his five sons, the sons of E. Judas (Tekoa) John, the eldest, is slain, while conveying their property into Arabia [175]. They avenge his death, whereupon Bacchides drives Jonathan and Simon across the Jordan, and bridges Judea with Syrian garrisons, esp. Bethsura and Gazara (Gezer), entrusting noble Jews sons to the garrison on Zion , as hostages. Alcimus, while removing the partition wall between the sanctuary and court of the Gentiles, dies paralysed; Bacchides therefore withdraws to Antioch. (Acc. to Josephus , prob. in error, Judas surviving Alcimus, was made H. P. 'by the people'. The high priesthood certainly now devolved on the Ammonian family.) Peace ensues. |
| 6 | Mac. 12. 15-16. | Bacchides, recalled by the king, is defeated by Mattathias at Bethsura . Simon is appointed H. P. Bethsai, vents his disappointment on his inviters, and accepts Jonathan's overtures of peace. Jonathan 'judges' Israel from Michmash (6 years), and thence protects the Fious. |
| 7 | Mac. 12. 17-18. | Henceforward, rivals for the Syrian throne court Jonathan and his successors, and thus contribute to found and establish the Assionian dynasty of native high-priest-princes. |
| 8 | Mac. 12. 19-20. | Demetrius, preparing to attack Alexander Balas, pretended son of Antiochus Epiphanes [175, 162], acknowledged by Rome and welcomed at Ptolemais, empowers Jonathan to raise an army, and to receive the Jewish hostages from the garrison of Zion. Jonathan settles in Jerusalem, and begins fortifying it and the Temple, whereupon most of the Syrian garrisons flee and Jonathan's opponents take refuge in Bethsura. |
| 9 | Mac. 12. 21-22. | A. Balas then offers Jonathan the vacant high priesthood [169] and the insignia of a prince, apparently with a territory. JONATHAN assumes the sacred office at the P. of Tabernacles. |
| 10 | Mac. 12. 23-24. | Demetrius makes offers of honours and independence too lavish to be trusted. |
| 11 | Mac. 12. 25-26. | A. Balas defeats and kills Demetrius I. At his marriage in Ptolemais with Cleopatra, daughter of PTOLEMY VI. (PHILOMETOR), Balas makes Jonathan governor of a Syrian province. |
| 12 | Mac. 12. 27-28. | Jonathan, son of Demetrius I. (Soter), invades Cilicia from Crete, and, joined by Apollonius governor of Bithynia, he sends his brother Alcimus to challenge Jonathan, who with Simon captures Joppa and Azotus (Ashdod). Ascalon surrenders. Balas sends Alcimus to Cilicia, and Alcimus occupies the Syrian maritime cities [144] to Seleucia, the port of Antioch. Jonathan attends him from Joppa to the R. Eleutherus . Ptolemy transfers Cleopatra and his alliance to Demetrius, is crowned king of Syria & Egypt at Antioch, & defeats A. Balas, but lives only to receive the head of Balas, who had sought refuge in Arabia [68]. DEMETRIUS II. (NICATOR), reigns undisturbed. |
| 13 | Mac. 12. 29-30. | Meanwhile, Jonathan besieges the Syrian garrison in Zion. Summoned before Demetrius II. he ventures to Ptolemais with a delegation and presents, though pressing on the siege, and wins fresh honours and nearly all the concessions offered by [175]. |
| 14 | Mac. 12. 31-32. | Peace continuing, Demetrius retains his guards (Greek mercenaries, v. 32), but dismisses his native soldiery; their discontent tempts Tryphon, a discontented courtier, to concert with Simaluce the Arabian, his guardian, the restoration of A. Balas' youthful son [146] Antiochus. |
| 15 | Mac. 12. 33-34. | Jonathan obtains Demetrius' promise to withdraw the Syrian garrisons from Zion, acc. to v. 33, bodyguard of Jews, which (3000) saves Demetrius' kingdom and life when Antioch rose against him, but Demetrius evades his promise and even 'troubled' Jonathan 'very sore'. |
| 16 | Mac. 12. 35-36. | Jonathan, after a phony Syrian crown, is driven to Ptolemais, where he is besieged by Antiochus' soldiery, defeat Demetrius (who takes refuge in Parthia), and is driven to Tyre. To save Jonathan, Antiochus adds royal state to Demetrius' concessions [145], and appoints his brother Simon captain of the Palestinian sea-board. Jonathan captures for Antiochus the Syrian cities from Ascalon to Damascus, defeating Demetrius' adherents. Simon takes Bethsura. |
| 17 | Mac. 12. 37-38. | Jonathan revives the Maccabean alliances with Sparta and Rome. On the retirement of Demetrius' army from the land of Amathis, Jonathan invades Nabathæan Arabia, and returning by Damascus, again overruns Syria, while Simon secures Philistia and Joppa. Jonathan, on his return, induces the Jews to fortify the Jerusalem city walls, to raise and renew the walls of Jerusalem, and cut off the garrison on Zion from the city, except by a great rampart. |
| 18 | Mac. 12. 39-40. | Tryphon, aiming at the Syrian throne, lures Jonathan into Ptolemais and captures him. |
| 19 | Mac. 12. 41-42. | The neighbouring nations and Tryphon attacking the Jews, they elect SIMON, Jonathan's brother, the only surviving Maccabee, leader; he completes the fortifications of Jerusalem, secures Joppa, and foils Tryphon's attempts to invade Judea and relieve the garrison in Zion. After sincere negotiations for Jonathan's release, Tryphon puts him to death in Gilead. |
| 20 | Mac. 12. 43-44. | At Medin, Simon erects a monument to his parents and brothers, and re-installs Jonathan's adherents in the Syrian throne. |
| 21 | Mac. 12. 45-46. | TRYPHON's army, which had been sent to Syria to strengthen the Syrian throne, is defeated by Jonathan, who, strengthened by the Maccabees' alliance with Rome, recognises Simon as H. P. and grants Judea complete amnesty, and immunity from tax and tribute. Simon captures Gaza. Zion surrenders. Thus Judea is freed from Syria [128]. |
| 22 | Mac. 12. 47-48. | Era of Jewish independence (v. 42). |
| 23 | Mac. 12. 49-50. | Judea enjoys peace and prosperity under Simon. He reforms religion, enriches the temple, re-fortifies Zion and Jerusalem, revives commerce through Joppa, and renews the league with Sparta and Rome. He reduces Zion, i.e. the hill of 'the city of David', to the level of the Temple-platform (see the 10-1). The Jews re-adopt the religion of their fathers, and the Jewish settlement of the government and high priesthood on Simon and his heirs for ever (i.e. and there should arise a faithful prophet, i.e. the expected Messiah), on brass tablets on mount Zion. |
| 24 | Mac. 12. 51-52. | Demetrius, captive of Arsaces King Parthia [14, 12] marries his daughter. Demetrius with Cleopatra, enraged, offers herself to his brother ASTIOCHUS VII. (SIDETES), who, preparing to invade Syria, confirms all previous concessions to Simon, and adds the sovereign right of exchequer. (See |

280.	1 Mac. 15. 10.	Money , J. Antiochus, joined by Tryphon's discontented army, besieges him in Dora (Dor), but refuses Simon's aid, and in spite of the Roman prohibition and his own grant [145] turns against the Jews. After the mission of Athenobius (whom Simon's magnificence astounded), he sends Cendebeus, made captain of the sea-board [105] in Simon's stead, to demand Joppa and Gazara, and to harass Judaea, himself pursuing Tryphon, escaped by sea. Simon's sons, John and Judas, free Judaea from Cendebeus.
300.	11.	Ptolemaeus, Simon's son-in-law, aspiring to the sovereignty, assassinates Simon and 2 of his sons. He offers to surrender Judaea to Antiochus, but fails to seize Zion and Gazara and to kill John (Hyrcanus), Simon's eldest son, who, occupying Jerusalem, succeeds his father [141].
320.	130.	The First Book of Maccabees ends; the authority henceforward is Josephus.
325.	131.	JOHN HYRCANUS surrenders Jerusalem after a protracted siege to Antiochus, for his moderation and Asclepiades (Plous). Antiochus dying in his Parthian expedition [141], J. Hyrcanus frees Judaea finally from Syria. He amasses great wealth, and builds the castle Baris [see c. 26]. The Jews maintain their independence in alliance with Rome—Egypt and Syria henceforward enfeebled by wars of succession, and the Parthian Empire being undeveloped.
330.	132.	Attacking successively the Jews' inveterate border-foes, J. Hyrcanus begins the conquest of the trans-Jordanic districts, destroys Shechem and the temple on Gerasim [332], and conquering the Idumeans merges them by compulsory proselytism in the Jewish nation [164; 68]. His sons, Aristobolus and Antigonus, obliterate Samarria after a year's siege; meanwhile, a Syrian general betrays the strongholds of Galilee. The independence of Judaea, now nearly co-extensive with the ancient Jewish kingdom of Jordan, is recognised by the Syrian king.
340.	133.	Religious differences had ripened into factions (see Jewish Sects). The Zealots , and self-devoted Chasidim had degenerated into the Pharisees —haughty, tyrannical, censorious, yet the popular party, and the opponents in politics and doctrine of the aristocratic and sceptical Sadducees . At this climax of restored Jewish power, Hyrcanus abandons the Pharisees , and, representing their practices ('traditions'), joins the Sadducees . Henceforward, party spirit, ambitious and selfish, is the rule.
350.	134.	Their names indicate the Greek proclivities of Hyrcanus's sons; ARISTOBOLUS I., his successor, is even called Phil-Hellen. He assumes the title of KING (the first so called since the Babylonian captivity), annexes and proselytises Ituraea (along Hermon's S.E. base), and dies of remorse after the murder of his favourite brother Antigonus. Aristobolus' brother, ALEXANDER JANNÆUS, murders his younger brother and begins aggressive wars. The Egyptian alliance and Syrian civil wars enable him to annex the unconquered cities of the sea-board (except Ptolemais), of the interior, and trans-Jordanic provinces, thus completing the conquest of the territory of the 12 Tribes, and withstanding the great reverses, and successive invasions by Ptolemy Lathyrus king of Cyprus (when Cleopatra, queen of Egypt saved the kingdom), by Demetrius III., and Antiochus Dionysius, kings of Damascus, and by Aretas king of Arabia Petraea [164], now very powerful through Syria's disintegration and civil wars, and by commerce. Tigranes k. of Armenia , seizes Syria, and retains it until defeated by Lucullus b.c. 69.
360.	135.	To overawe the Pharisees and people, A. Jannæus hires a body guard of Psidians and Cilicians . The Arabians defeating him in Gaulonitis (Golan), the Jews rebel (6 yrs.), and call in Demetrius Eucerus king of Damascus, who destroys A. Jannæus' body guard at Shechem and expels him. After Demetrius' withdrawal, he recovers, and crucifies Sotades , his opponent; the rest going into exile, peace ensues. A. Jannæus leaves his kingdom to his wife, Salome (Sal. Alexandra), bidding her restore their ascendancy to the Pharisees .
370.	136.	ALEXANDRA makes her elder son HYRCANUS II. H.P., and rules through the Pharisees . Over-awing the neighbouring kings by her army and mercenaries, she commands peace (6 yrs.). A. Jannæus' displaced adherents obtain the fortresses for their protection from the Pharisees , and during Alexandra's last illness, join Aristobolus her younger son (become the army's favourite), and while Antipater (Damascus) is planning a revolution, HYRCANUS, whose succession is disputed by his stronger-minded brother, ARISTOBOLUS II., on the defeat of the Pharisees forces, resigns the high priesthood and crown after 3 months' tenure, and lives a retired life.
380.	137.	Antipater , an Idumean, father of Herod, induces Hyrcanus to escape to Aretas king of Petra [164], and Aretas to reinstate him; the Jews join them. Aristobolus is besieged in the Temple. Pompey sends Scarus into Syria, and (after finally defeating Mithridates and his ally Tigranes in Armenia), annexes Syria to Rome, because 'an insufficient barrier against Armenia and the Parthians'; deposing the last Seleucid king, Antiochus XIII. Scarus, receiving rival offers of aid from the 2 brothers, decides for Aristobolus, and, for aiding him, the siege.
390.	138.	Pompey receives their ambassadors at Damascus, but decides to arbitrate between the brothers at Jerusalem. Aristobolus, anticipating a result adverse to himself, prepares Jerusalem for a siege. Pompey captures the Temple on a Sabbath, after 3 months' siege. 12,000 Jews are massacred and the fortifications dismantled. Pompey enters the Holy of Holies, but respects the treasures. He reinstates Hyrcanus as high priest, but as ethnarch only of Judaea proper (Judah and Benjamin) and tributary to Rome, annexing Galilee to Roman Syria (Euphrate to Egypt), under Scarus , and organising Samarria independently. Prisoners taken with Aristobolus and his 2 sons to grace Pompey's triumph, found the Jewish colony at Rome.
400.	139.	Gabinus, pro-consul of Syria, reorganizes Judaea, abolishing the high priest's civil power (nominally restored, b.c. 44). Alexander, and, later, his father Aristobolus and brother Antigonus, escape; but Gabinus suppresses their revolts, which only strengthen Antipater.
410.	140.	Crassus, the triumvir, robs the Temple before invading Parthia, which now threatens Syria. Julius Cesar sends Aristobolus to create a diversion in Syria against Pompey; he is poisoned on the way, and Seldius executes Antiochus. Antiochus orders the execution.
420.	141.	Pompey is defeated at Pharsalia . Julius Cesar, for his services in Egypt against Pompey, makes ANTIPATER a Roman citizen, and procurator of Judaea, Samaria and Galilee (with leave to fortify Jerusalem, b.c. 44)—Hyrcanus remaining high priest and ethnarch. Henceforward the Herodian supplants the Amonæan family.
430.	142.	Antipater advances his sons, making Phasael governor of Jerusalem, and Herod tetrarch of Galilee. Herod distinguishes himself by suppressing the Galilean banditti, and defying Hyrcanus and the Jewish council (Sanhedrin) with the aid of Sextus Cesar, pro-consul of Syria. After Julius Cesar's assassination, b.c. 44, Herod, with characteristic address, wins the conspiracy Cassius, the new pro-consul. Malichus, an adherent of Hyrcanus, to sustain him and the Amonæans against the encroachments of a 'half-Jew' (Idumean, see b.c. 109), poisons Antipater, whose sons, Phasael and Herod, procure Malichus' assassination, but, after Cassius' march against Antipater, are left without Roman support. Malichus' faction, headed by Antigonus, courts Hyrcanus, but Herod's betrothal to Hyrcanus' granddaughter, the Amonæan princess Mariamme , conciliates the king and nation.
440.	143.	The Triumvir partitions the Roman province. Antony undertakes those E. of the Adriatic—won by the defeat of Brutus and Cassius at Philippi . Though denounced to Antony by the party of Antiochus, Herod's bribes and personal influence gain Palestine for himself and Phasael as Tetrarchs, nominally under Hyrcanus, as king.
450.	144.	Antony being in Egypt with Cleopatra, the Parthians overrun Phœnicia and Palestine. Antigonus, buying their support, seizes part of Jerusalem. Hyrcanus and Phasael accepting the Parthians' arbitration, are imprisoned. Herod escapes with his family, and Mariamme and Alexandra her mother, to the fortress Masada , W. of the Dead Sea. Phasael dies.
460.	145.	ANTIGONUS disqualifies Hyrcanus for the high priesthood by mutilation, and usurps it with the throne. Hyrcanus, sent captive into Parthia, is welcomed by the numerous Babylonian Jews. Herod, refusing the command of Cleopatra's army, visits Rome. Welcomed by Antony, he ostensibly advocates with the Triumvirate the claims of Mariamme's brother Aristobolus (grandson of Aristobolus II.) heir of both Amonæan families; the Senate makes Herod king of the Jews. The Parthians abandon Antigonus, and are expelled by Ventidius; meanwhile, Herod con-

The Herodian kingdom—36.	37.	Joe. Ant. 14. 10.	quers Galilee and defeats Antigonus. In a 3rd campaign, Bodus, by Antony's orders, assists Herod to capture Antigonus with Jerusalem after a 7 month's siege—during which he married Mariamne. Herod destroys the leading Antiochians, including all the Greater Sanhedrin but two, and bribes Antony to behead Antigonus, the last Asmonean priest-king, at Antioch.
		Joe. Ant. 15. 1.	HEROD THE GREAT durst not assume the High Priesthood; henceforward it is separated from the civil power, which (native or Roman) bestows and recalls it at will. Hyrcanus II. returns, but as he is disqualified, Herod appoints a Babylonian of high-priestly family, ANANIAS. But Mariamne's importunity and the intrigues of Aristobolus' mother, Alexandra, win the day, and Cleopatra, called Herod to spend a winter at Antioch, III. aged 17, causes Aristobolus' murder (while bathing), whereupon Alexandria appeals through Cleopatra to Antony, who summons Herod to Laodicea; but Herod unexpectedly wins over his judges, though Cleopatra asked for Judaea and Herod's life. (Herod even urged Antony to kill her as his bane.) Herod's family divides into Herodian and Asmonean factions. [29.]
	38.	Joe. Ant. 15. 2. 4.	Octavian defeats Antony and Cleopatra at Actium, and pursues them to Egypt, where both die. Herod executes Hyrcanus II., aged 80, and meeting Octavian at Rhodes, sends his friend, Ptolemy, to confirm in his kinship, which Octavian, after conferring Egypt, Cyrenæ, and Judaea, restores the balsam-region of Jericho and the sea-board (given by Antony to Cleopatra), and the inland fortresses. Herod's kingdom thus includes Judaea, Samaria, Galilee, Perea, Idumæa.
39.	39.	Joe. Ant. 15. 7. 3.	Herod, in a fit of suspicion, aggravated by his mother and sister Salome, executes Mariamne to his undying remorse; also, her mother Alexandra, (& the survivors of Hyrcanus' family, A.D. 20).
	40.	Joe. Ant. 15. 8.	Octavian receives from the Senate the title Augustus , i.e. divine honours, and Syria as one of the imperial provinces.—Herod apparently aims at founding a dynasty, and even an Oriental Empire, not less than Solomon's, by Roman support, and the Jews' enthusiastic welcome. To flatter Augustus, and to 'counterbalance the Jews' turbulent and exclusive spirit' by a strong Grecian party, or to gradually break it down by reconciling them to Greek and Roman customs, Herod introduces theatres and amphitheatres, games, and gladiatorial shows, even at Jerusalem. His innovations provoke resistance, esp. by the Pharisees.
	41.	Joe. Ant. 15. 9.	Ten Zealots conspire to kill Herod. He re-fortifies the Barris of John Hyrcanus, adjacent to the Temple, calling it Antonia ('castle', Acts 24. 18); bridges the kingdom with fortresses, and fortifying Samaria (108, rebuilt by Gubinius, A.D. 57), re-peopling Herod builds a splendid palace on the W. hill, beside after Augustus. His liberality in a famine conciliates the Jews.
42.	42.	Joe. Ant. 15. 10. 1.	Herod takes Mariamne's sons to Augustus at Rome for education, as if his heirs, and receives Ituraea , Trachonitis , and Batanea , with power to bequeath his kingdom. The succession, thus made an open question, causes fresh intrigues in his family.—The favour of Augustus and his minister Agrippa, who reckon Herod next after themselves in the Empire, revives the Jews' suspicions and antagonism, which Herod's subsequent building of Temples (esp. on Mt. Gerizim, A.D. 18; see 109) and patronage of the decaying Olympic games, strengthen Herod's despotic rule.
	43.	Joe. Ant. 15. 10. 3.	Augustus personally organizes the E. provinces: the Gadarenes denounce Herod, but he is made joint-procurator of Syria, and Perea is given to Pheroras his brother as Tetrarch . Herod remits taxes, and begins to restore Zerubbabel's Temple to the dimensions and splendour of Solomon's: see Sects, Herodians —Agrippa II. completed it 5 years before its demolition.
	44.	Joe. Ant. 15. 11. 1.	Herod brings Mariamne's sons, Alexander and Aristobolus, from Rome. The Jews' enthusiastic reception revives the intrigues of Salome, &c., lest hereafter they avenged their mother.
45.	45.	Joe. Ant. 16. 2. 1.	Agrippa visits Jerusalem. Herod visits him at Sinope, and returning with him overland to Ephesus, wins for the Jews of Ionia, i.e. pro-consular Asia, the confirmation of their liberties.
	46.	Joe. Ant. 16. 3. 2.	On his return, Salome and Pheroras at length reveal Herod's suspicions, and he recalls his eldest son Antipater from Rome 'as a counterpoise to the popularity and hopes' of Mariamne's sons. Antipater gradually supplants them, and is sent with Agrippa to Augustus, who at Aquileia reconciles Mariamne's sons and Herod, who accused them of designs on his life.
	47.	Joe. Ant. 16. 4. 1.	Herod declares Antipater his heir, with reversion to Alexander and Aristobolus. Salome's daughter bears Herod Agrippa, and Aristobolus is banished to Rome. Herod's suspicion, supported by Syllaeus, alienates Augustus awhile; but only Herod's growing domestic difficulties prevent Augustus ceding Arabia Petraea to him, in which Augustus confirms Aræas .
48.	48.	Joe. Ant. 16. 11. 1.	Mariamne's sons, condemned by a special council at Berytus (Byzant), on Herod's accusation, are strangled. The nation and army loathe Antipater as their murderer, who, though virtually king, retires to Rome, bearing a will making him heir, with reversion to Herod Philip.
	49.	Joe. Ant. 17. 1. 1.	The census or registration of the Roman world (Lk. 2. 1) begins. 7000 Pharisæes refuse the oath of allegiance to Herod and Jesus. The Jews appeal against the tyranny and disorders of Archelaus' reign; Augustus banishes him part of Rome.
	50.	Joe. Ant. 17. 4. 3.	Herod's death being reported, the Roman eagle above the great gate of the Temple is torn down; Herod burns the offenders alive. He orders Antipater's execution, and by a new will divides his kingdom among his 3 youngest surviving sons, five days before his death; bequeathing a kingdom of Judaea, Samaria, Idumæa, to Archelaus, and tetrarchies to H. Antipas (Galilee and Perea), and to Philip (Ituraea, Gaulonitis, Trachonitis, Batanea).
51.	51.	Joe. Ant. 17. 5.	Archelaus promises reform of grievances and taxation, but massacres 3000 Zealots, who, during the Passover, demand vengeance for the victims in the matter of the eagle.
	52.	Joe. Ant. 17. 8.	Whilest Herod's family await at Antioch, Syria under a procurator, and at Caesarea, under Judas of Galilee, plunge Palestine (Samaria excepted) into anarchy and bloodshed. At length Varus, legatus of Syria, restores order with fire and sword, crucifying 3000 Jews in Jerusalem.
	53.	Joe. Ant. 17. 10.	A Jewish embassy intreats Augustus to dethrone the Herodian family. Augustus confirms the will, but makes Archelaus Ethnarch only; his unexpected succession [5] causes Joseph, returning from Egypt, to bring up JESUS at Nazareth in the tetrarchy of the gentler Antipas.
54.	54.	Joe. Ant. 17. 11.	The Jews appeal against the tyranny and disorders of Archelaus' reign; Augustus banishes him part of Rome. Syria under a procurator, and at Caesarea, under Judas of Galilee, plunge Palestine (Samaria excepted) into anarchy and bloodshed. At length Varus, legatus of Syria, restores order with fire and sword, crucifying 3000 Jews in Jerusalem.

57.	57.	Joe. Ant. 18. 1.	Quirinus, again legatus of Syria, makes a taxing-census of the Ethnarchy, which, and the consequent Roman tolls, taxes, and tribute (see Tribute, 2, under Money), the Jews regard as a profanation or mark of slavery (see Publicans). The outbreaks are renewed; (see Jewish Sects, 'Zealots', 'Galileans'). To conciliate the Jews, Quirinus makes Ananias H.P.

JEWISH SECTS AND ORDERS.

BY THE REV. S. G. GREEN, D.D.,

Co-editor of the "Revised English Bible."

THE so-called sects of Judaism did not consist, as in other communities, of dissidents from the main body on grounds of doctrine or discipline, but were composed of outward conformists, who strove, by one method or another, to give intenser expression to its principles and life. The word "Order", as applied e.g. to the Jesuits in the Roman Church, would nearly, though not altogether, describe their position. Some communities also, which, although not of the Ten Tribes, held various relations of affinity with the chosen people, are sometimes known as "Sects". As the word is convenient it may be retained, provided that the wide variety of its applications is borne in mind.

The following scheme exhibits at one view the main divisions which existed in Scripture times.

I. THE KENITES.

We read of "Kenites" among the inhabitants of Canaan in the days of Abraham (Gen. xv. 19). The name (like our Smith) seems originally to have denoted a worker in metals (Gesenius, Thesaurus, sub voce), and may have arisen from some speciality of the tribe in work or warfare. They were evidently a nomad race, and we next meet with them in the land of Midian, the Sinaitic peninsula; Jethro, the Midianite priest, whose daughter Moses espoused (Exod. iii. 1), being also a Kenite (Judg. i. 16). For a time, then, the Kenites had cast in their lot with the descendants of Keturah; but they afterwards followed the destinies of Israel, influenced no doubt by their connection with the great lawgiver. Balaam in his prophecy refers to the Kenite tents as on the outskirts of the Israelite camp (Num. xxiv. 21). Jethro himself declined to follow his son-in-law to Canaan, but his son Hobab seems, after some hesitation, to have remained with Moses (Exod. xviii. 27; Num. x. 29, 32); and the clan eventually occupied "the wilderness" in the south of Judah, dwelling in tents, although in close and recognised alliance with the Israelite community—in fact a kind of pipery race. As circumstances might dictate, they would pass from spot to spot; and we meet with a Kenite settlement in the uplands of Naphtali, to the north, mentioned in the history on account of Jael's exploit (Judg. iv. 11, 17); while in after days mention is made of Kenites as dispersed among the Amalekites of the Negeb or South Country (1 Sam. xv. 6; see also xvii. 10). They ranked among the friends of David when a fugitive from Saul; and through all changes were faithful to the religion of Israel.

II. THE RECHABITES.

After the days of David we read no more of the Kenites under that name; and the foregoing notices of their existence and virtual incorporation with Israel might have escaped attention but for a remarkable offshoot of the clan in the family of Rechabites. In 1 Chron. ii. 55, certain families of Kenites dwelling at

Jaber (probably in S. Judah) are described as descendants of one Hemath, "father of the house of Rechab". Whether Rechab is a proper name, or an appellative signifying "rider", and denoting the habits of the community, is not quite clear. No personage of the name is mentioned elsewhere in Scripture; but Jehonadab or Jonadab the son of Rechab appears in the days of Jehu's great uprising against the family of Ahab, as taking a stern and decisive part in the suppression of idolatry (2 Kings x. 15, 23). As we learn from Jer. xxxv., Jonadab reorganized the Kenites, or a portion of them, into an ascetic community, pledged by stringent vows neither to dwell in cities, to build houses, nor cultivate land, but to maintain a nomad life, and especially to abstain from wine and strong drink. In the days of Nebuchadnezzar, however, the approach of the Babylonian armies compelled these Rechabites to escape from their tents for safety into Jerusalem. For the sake of a lesson to the people, Jeremiah was directed to test their fidelity. Driven from their wandering life, might not the disciples of Jonadab suppose themselves discharged from their ascetic vows, or at any rate seize the opportunity of release? Vessels of wine were set before them in the Temple, and they were bidden to drink. They firmly refused; and the prophet takes occasion to impress upon the people of Judah the much-needed lesson of faithfulness to principle, adding at the same time the promise of Jehovah that the Rechabites should "stand before Him" continually, in other words, "should minister in some capacity in His Temple." The nature of this ministry we can only conjecture. In 1 Chron. ii. 55 the Rechabites appear as "scribes"; in the LXX. inscription to Psalm lxxi., they are given rank among the sweet singers of Israel. It appears certain that from the era of the captivity the nomad life was to some extent renounced, seeing that a son of Rechab is found co-operating with the priests and rulers in rebuilding the wall of Jerusalem (Neh. iii. 14). It may be added that at a much later period the historian Hegesippus, as preserved by Eusebius, in describing the martyrdom of St. James the "brother of the Lord", writes that "one of the priests, the sons of Rechab, who are mentioned by Jeremiah the prophet", cried out against the crime (see Smith's Dict. Bible, art. "Rechabites", by Professor Plumptre). On the whole there seems satisfactory evidence that a place in the sanctuary itself was given to these descendants of an alien and wandering people. The subsequent history of the Rechabites is unknown; the reports of travellers who profess to have discovered their traces are hardly conclusive, while warranting further research into this interesting by-way of Scripture history.

III. THE SAMARITANS.

During the later age of the separate kingdom of Israel, the name of Samaria, its capital, was often employed to denote the nation (Isa. vii. 9; Jer. xlii. 13; Ezek. xvi. 46, etc.). When, therefore, another community had usurped the place of the Ten Tribes, it was natural to apply to them the name of "Samaritans". The word, however, is found only once in the Old Testament (2 Kings xvii. 29). This community was in its origin mainly or wholly heathen, consisting—at any rate chiefly—of immigrants from five provinces of Assyria, sent by Sennacherib (probably under the convoy of one of his generals, Amapper, Ezra iv. 10), to colonize the districts from which the Israelites had been deported. In the earlier period of their residence, the land which had long been waste and unpeopled was ravaged by lions. This the settlers rightly interpreted as betokening the anger of the unknown tutelary "God of the land", and in answer to their solicitations a captive-priest was sent from Assyria to instruct them. He fixed his abode at Bethel, but taught them no more than to combine the worship of Jehovah with that of their own ancestral idols. "They feared the Lord, and served their own gods" (2 Kings xvii. 33).

This motley religion endured for some generations, but the worship of the old Assyrian and Babylonian deities seems gradually to have died out, partly, no doubt, from the influence of the Israelitish remnant still scattered through the land—such men as, after the destruction of Jerusalem a century later, came "from Shechem, from Shiloh, and from Samaria" to worship and to mourn at Mizpah with their brethren of Judah (Jer. xli. 5; compare 2 Chron. xxxiv. 6, 9). Notwithstanding the arguments of Hengstenberg and others, the opinion that the survivors of the Ten Tribes in the course of time coalesced with the descendants of the Assyrian settlers, and that the Samaritans had in part an Israelitish origin, seems defensible on all rational and Scriptural grounds.

When the decree of Cyrus restored Jerusalem to the Jewish exiles in Babylon, they found a considerable community in the northern part of the kingdom who claimed to worship the God of Abraham, and proffered their assistance to Joshua and Zerubbabel in the erection of the Temple. The Jewish leaders decisively repulsed them, feeling the danger of admitting so mixed a community into the commonwealth of Israel. Their alliance being thus refused, they became thenceforth the bitterest adversaries of Judah (Ezra iv. 1-5). This hostility broke out in the days of Nehemiah, when Sanballat of Beth-horon (a Samaritan city near the frontier), with Tobiah, an Ammonite slave, long harassed the Jews with malignant opposition of every kind; ending all however, after Nehemiah's departure, by specious advances towards reconciliation. For the good and patriotic governor, returning, found to his amazement that Tobiah was installed in lodgings within the Temple precinct, and that Sanballat had given his daughter in marriage to a grandson of the high priest. It was impossible for Nehemiah to come to terms with the former enemies of God's people. For an Ammonite to be established in the sanctuary was a profanation. Tobiah and the high priest's grandson (Manasseh, Jos. Ant. xi. 7. § 2) were summarily expelled (Neh. xiii. 4-9, 28, 29), and the breach between Jews and Samaritans became irreparable. [But Josephus makes Manasseh brother to Jaddus H. P., placing him in B.C. 333, a second Sanballat being Manasseh's father-in-law.]

Manasseh soon assumed the priesthood in Samaria (about B.C. 408), establishing there an organized religious community. Mount Gerizim, in time long past held in honour as one of the "holy places" in Palestine, was selected as the centre of the new worship; and, by permission of the Persian king Darius Nothus, a temple was there reared to Jehovah. Soon this was declared to be the place which God had chosen, and dextrous alterations of the Pentateuch were made to favour the assumption. The Law of Moses, without the after histories or the prophetic books, was taken as the text-book of the Samaritan faith; and breaking by degrees from the old idolatrous admixture, the schismatic community laid claim to a stricter worship and a more rigorous orthodoxy even than prevailed at Jerusalem. From time to time disaffected Jews, leaving their own community, seceded to Gerizim, and the number deepened as time went on.

When Antiochus Epiphanes (about B.C. 175) made his famous attempt to Hellenize and paganize the Jews, the Samaritans revealed the spuriousness of their faith by their ready submission to the tyrant (Jos. Ant. xii. 5, sec. 5). This placed them in deadly opposition to the Jewish patriot party, which, under John Hyrcanus the Maccabee, destroyed Samaria and the temple of Gerizim, B.C. 130 (Jos. Ant. xiii. 9, sec. 1). But the altar remained, the spirit of the sect was unbroken, and the old animosity subsisted in all its force down to the time of our Lord. To the Jews the Samaritan was still a "stranger" (alien, Luke xvii. 18; see also Matt. x. 5, 6). In travelling from Galilee to Judaea, no Jew, if he could help it, would pass through Samaria, but would take the road on the eastern side of the Jordan. When members of the two communities met, angry strife was sure to arise (Luke ix. 52-54), often leading to bloodshed. No name of scorn was more bitter in Jerusalem than that of Samaritan (Joh. viii. 48). All this gives point to our Lord's repeated lessons of brotherly-kindness (Luke x. 33, etc.); and it is interesting to find that one of the disciples who was for calling down fire from heaven to destroy the Samaritans who rejected Christ, himself preached the Gospel afterwards in many Samaritan villages (Luke ix. 44 comp. with Acts viii. 25).

Through all generations and amid every change the Samaritans have remained in their ancestral abode of Nablous (Neapolis, the ancient Shechem), with their altar and their sacrifices upon Mount Gerizim. They are now "the oldest and the smallest sect in the world" (Dean Stanley), and preserve their edition of the Pentateuch, in its old Hebrew character, with religious care. There has been much discussion as to this relic of antiquity; and if, as seems most probable, it represents the Law as handed down among the Ten Tribes from the days of the disruption under Jeroboam, the fact effectually disposes of modern theories as to the late origin of the "Five Books". The subject is one that cannot here be discussed, but it deserves and will doubtless receive further elucidation.

IV. NAZARITES.

Strictly speaking, the Nazirite (from Heb. נָזִיר, "to separate") formed no community, their vows and obligations being distinctly personal. The rules for this kind of separation are given in Num. vi.; and from the manner of their introduction, seem to recognize the order as already existing. Some have thought, but on scarcely sufficient authority, that it was borrowed by the Jews from the Egyptians. The principle of the Nazirite vow evidently was that of consecration to God; the temporary and outward "separateness" testifying to the life-long universal obligation. The symbolic accompaniments of the vow were extremely simple, demanding no seclusion nor engrossing observances, and in no way interfering with the ordinary duties of life. To abstain from strong drink, as well as from the fruit of the vine in every shape, to allow the hair to grow, and not to approach the dead—such was the threefold rule for man or woman; and the long hair would be the only very noticeable token of the vow. The "days of separation" might be many or few, according to the wish or conscience of the Nazirite. Jewish writers tell us that the usual period was thirty days, but vows were occasionally made for sixty or a hundred days, and even for a longer time (see the case of Hielea, queen of Adiabene; Smith's Dict. Bible, art. "Nazirite"). At the expiration of the vow, the Nazirite had to present himself at the altar with a complete series of offerings; he parted also with his locks, which were burned in the fire of the sacrifice. The meaning of this ceremonial was twofold, including on the one hand release from the special restrictions to which he had been subjected; but on the other, that dedication to a life of piety and holiness of which all sacrifices were the symbol.

JEWISH SECTS AND ORDERS.

In the Nazarite vow, accordingly, there was a sacramental consecration of all life to God; it was peculiarly appropriate therefore to youth; and scanty as are the details furnished by Scripture on the subject, there are hints that this was the period of life usually chosen for the vow. See Amos ii. 11; also the touching lament of Jeremiah (Lam. iv. 7): "Her Nazarites were purer than snow, they were whiter than milk, they were more ruddy in body than rubies, their polishing was of sapphire" (comp. Ps. cxliv. 18 "that our daughters may be as corner stones, polished after the similitude of a palace"). A striking similarity exists between the symbols of Nazarite and those of high-priestly dedication (Lev. xxi. 16-17, where the word rendered crown is the same as that used in Num. vi. 19 for the long hair of the Nazarite). The separated one would thus be reminded of the great ideal of a holy life—a priestly self-dedication to God. See Exod. xix. 6; Isa. lxi. 6.

A distinction is made by Jewish writers between a "Nazarite of days" and a "Nazarite for life". The latter were those dedicated from infancy, for a special purpose, to a life-long observance of the Nazarite vow. Such were Samson (the only one actually called "a Nazarite" in Scripture (Judg. xiii. 7); also Samuel (1 Sam. i. 11), and John the Baptist (Luke i. 15). James "the Lord's brother" is represented by tradition as a Nazarite. Whether this particular form of dedication was customary in earlier or later times we are not able to decide on the authority of Scripture. "Ewald supposes that Nazarites for life were numerous in very early times, and that they multiplied in periods of great political and religious excitement". The references in Scripture and the Apocrypha (Amos ii. 11, 12; 1 Macc. iii. 49), seem to refer to the "Nazarites of days". In the history of the Apostle Paul we read of four persons of this class, in whose votive observances he himself took part (Acts xxi. 23, 24, 26); while the vow at Cenchreae (Acts xviii. 18) was evidently of another kind.

It is scarcely necessary to mention that the word Nazarite and Nazarene have no relation to each other. The letter "s" in the two is radically different in Hebrew (שׁ and נ). "Jesus of Nazareth" was not "a Nazarite," as He Himself suggests (Matt. x. 18, 19) in contrast with His forerunner John.

PHARISEES, SADDUCEES, AND ESSENES.

(The Chasidim.)

The era of the Jewish captivity, writes the late Emanuel Deutsch, was "one of the most mysterious and momentous periods in the history of humanity. What were the influences brought to bear upon the captives during that time, we know not. But this we know, that from a reckless, lawless, godless populace, they returned transformed into a band of Puritans". One result of this revival of the Israelite faith, was the firm and organized stand henceforth made against the efforts of their successive heathen rulers to denationalize and paganize the nation. It is true that some in high places were unable to resist the seduction. Thus, under the influence of Antiochus Epiphanes, king of Syria (s.c. 175-164), the very high priest, Jason by name, introduced Pagan rites into Jerusalem, and sent offerings to Hercules, the god of Tyre. This disgraceful period was afterwards appropriately spoken of as the time of "the mingling". But the heart of the nation was true, and the noble struggles of the Maccabees against the tyrant are familiar to all readers of Jewish history. In connection with the prolonged contest we meet with a fraternity under the name of Assideans, described as mighty men of Israel "voluntarily devoted to the Law" (1 Macc. ii. 42; vii. 13; 2 Macc. xiv. 6). Evidently this appellation stands for the Hebrew Chasidim, "Pious" or, to adopt a modern term, "Pietists". From this fraternity, whose common bond of union was a resolution to devote their lives to the upholding of the Law in its integrity, appear to have sprung, directly or indirectly, the three great "sects" of after time—the PHARISEES, the SADDUCEES, and the ESSENES. Widely as these diverged from one another in after time, and bitter as were their mutual controversies, they all started from the same point—a firm adherence to the national faith. But while the Pharisees, laying their chief stress upon exact observance, were led to formalism and an exaggerated estimate of the authority of the Fathers, the Sadducees, taking morality as their watchword, lost all sense of the supernatural, while the Essenes, whose great principle was self-control, were led into a mystical and unprofitable asceticism. Only the two former sects are mentioned in the New Testament, although there are clear traces of the third: Josephus has much to say upon them all.

V. THE PHARISEES.

In opposition to the "mingling", of which we have spoken above, arose the brotherhood of the "Distinct" or "Separatists" (*gymnasia). When in the Greek form of the word "Pharisees". Where or how the fraternity assumed its shape, we cannot accurately tell. The first mention of it is among the events of b.c. 108, when the body was already powerful and of great repute (Jos. Ant. xii. 10, sec. 5). A commission had been appointed by authority of John Hyrcanus to enquire how far the Divine law of religious contributions was observed by the people; and the Pharisees bound themselves to pay all tithes before the use or sale of any commodity. Another point of special agreement related to the avoidance of all uncleanness, in regard to which a multitude of rules were laid down, many of which were minute and puerile. To these two characteristics of Pharisaism our Lord alludes (Matt. xxiii. 23, 25). But the chief point of distinction lay in the regard paid by the Pharisees to the oral law, a series of unwritten interpretations of the Divine oracles handed down from doctor to doctor, and forming an elaborate system extending to every detail of worship and of life. The "traditions of the elders" thus spun around God's Word a web of intricate refinement; and while professing to "fence the Law", or to lessen the risk of breaking it, became in the multiplicity of subtle distinctions and vexatious rules an oppression to the conscience. Formalism was substituted for spiritual religion, and the "separateness" of this fraternity, as evinced by their long robes with fringe and tassels, their broad phylacteries, their long prayers publicly recited by the highways at the customary hours, as well as by the casuistry of their teachings and the inconsistency of their lives, proved their piety to be in great measure an affectation. Very terrible is the indictment brought against the Pharisees by our Lord, as reported in Matt. xxiii. Mark vii., Luke xi. They were in fact the principal obstacle to the reception of Christ and His Gospel. It was impossible for them to accept the spirituality of His doctrines, or to descend to the humility of those who would follow Him. Their spirit was that of self-sufficiency and pride. When John the Baptist preached the baptism of repentance in the wilderness, the Pharisees for the most part (Luke vii. 30), although not entirely (Matt. iii. 7) held aloof. They thanked God that they were not "as other men" (Luke xviii. 10); yet while exalting themselves in their own esteem to heaven, they verily became the "children of hell" (Matt. xxiii. 15).

Undoubtedly there was another side to the Pharisaic character. They held certain great doctrines, as that of a resurrection and future life, with a tenacity unknown to the people at large; while their strictness on points of religious observance served as an antidote to prevailing laxity. The Apostle Paul regarded it as a distinction among the professors of Judaism to be a Pharisee, the son of a Pharisee (Acts xxi. 6; comp. Phil. iii. 5). Like the Jesuits in the Roman Church, the Pharisees proved the utmost capabilities of their religious system, if, like them, they found it wanting. The best and the worst of the people were Pharisees; but in the best there was a narrowness and fanaticism,

† See Dr. Ederheim's Schicksal der Jüdischen Sozialen, p. 223.
‡ The Talmudists, parodying the manifold divisions and subdivisions made by Pharisaic teachers, "distinguish seven classes of Pharisees, one of whom only is worthy of that name. These are—(1) those who do the will of God from earthly motives; (2) they who make small steps or say, 'I will wait awhile for me'; (3) I have just one more good work to perform; (4) they who knock their heads against a wall in avoiding the sight of a woman; (5) saints in office; (6) they who implore you to mention some more duties which they might perform; (7) they who are pious because they fear God; (8) the true and only Pharisees in the world, who do the will of their Father which is in heaven because he loves them."—Midrash Talmud.

* Or perhaps the word here used (a somewhat different form from that usually rendered Nazarite) means "separated" in dignity—princeps. The same word is used (Gen. xlix. 26; Deut. xxxiii. 26) of Joseph.

VI. THE SADDUCEES.

The antagonism between the Sadducees and the Pharisees in New Testament times was so pronounced as to suggest that the former sect originated in a reaction from the strictness of the latter. More probably, however, as already observed, both sprung from the desire on the part of the most faithful among the Jews to preserve the purity of the national religion when threatened by heathen oppressors. Josephus, in his first mention of the Sadducees, in the history of John Hyrcanus (Ant. xiii. 10, 6), simply says that their "notions are quite contrary to those of the Pharisees". A current Jewish tradition ascribes their origin and their name to one Zadok, disciple of Antigonus (s.c. 300-170), who, it is said, taught that virtue was to be cultivated for its own sake, without calculation of consequences or hope of future recompense. An ennobling thought! although afterwards perverted to the denial of the recompense itself. The best scholars, however, reject the tradition. This Zadok is quite unknown to the earlier Talmudic writers, and it would be contrary to analogy to denominate a Jewish sect by the name of its founder, however distinguished. The likeliest account of the matter is to be found in etymology, and the word "Tasdik", righteous, there can be little doubt, explains the name. From the Chasidim, or "Assideans", there was gradually evolved a class of men who insisted chiefly upon morality, as the Pharisees did upon exact observance; and in course of time the "Moralists" and "Separatists" grew into distinct and antagonistic classes. The Sadducees (or a division of them) are also called in the Talmud Boethusians, either from Boethos, father of Simon, and grandfather of Herod's wife, the second Marianna, or from the Greek word euthus (straight) Hebrewised; also Karaites, or Readers (Heb. kara), from their adherence to the written law. But it is uncertain whether this last appellation is not of later origin than New Test. times, and the Karaites still exist in large numbers as a distinct sect, chiefly in Austria, Russia, and Turkey.

The origin of the Sadducees is the key to much of their history. Schools of morality are sure to decline from the simplicity of their primitive principles. So Epicurus taught that in virtue only was true pleasure, and the Epicurean became a mere pleasure-seeker. Zeno maintained that self-restraint was the highest excellency, and the Stoic trampled on human instincts and affections. So the Sadducees began with the supreme obligation of morality, and ended as mere rationalistic moralists; while from their rejection of oral supplements to the Mosaic Law, they proceeded to the denial of any doctrine not there plainly and literally taught, as that of a life after death. Possibly also, as above intimated, their scepticism on this last point was but an exaggeration of the view that God was not to be served for the sake of the reward of eternity. The disbelief in a future state led to the inference that there were "neither angels nor spirits", although it is difficult to see how this tenet could be reconciled with the literal interpretation of the Pentateuch. It is possible that by "angel" the Sadducees intended only the unembodied human soul (Acts xii. 15; comp. Matt. xiv. 26; Luke xxiv. 37).

The opinions of the Sadducees seem to have prevailed chiefly or solely among the upper classes. They "are able", says Josephus, "to persuade none but the rich"; "but the Pharisees have the multitude on their side" (Ant. xiii. 10, sec. 6). In the days of the Apostles the very high-priest and his party were "of the sect of the Sadducees" (Acts iv. 1; v. 17). Herod Antipas professed concurrence in their tenets, although conscience proved mightier than scepticism when he feared that in Jesus, John the Baptist had risen from the dead (Mark vi. 14-16). The Baptist had included the Sadducees with the Pharisees as a "generation" or brood "of vipers" (Matt. iii. 7), a poisonous and dangerous race. Sadducees as well as Pharisees sought to entrap our Lord by captious questionings (Matt. xvi. 1; xxii. 23), and Jesus warned His disciples against 33; xi. 47). They are not once mentioned by the Gospels. Perhaps, holding the opinions they did, the question of the Messiahship did not interest them; and it was rather with superciliousness than with anger that they regarded our Lord's Divine claims. But when the resurrection was proclaimed, they were moved to anger; and accordingly their only recorded polemical measures were directed against the Apostles who preached that Christ had risen (Acts iv. 1-4). The fact is a striking example of the "unexplained coincidence" between the Acts and the Gospel history. It may be added, that no writings of the Sadducees have come down to our times.

VII. THE ESSENES.

This sect is not mentioned in Scripture, but is described in detail by Josephus (Wars, ii. 8, sec. 1; one of the "three philosophical sects among the Jews"). Like the Pharisee "separatists" and the Sadducee "moralists", so the Essenes "apists" seem to have sprung from the Chasidim of the Hasmonean time, the three representing, as we have suggested, as many tendencies of human thought. Any derivations of the word Essene have been proposed. Professor Lightfoot (Epistle to the Colossians; harm. "On some points connected with the Essenes") considers the choice to lie between the Syriac shin, "plous", and the Hebrew chaska, "to be silent"; himself preferring the latter. The first Essene mentioned is one Judas (Jos. Ant. xiii. 11, sec. 2; Wars, i. 2, sec. 5, about s.c. 110; but no specific reference is furnished to them until the New Testament era, when they are said to have numbered about 4,000; some of whom dwelt in cities, but the majority in monastic retreats, chiefly in the desert regions west of the Dead Sea.

The Essenes have sometimes been described as a stricter sect of Pharisees, with whom they had many points in common, as the rigour of ceremonial observance—with the not unimportant exception of the Temple sacrifices—the careful avoidance of pollution, and the stress laid upon ascetic practices. But their divergencies were greater. Not only did they reject Temple offerings, but they maintained a non-legal priesthood, and owned no sacrifice but that in the daily vegetarian repast. They practised the state of divination and Josephus, in giving instances (Jos. as above; Manahem, inf. xv. 10, sec. 5; Shen ii. xvii. 13, sec. 3), remarks that their predictions were generally accomplished. Like mystics generally, they contemned the body, and held the immortality of the soul without a resurrection. Their standard of purity was high, long probation and discipline were imposed before admission into the fraternity, and distinct classes in the order represented successive stages of moral progress, the main difference being the degree of asceticism. Abstinence from meat was strictly enforced on all; the sexual intercourse was forbidden, as an enervating luxury. It was regarded as a mark of perfection to forego marriage state. Community of goods was maintained; the keeping of herds and flocks was the only secular employment sanctioned, the labour of the fields. In their daily worship the members were said to adore the sun; but this may possibly have been a misconception. Certainly there was a close points a great resemblance between their system and the Zoroastrianism of Persia; while in other particulars—as in the community of goods, in the brotherhood, in the free hospitality, in the moralism—the Essenes were more nearly akin to the Christians. In a well-known essay the late Dr. Quincey argues for the identity of the two, the resemblances adduced are superficial, and confused with the differences; and in the obligation of monialism, and the merit of ascetic self-denial, the two systems are at opposite poles. See Professor Lightfoot, Colossians, as above quoted. The Essenes and His Apostles made it indeed to a great extent business to rebuke such errors as these; but the Essenes had fallen, inasmuch as errors which they held in their origin in high aspiration are sometimes in fact dangerous, because the most specious of all. The Epistle to the Colossians receives much valuable illustration from a reference to the known views of the Essenes. Thus, in ch. i. 23, the emphasis on "every man" is more felt when we read in Josephus of the care taken by them to keep their doctrines secret, divulging them only to the few after a long novitiate; and on ch. ii. 18-23 a flood of light is thrown, when we find Essenism tending to angel-worship, professing likewise to treat the body with entire disregard, to ignore its cravings, to deny its wants; not in the Pharisaic spirit, merely from fear of ceremonial pollution, but from the noble though mistaken idea of thereby escaping from the infection of evil. Dr. Lightfoot's Commentary points out numerous similar illustrations in this remarkable epistle.

From the practice of celibacy and other causes the Essene community rapidly diminished; nothing is heard of them after the destruction of Jerusalem, although their principles reappear from time to time, as in the Therapeutics and the early Manichæans.

VIII. THE SCRIBES.

The word Scribe appears to be used in Scripture with different meanings at different periods in the history. Literally signifying "writer", it would naturally have this various application according to the kind of writing required. Thus in the Old Testament it denotes at times what we should term a secretary of state (see 2 Sam. viii. 17; 2 Kings xix. 2, &c.) in charge of secular (Neh. xiii. 13) or military affairs (2 Kings xxv. 19). Undoubtedly, however, the chief use of the term was in relation to the Word of God ("scripture"), of which the Scribe was the copyist, depository, and expounder. In this sense Baruch is the first "Scribe" of whom we read (Jer. xxxvi. 4, &c.), and Ezra the most illustrious (Neh. viii. 1). After the time of the latter, when the Old Testament canon was arranged, and the custody and transmission of the sacred books were entrusted to the "Great Synagogue", the Scribes became a recognised order. The arrangement was rendered all the more necessary from the fact that after the Captivity the Chaldees, or square letters, were adopted in place of the ancient Hebrew characters, the language of course remaining the same, and the work of transcribing the sacred books became one of great labour and responsibility—nothing less than the re-writing of the nation's literature. The art of writing was long confined to the few; and very naturally the transcriber and reader of Scripture became its expounder. By degrees, therefore, the Scribes assumed the office of public teachers; the very priests, unless also Scribes, taking a subordinate place. Herod consulted the chief priests and Scribes as to where the Christ should be born; they forthwith examined the sacred writings and informed him (Matt. ii. 4-6). They sat as teachers in Moses' seat (Matt. xxiii. 2, 3). To their authority on doctrinal matters frequent appeal was made (Matt. xvii. 10). Their manner of teaching was compared with that of our Lord (Matt. vii. 29; Mark i. 22). As the oral as well as the written Law was the subject of their teaching, they are constantly coupled with the Pharisees, the great exponents of the former (Matt. xxiii. throughout; Luke x. 46, &c.). They are reproached as having often abused their calling for purposes of ostentation and extortion (Mark xii. 38-40); and in the end they became among the most rancorous enemies of Christ (Matt. xxvi. 3, &c.), where "chief priests and scribes and elders" express the Sanhedrim, the great court of the nation), also of His apostles (Acts iv. 5; vi. 12). At the same time the office, from its responsibility and dignity, becomes the symbol of faithfulness in instruction (Matt. xiii. 52). And it was a Scribe to whom Jesus said, "Thou art not far from the kingdom of God" (Mark xii. 34). When true to his position, the Scribe sat in Moses' seat. He was the successor to the prophet. The prophet communicated new Scripture, the Scribe guarded and elucidated the old. Hence when the people saw that Jesus taught not as the scribes, they discerned in Him no mere expounder, but an original instructor.

IX. THE LAWYERS.

The Lawyer of the New Testament, taking his name (νομικός) from the law (nomos), is by many reckoned almost or quite the same as Scribe. But the word occurs in classical Greek for a person skilled in the practice of law, and our translators seem to have intended a professional man in the modern sense. Nor is there any reason against this. The Mosaic laws would have to be enforced on Jews by Jewish officials in Jewish courts upon questions arising, for instance, out of Sabbath regulations, divorce, and such like. Jewish jurisprudence was by no means abolished under the Roman supremacy, but the Jews were allowed, except in capital cases, to administer their own laws among themselves—witness our Lord's trial before Caiaphas; Pilate's words, "Take ye Him and judge Him according to your law"; the trial of Stephen; the mission of Saul to Damascus. Professional counsel would therefore be needed, as in modern ecclesiastical law, and more especially under the intricate system fostered by the Pharisees and Scribes. Such we may conclude was the Jewish Lawyer—a professional assistant in court, and not merely a theological doctor or expositor. Of course he might be a Scribe as well, one belonging to that profession, but with special training and duties, just as in olden times in England an ecclesiastical lawyer might be a clergyman. This may explain how the man who asked our Lord about the great commandment of the Law is by one evangelist called a Lawyer (Matt. xxii. 35), and by another a Scribe (Mark xii. 28). The Lawyers, like the Pharisees, fell under our Lord's rebukes for their unprincipled professional conduct, and in one place they are said to have "rejected the counsel of God against themselves" (Luke vii. 30).

Zenas (Titus iii. 13) may have been either a Jewish lawyer in the above sense, or a Greek jurist; probably the latter.

THE HERODIANS, THE ROMAN FACTION, AND THEIR OPPONENTS.

To the theocratic belief that was the life of the Jewish polity, the accession of a foreign, half-heathen dynasty like that of Herod to the throne of David must have been a cruel shock. The sceptre had "departed from Judah", and yet, in the popular belief, the Shiloh "had not come". In such circumstances the time-serving and politic would strive to make the best of the new order of things, paying court to the reigning family, and themselves gaining the solid advantage, while all truly pious Jews would mourn, and the more heedless or fanatical would wildly rebel. Hence it was one and the same condition of affairs which gave rise at the one extreme to the Herodian sect, and at the other to the Zealots, the Galilæans, and the Sicarii.

X. THE HERODIANS.

It was in vain that Herod the Great and his descendants endeavoured to propitiate the great mass of the people. Immune by descent, although in profession Jews, they were by education, taste, and habit altogether Roman. Repeated visits to the capital, and constant attendance on the imperial family, necessary to the stability of their vassal throne, imbued them more and more with the ideas and principles of their heathen masters, which as far as practicable they imported into Palestine. It is true that Herod the Great restored the Temple with great splendour, but this was to adorn in the spirit of Augustus, not of Zerubbabel; to add to his reign, to propitiate and dazzle his subjects, and to preserve the ascendancy of his name. The Jew might be proud of those "groody stones", but was at least equally shocked to observe here a temple and there a statue to the deified Emperor, to witness Roman games even in Jerusalem, and to see the Roman Eagle (to Hebrew eyes an idolatrous emblem) over the very portal of the Temple. In a word, the Herods had largely Romanised the Holy Land and its people. Courtlly Jews fell in with the fashion to their own profit, and justified it to their compatriots. These were the "Herodians", true successors of those who had conformed to the will of Antiochus Epiphanes, and had betrayed Judaism in the days of the "mingling" (see Pharisees). Their natural antagonists were the Pharisees, who prided themselves on nothing so much as on being Hebrews first and last. Yet Herodians and Pharisees, being alike underminers of the Hebrew faith—the former by their foreign corruptions, the latter by their native traditions—are condemned by our Lord in the same breath (Mark viii. 15). "Beware," He said, "of the leaven of the Pharisees and of the leaven of Herod". The parallel passage (Matt. xvi. 6) has "Sadducees" in the place of "Herod", implying that the Herodians were infected with Sadducean tenets, as indeed was natural. That the Pharisees deserved thus to be classed with their natural opponents is shown by the association of the two in deadly enmity to our Lord (Mark iii. 6); and especially in proposing to Him the insidious question about the tribute-money (Matt. xxiii. 16, 17). The Pharisees no doubt paid the tax, but under protest; thus at once propitiating the ruling party and saving their own conscience. Their payment showed them to be loyal subjects; their protest proved them faithful Jews; but on the other hand, if Jesus admitted the claim, the Pharisees would vilify Him to their own party; if He repudiated it, the Herodians would endanger Him with the authorities. His answer silenced both.

A view, slightly differing from that above given, is that the Herodians represented a national party in opposition to the Roman power. Herod Antipas and Pilate, we know, were "at enmity" (Luke xxiii. 12); and though the sovereignty of the Herods was heathen in comparison with the theocracy, it was Jewish in comparison with that of Rome. The Herodian in this view would be, comparatively speaking, the patriotic party; hence their alliance with the Pharisees. Specious as this theory may be, the evidence against it seems to preponderate. Some have contended that both aspects of Herodianism by turns prevailed, but this can scarcely be regarded as probable.

XI. THE ZEALOTS.

Josephus describes the Zealots as the fourth of the philosophical sects among the Jews. Their philosophy, however, consisted in their resolute denial of the right of any foreign power to rule over God's heritage, and their readiness to suffer martyrdom, if necessary, in support of their convictions. They represented the extreme of Pharisaism politically, as the Essenes did religiously. Simon, one of the apostles, is surnamed Zealotes (Luke vi. 15), probably because he belonged to this sect; and the term Canaanite applied to him in the A. V. of Matt. x. 4, is most likely a Hebrew derivation of the same meaning (from zau, to be zealous). The Zealots maintained the Mosaic Law with fanatical strictness, and resisted, not always passively, every attempt to enforce foreign usages upon the people. Hence arose constant outbreaks, of which Galilee was pre-eminently the scene. It is often stated that "Zealot" and "Galilean" were interchangeable terms, but this is hardly accurate. See the next section.

XII. THE GALILEANS.

The name of Galilean was always used by the Jews of the South with an undertone of contempt, as that of a rustic and unlettered community, rendered more over impure by the admixture of Gentile blood. But in the time of our Lord and his apostles, certain recent events had brought the title into deeper disfavour with the ruling authorities, and the word had become a synonym for disaffection and rebellion. "In the days of the taxing," or enrolment, under Quirinus (Cyrinus), A.D. 6, which followed the dethronement of Archelaus, "Judas of Galilee", a Galileanite of the city of Gamala (Jos. Ant. xviii. 1, sec. 1), raised the standard of rebellion. "Would Israelites", he demanded, "be such cowards as to pay tribute to Romans? Would they, after God, submit to any mortal man for lord?" (Wars. ii. 8, sec. 1). His followers doubtless thought that the days of his Maccabean namesake were returning; and Josephus thus describes their bearing: "They do not value dying any kind of death, nor indeed do they heed the deaths of their relatives and friends, nor can any such fear make them call any man lord" (Ant. xviii. 1, sec. 6). For a time, these Zealots overran the country, and while our Lord was quietly dwelling in His mother's home at Nazareth, the whole surrounding country was given up to wild and lawless rebellion; but the might of Rome prevailed; Judas was slain, his followers were dispersed; but the "Galilean" spirit survived—a constant source of dread to the authorities. Subsequent attempts at revolt, in fact, were made by the sons of Judas, penetrating even to Jerusalem (A.D. 47 and 66); and were more ruthlessly repressed than at first.

Bearing this state of things in mind, the expression used at our Lord's trial, "Judas of Galilee" and "Thou art a Galilean" (Matt. xxvi. 69; Mark xiv. 70), receive a new significance, as betraying a malicious desire to identify our Lord and his followers with the promoters of sedition, and thus to create a prejudice against them. In after years the pagans sought to fasten the same ill name, and with the same application, upon the whole Christian body; a fact which throws much light upon the care of the Apostles to insensate subordination to the ruling powers (Rom. xiii. 1-7; 1 Tim. ii. 1-4; 1 Pet. ii. 13-17).

XIII. THE SICARII.

As the Zealots represented the fanatical extreme of the Pharisees, and the Galileans were a class of Zealots, continual disturbers of the peace, so the Sicarii, assassins, or "murderers" (Acts xxi. 38), formed an association or secret society of bandits, springing out of the Galilean rebellions. Josephus fully describes their organization and procedure (Wars. vii. 10, sec. 1). These fanatics, carrying a small poniard (sica, whence their name), concealed in the folds of their dress, attempted to carry out their purposes by secret assassination, visiting Jerusalem at festival times, and inflicting mortal blows unseen in the crowds on those whom they adjudged the enemies of God and His people. At other times they levied open war against the Roman authority (Wars. vii. 8, sec. 5; Ant. xxi. 8, sec. 5, 6). Josephus's notice of the Egyptian offers a striking undesigned coincidence to the brief allusion in the Acts (xxi. 38); for whereas the latter mentions the suspicion against St. Paul of being that leader, without giving any clue to account for it, not even explaining who or what the Sicarii were, Josephus supplies all that is required in describing the religious nature of their principles, and stating that the Egyptian in particular gave himself out as a prophet.

THE SANHEDRIN. A.V. Council.

The Greater Sanhedrin consisted of 70 "Elders, Chief Priests, i.e. heads of the 24 Courses, and Scribes" (Matt. xxvi. 1, &c.), besides the High Priest (if "endowed with wisdom" who was generally President. It met in the hall of the Temple called Gazaria, i.e. "Squares". Its number followed Mosaic precedent (Num. xi. 16), but the institution probably belongs to the later Greco-Syrian period, being first mentioned in 3 Mac. i. 10, and in the reign of Hyrcanus II., c. 69 (Jos. Ant. xiv. 9, 21). Under the Romans it could condemn, but could not execute; St. Stephen's martyrdom was a tumultuary proceeding (John xviii. 31).

A Lower Sanhedrin—of 23 where the adults exceeded 19, and of 3 elsewhere—was organised in every town, subject to the Greater Sanhedrin. In Matt. v. 22, 'the Judgment' and 'Council' probably refer to the 2 classes.

PROSELYTES.

'The stranger' 'within the gates' of Judaism, and other converts (traceable throughout Jewish history) are termed in the N. T. proselytes (Gk. -approchans). The Rabbis distinguish—(1) Proselytes of Righteousness (see Lewin, vol. v. 323-33), circumcised, and bound by every Jewish obligation; (2) Proselytes of the Gate (Isa. xx. 10; De. xiv. 21, 'devout' worshippers', Acts x. 2; xvi. 14, &c.), uncircumcised, and only bound by

'Noah's 7 precepts' (agst. idolatry, profanity, murder, uncleanness, theft, rebellion, eating of blood), and less other than the Mosaic. The proselyting spirit, first shown strongly by the Ammonites (John Hyrcanus i.) and Alexander Jannæus, was ardent among the Pharisees of our Lord's time (Matt. xxiii. 15); but Jew and Gentile alike disesteemed the proselyte. The O. T., Apocrypha, Philo, and Josephus are silent about the use a.c. of baptism with circumcision at the proselytes' initiation, a practice described by the Talmud (on 2nd and 3rd century authority), and referred to remote antiquity by the Rabbis.

PUBLICANS, rather Tax-gatherers.

Roman capitalists (Lat. publicani) farmed the revenues of a province or district at a specified sum, collecting what they could from the taxpayers. These Publicani usually sublet the taxes to contractors of lower grade (e.g. prob. Zacchæus, Luke xix. 2); and the actual collectors (Lat. Portitores, Gk. τελωναι, H. T. 'publicans') were driven to the severest exactions. The taxes being levied on produce and merchandise, over-assessment was easy and most oppressive. The Jewish tax-collectors were universally despised—(1) as un-patriotic, and degraded by serving Romans; (2) for their extortion and false accusations; and were classed accordingly with 'sinners'.

A CHRONOLOGICAL TABLE OF THE GOSPEL HISTORY,

EXHIBITING A HARMONY OF THE FOUR GOSPELS; WITH THE PLACES WHERE THE EVENTS APPEAR TO HAVE OCCURRED;

Being a Revision of the Arrangement

BY THE LATE EDWARD ROBINSON, D.D., LL.D.*

AUTHOR OF "BIBLICAL RESEARCHES IN PALESTINE," ETC.

The general expectation of the Messiah—the impetus of the Roman sovereignty, fostered by the bold and turbulent doctrines of the more fanatical part of the people, which led them to crowd round the banner of such successive adventurers, who either assumed or might assume that character—the rapid progress of the chief priests, led by the slightest indication of revolt should compromise the safety of the city and the Temple, and expose the whole nation to the just resentment of the Roman governor—these circumstances of the times sufficiently account for the reception which such a teaching as Jesus of Nazareth met with in Jerusalem. Appearing, as he did, with doctrines so alarming to the authority of the priesthood, and so null of its appointment to the fanatic populace—so repugnant to the national pride, as implying the dissolution of the Jewish constitution, and the establishment of a new and more comprehensive faith—and, above all, openly assuming the mysterious title, the Son of God—excites less astonishment than error and commiseration, that the passions of such a people should at once take arms, and proceed to the most awful violence against a Teacher, whose tenets were so much too pure and spiritual for their comprehension, whose character was so remote from their pre-conceived notions of the expected Messiah.

33. He returns to Capernaum, and the people flock to him; he heals a paralytic let down through the roof	9. 2-8	2. 1-12	5. 17-26
34. He calls Matthew to follow him	9. 9	2. 13, 14	5. 27, 28

PART IV.—FROM THE SECOND (see note 2) PASSOVER UNTIL THE THIRD.—TIME: 1 year.

35. Jesus at Jerusalem at the Passover ; heals a sick man on the sabbath; and asserts his oneness with the Father in power, works, and honour; the Jews seek to kill him	5. 1-46
36. The disciples pluck ears of corn on the sabbath.— On the way to Galilee (?)	12. 1-6	2. 23-28	6. 1-6

(1) This time is made out by reckoning six months of John's ministry before he baptized the Galileans, and about six more between that event and the first Passover during our Lord's public ministry.
(2) It is here assumed that the "feast of the Jews," mentioned in John v. 1, was the Passover. The third Passover is the one mentioned in John vi. 4, which our Lord appears not to have celebrated at Jerusalem, probably because the rulers were seeking to kill him: see John vi. 1.

		17.	14-21	9.	2-13	9.	28-36
				9.	14-29	9.	37-43

(3) Robinson places Luke ch. iv. 16-30 in Section 37; assuming two distinct visits to Nazareth; but Luke's narrative, in ver. 23, implies that Jesus had lived for some time in Capernaum, and had wrought many miracles there, before this visit to Nazareth, it appears more probable that the three narratives all refer to the same event.

(4) Robinson places Luke ch. viii. 1-3 between Sections 45 and 46; but there appears to be no sufficient reason for supposing the circuit in Galilee related by Luke to be different from the second one mentioned by Matthew and Mark.

	21. 23-46	12. 1-13	20. 21, 26

(5) Some would place the passages in the Gospel of John from ch. vii. 2 to ch. xi. 44 between sections 70 and 71. They think that the events there related occurred before Jesus finally left Galilee; and that, probably, after the raising of Lazarus, and the return to Ephraim near the desert, he led his disciples northwards, and in the quiet retirement of Canaan Philip got them the first intimations of his approaching death. From thence the three synoptic Gospels represent him as taking them primarily through Galilee, straight to Jerusalem. If this was the true order of events, only a few weeks would intervene between the transfiguration on Mount Hermon, and the crucifixion at Jerusalem.

HISTORICAL EPITOME.—PART III. APOSTOLIC HISTORY.

BY THE REV. P. THOMSON, M.A., AND THE EDITOR.

A.D.

† The bracketed dates are the revised dates of the Chronological Summary of Bible History.

33. [31.]†	Acts 1. 4. 15. Acts 2. 1.	THE Apostles awaiting in Jerusalem the Comforter's mission, elect Matthias by lot to Jesus' apostleship, and to bear witness to Jesus' resurrection. On the 10th day after the Ascension, and 50th (Pentecost) after the Resurrection, Jerusalem being full of pilgrims attending the Feast of Firstfruits (or Weeks, see Calendar), the Holy Spirit descends about the time of morning sacrifice in tongues of fire, distributing themselves (not 'cloven', as A. V.) on the assembled Apostles and disciples, and causes them to magnify God by ecstatic utterances in foreign languages (cp. ch. 11. 15 & 19. 6).
	14. Joel 2. 23-32.	Peter, addressing the Jews and foreign proselytes collected by the news, declares this to be the outpouring of God's Spirit predicted by Joel for the Messianic time ("the last days", v. 1.), and proves from this fact and from Jesus' resurrection (foretold in Ps. 16, and attested as a fact by the Apostles) that he must have been the Messiah. 3000 hearers are baptized. Suppered by 'sgas', the Church grows daily in numbers, devotion, and popularity.
	Acts 2. 42. Acts 3. 1.	Peter and John heal a well-known cripple at the 'Beautiful Gate' of the Temple. To the astonished whippers assembled in Solomon's porch, Peter explains that faith in Jesus as the Christ caused the cure. He appeals to them as heirs of the promises to accept Christ as the fulfilment, and to repent His rejection and murder (see ch. 4. 12). The church now numbers 4000.
	Acts 4. 1. 5. 6. 23. 32.	The Sadducees, who said there was no resurrection, fearing the Apostles' influence with the people, bring Peter and John and the healed beggar before the Sanhedrin, and demand by what magic the miracle was done. Peter repeats his statement made in the Temple, and both refuse to be silenced, and thus to obey man rather than God. The Apostles pray for boldness under opposition, and are answered by the descent of the Holy Ghost during an earthquake. The wealthier converts, esp. Joseph surnamed Barnabas (son of counsel or exhortation, Gr., of prophecy, Heb.), a Levite of Cyprus, contribute to a common fund, which the Apostles distribute, partly in daily meals. Ananias and Sapphira contributing part on the whole, and proceeding to falsehood, are successively struck dead. This and other great miracles attest the Apostles' teaching. Converts multiply and meet daily in Solomon's porch.
	Acts 5. 1. 17. 21. 29. 23.	The Sadducees imprison the 12 Apostles, untried; but being miraculously released, the Apostles resume at daybreak their teaching in the Temple. They are brought before the Sanhedrin and civil body of elders (cp. Acts 22. 5), and are accused of trying to fix the guilt of Jesus' blood on the nation (see Mat. 27. 25). They reassert Jesus' resurrection. The moderation of Gamaliel, chief of the Pharisees, saves their lives; but they are beaten with rods and discharged. The Apostles, rejoicing to suffer for Christ, preach unceasingly in the Temple and privately.
	Acts 6. 1. 5. 8.	To appease discontent among the Greek-speaking i.e. foreign Jews (' Grecians '), the Apostles invite the Church to choose 7 deacons, whom they ordain to distribute alms and food (' serve tables '). The Apostles devote themselves to preaching and prayer. Even priests believe. The miracles and inspiration of the deacon Stephen prove irresistible. His opponents, viz. Libertines (1), Jews of Africa, proconsular Asia (2), and Saul's province Cilicia (3), accuse him to suborned witnesses before the Sanhedrin of blasphemy against Moses and God, the Temple and Law.
[36.]	Acts 7. 1.	In his defence, Stephen reviews Jewish history to show that God's presence was never confined to Canaan and the Temple; reminds his hearers that Moses himself foretold the mission of another Prophet typified by himself, and that the prophets foretold the coming of the 'Just One', while the Jewish nation, by unbelief and apostasy, had ever opposed the development of God's purposes; so that the rejection and murder of Christ was but in accord with its whole history. Enraged by the charge that neither they nor their fathers had kept the Law which they professed themselves so zealous to defend, they interrupt and stone Stephen.
34.	Acts 8. 1. 4. 5. 14. 20. 40.	Saul, a Cilician Pharisee and pupil of Gamaliel (? a member of the Sanhedrin, ch. 26. 12) (q. possibly as a 'Scribe'), was most prominent (after the witnesses, see Deut. 17. 7) at the martyrdom—and in the first general persecution which followed. Only the Apostles remain at Jerusalem. The dispersed Christians carry the Gospel to Phoenicia, Cyprus, and Antioch (5). Philip, another deacon, evangelises Samaria long infatuated by Simon Magus' pretensions to divinity supported by magic (one of the 'false Christs', v. 10). Miracles attest Philip's mission. The converts receive the Holy Ghost upon the prayers of Peter and John, who are sent from Jerusalem and continue Philip's work. Simon desiring to buy the Apostles' mysterious power, Peter exposes the hollowness of his conversion.—Philip, sent by an angel toward Gaza, converts and baptises an Ethiopian proselyte, Q. Candace's treasurer, and preaches in the cities of Philistia, from Asotus (Ashdod) to Cæsarea (where he is residing, ch. 21. 8). Pontius Pilatus , accused by the Jews of tyranny and cruelty, is sent prisoner to Rome by Vitellius prefect of Syria, who reduces the Jewish taxes, and deposing Caiaphas (whom Valerius Gratus the procurator had appointed, A.D. 25) makes Jonathan high priest.
		Tiberius dies. CALIGULA made Emperor. Vitellius abandons the defence of Herod Antipas against Aretas his father-in-law, king of Petra i.e. Nabathæan Arabia, (whose daughter H. Antipas had divorced to marry Herodias his half-brother Philip's wife; cp. Mat. 14. 3). Saul obtains powers to bring any converts in Damascus—now held by Aretas , K. of Arabia—before the Sanhedrin at Jerusalem. On the way, he is miraculously stopped, has a vision of Jesus (v. 17; cp. 1 Cor. 9. 1 & 15. 6), and is blinded by His glory. He awaits God's bidding in Damascus. After 3 days of abstinence and prayer, Saul's sight is restored through Ananias, a Jewish convert (ch. 22. 12) of Damascus, according to visions vouchsafed to both. Saul is hap-

(1) Libertines, i.e. Freedmen, prob. descendants of Jewish captives (B.C. 63, &c.) freed by Roman masters, having a synagogue as a club apart.—(2) Roman Asia, i.e. Mysia, Caria, Lydia.—(3) Roman Cilicia, i.e. Cilicia, Lycia, Pamphylia, Pisidia. Trarsus its capital, an E. Cydnus (a 'free city'), i.e. governed by its own elected magistratus, cp. Acts 17. 8 & 18. 36), was the university (3rd only to Alexandria and Athens) of Arabs (quoted Acts 17. 30) and other prominent Stones; possibly of SS. Barnabas and Leba. Cilicorum, i.e. east's bulk, mining and tent cloth, is yet its staple (cp. Acts 18. 3).—(4) Give me voice, Gr. vox, on which the objection, that if a Sanhedrin, R. Paul must have been married (prob. a widower; cp. 1 Cor. 9.5).—(5) ANTIOCH, on R. Orontes, the cradle and metropolis of Gentile Christianity, capital of the Greek kingdom and Roman province of Syria, and the emporium of the East; a 'free city', with a Jewish colony.

	Acts 9. 18. Gal. 1. 15—17.	timed, and immediately preaches in the synagogues the faith he came to destroy; but soon retires 'into Arabia', i.e. the solitary region S. of Damascus, apparently for communion with God.
37. [39.]	Acts 9. 23.	The Jews of Damascus, unable to answer Saul on his return with increased strength, threaten his life (aided by Aretas' garrison, 2 Cor. 11. 38); let down the wall, he escapes to Jerusalem, 8 years after his conversion, to see Peter. His conversion being mistrusted, Barnabas introduces him to Peter and James 'the Lord's brother'. He stays 15 days with Peter (Gal. 1. 18—20). Saul praying in the Temple falls into a trance, and receives from Christ Himself his commission to the Gentiles; and is bidden to leave Jerusalem, because the Jews had rejected his message. At the same time, the Grecians (foreign Jews) are conspiring to kill him; aided by the brethren, he escapes through Caesarea to Tarsus, apparently settling there for 6-7 years, in which he probably evangelised Syria and Cilicia (Gal. 1. 21-24). The Church prospers unpersecuted—as if the Jews' attention diverted by Caligula's attempt to desecrate the Temple with his image; Caligula's death alone averts a rebellion. CLAUDIUS Emperor (mainly through H. Agrippa I.), A.D. 41.
	36. Acts 22. 17—21.
	Acts 9. 30.
38. 41. [42.]	32. Acts 10. 1. cp. Luke 24. 47.	Gospel preached to the Gentiles ('the uncircumcision'). Peter, during a circuit of Judea, Galilee, and Samaria, cures Aeneas of palsy at Lydda, and restores Tabitha (Dorcas) to life at Joppa. There, while Peter ponders the vision of the sheet, messengers from Cornelius the Roman centurion, an uncircumcised worshipper of the true God, summon him to Caesarea, pursuant to another vision. Going at the Spirit's bidding, and hearing Cornelius' vision, Peter recognises the call to preach to Gentiles (ch. 15. 7). In presence of Peter and his 6 companions, the Holy Ghost descends on Cornelius and his assembled friends in the gift of tongues (ch. 11. 15 & cp. 19. 6), and Peter authorises the baptism of these firstfruits of the Gentiles.
	Acts 10. 44.	Returning to Jerusalem, he is accused by the Jewish converts, jealous for Moses' Law, of breaking it by intercourse with Gentiles; but his narrative convinces them that God had removed the barrier of special Jewish privilege, by accounting all mankind clean through Christ, and inviting all to enter Christ's fold by a saving repentance through the Holy Ghost.
	Acts 11. 1.	About the same time, Jewish converts from Cyprus and Cyrene, exiled from Jerusalem by the persecution following Stephen's death, begin to preach to other Gentiles (for 'Grecians' read 'Greeks', v. 20) at Antioch in Syria, with great success. Barnabas, deputed from Jerusalem, recognises it as God's work. Fetching Saul from Tarsus (? independent work, Gal. 1. 21—24), they co-operate (1 year), and found the first Gentile Church (Christians), which shows faith and brotherhood by collecting for the believers in Judea, against the famine foretold by Agabus.
42. 43.	22. 25.
	Jos. Ant. 18. 6, 7.	HEROD AGRIPPA I., a grandson of the Amosene prince Mariamne, (made king of H. Philip's, Lycaonia, and H. Antipas' tetrarchies by Caligula), who had received Judea and Samaria; i.e. the rest of the kingdom of his grandfather Herod the Great, from Claudius, courted popularity by lavish benevolence and splendour. A strict Jew, he begins a 2nd persecution by executing James (Zebedee's son), and imprisoning Peter, purposing his execution after the Passover (cp. Matt. 26. 4, 5). Peter is released by an angel on the Church's prayers, and conceals himself. Shortly after, Herod, elated by the submission of Tyre and Sidon, addresses the Caesareans, and, accepting the Jews' impious homage, is stricken with a mysterious disease (like Antiochus Epiphanes, 2 Mac. 9. 5—9); and dies. The famine foretold by Agabus taking place in Claudius' 4th year, Barnabas and Saul visit Jerusalem (St. Paul's 2nd visit) with the collection of the Church in Antioch, and return thither with John Mark. [Paul's rapture, &c., Levitic .] Judea again passes under Procurators (C. Fadus, A.D. 45).
	44.	Acts 12. 1.
	7. 20.
	25.
	45.	Acts 13. 1.
	6.	Barnabas and Saul sent forth by revelation—[Paul's rapture (2 Cor. 12. 2), followed by the mysterious malady, the 'thorn in the flesh']—leave Antioch's seaport, SELEUCEIA, and preaching first to the Jews in their synagogues, traverse CYPRUS (E. to W.) from SALAMIS to PAPHOS. Here, the pro-consul ('deputy') Sergius Paulus is converted, notwithstanding the perverting influence of Barjesus, a Jewish false prophet, self-styled Elymas i.e. the wise man (Arabic) or Magus, who is struck blind. Saul is henceforth called Paul.
	13.	They cross into PAPHYLIA, and from PERGA Mark returns to Jerusalem. They pass the Taurus Range into the wild highlands of PISIDIA and LYCAONIA (cp. ch. 15. 38), even beyond the Roman pale. At ANTIOCH in PISIDIA the Gentiles eagerly believe; but the Jews' jealous opposition obliges Paul and Barnabas to declare their commission to the Gentiles. Expelled, they go to ICONIUM, and after a long stay escape to LYSTRA, where Paul heals a cripple, and the simple people mistake him and Barnabas for Mercurius and Jupiter in human form. (? Timothy, his mother Eunice and grandmother Lois, converted, 2 Tim. 1. 2, 5). Their Jewish persecutors from Antioch and Iconium excite the populace, and Paul is stoned, but revives. Paul and Barnabas depart for DERBE, and found a church there; then retrace their steps, encouraging and organising their new converts, to PERGA. Sailing from ATTALeia to ANTIOCH, they report a door of faith opened to Gentiles.
	45. 46.	Acts 14. 1. 8—19.
	2 Cor. 11. 25. Acts 14. 20.
	Jos. Ant. 20. 5, 3.	Disturbances occur (a) in Judea—between the Jews, Romans, and Samaritans, (b) in Rome, —by the Jews' attacks on Christians (? 'at Christus' instigation', Suetonius). Claudius makes the licentious and avaricious Felix (brother of his favourite Pallas, and husband of Herod Agrippa I.'s apostate daughter, Drusilla), procurator of Judea, and expels the Jews from Rome.
53. [51.] 51. [50.] 52.	Acts 15. 1. Gal. 2. 1—10.	At Antioch, Pharisaic converts from Judea revive the question settled 15 years before in Cornelius' case, and assert that, to be saved, Gentile converts must join the Jewish Church by circumcision. Paul and Barnabas opposing are deputed (by revelation), with Titus and others, to consult the Apostles and Church of Jerusalem upon the controversy. (St. Paul's 3rd visit , 14 years after his conversion, in which he first meets St. John, Gal. 2. 9). In private conference, Paul explains his teaching to the chief Apostles, Peter, James, and John. They approve, and recognise the distinct commissions of Peter and Paul, but urge collections for the poor at Jerusalem on the Gentile churches). The Apostles and elders meet to consider the question, and (advised by James 'the Lord's brother') decide that Gentile converts need not be circumcised, thus making the Church formally and avowedly universal (1). But the Gentile converts are warned against those usages forbidden in the Mosaic Law which tended to idolatry, cp. 1 Cor. 8. & 10 (being taught consideration for Jews, who were everywhere reminded in their synagogues
	Acts 15. 13.

(1) The earliest great controversy of the Church was, not whether Gentiles might be admitted at all, but whether they might be admitted without passing through 'the door' of Judaism. Hence the immense importance of this decision, and the 'joy'.

	Acts 15. 23.	of their obligations to keep the Law, and against the immortality of the age (cp. 1 Cor. 5. 9). The inspired teachers ('prophets') Judas Barnabas and Silas (the Silvanus of the Epistles), bearing letters to this effect, accompany Barnabas and Paul to Antioch and work there; Judas returns. Later, at Antioch, Peter and even Barnabas surrender this Christian liberty to Pharisaic emissaries from Jerusalem, whom Paul rebuts, openly rebuking Peter.
	Gal. 2. 11-14.
	Second Missionary Journey of St. Paul (with Silas and Timothy).
53.	Acts 15. 36.	Paul and Barnabas proposing to revisit the converts of their 1st journey disagree about taking Mark. Barnabas and Mark revisit CYPRIUS; Paul and Silas, SYRIA and CILICIA.
[51.]	Acts 16. 1.	Passing through DERBE, Paul finds at LYSTRA Timothy, a convert in high repute, and desiring to satisfy the Jewish converts as to his scrupulous observance of Moses' Law, circumcises Timothy, because a Jew on the mother's side, before taking him as evangelist (3 Tim. 4. 5). They deliver the council's letters (ch. 15. 23). After founding churches yet further N. in PHRYGIA and GALATIA, where the mixed and emotional people received him as 'an angel of God' (Paul is detained here by sickness), they pass through Mysia to ALEXANDRIA TROAS. Here Luke joins them ('we', v. 10). The Holy Spirit which had forbidden him to preach in proconsular Asia (1) i.e. Mysia, Caria, Lydia, or to enter Bithynia, summons Paul into Europe.
	Gal. 4. 13-15.
[52.]	Acts 16. 11.	After a rapid passage by the Id. of SAMOTHRACE to NEAPOLIS, Paul reaches PHILIPPI, a Roman colonia (2) in Macedonia, and becomes the guest of Lydia, a Thyatiran purple seller, a proselyte converted by his preaching. Paul casts an oracular spirit out of a slave-girl. Her owners accusing Paul and Silas of treasonable religious innovations, the magistrates scourge and imprison them. While praying and singing at night, they are set free during an earthquake, save and baptize the governor of the prison, and are cared for by him. Next day, after asserting their Roman citizenship and demanding public reparation, they are invited to depart. Luke apparently remains in Philippi (until Acts 20. 6, 'we').

	35-39.
	Acts 17. 1.	Paul and Silas pass by the Via Egnatia (the overland thoroughfare between E. and W.) through AMPHIPOLIS and APOLLONIA to THESSALONICA (salonica), capital of Macedonia, where many Jews, proselytes, and women of position are converted. Paul works for his living—every Jew was taught a trade—and the Philippi church sends Paul aid. But the Jews rouse the populace against them as assertors of Christ's Kingdom, and follow them to BERECA, whither they escape by night. The Bereans show a noble spirit of enquiry. But the Thessalonian Jews excite the populace against Paul, and he goes to ATHENS by sea. Silas and Timothy stay; while awaiting them, Paul declares to the Athenians their Unknown God, converting Dionysius the Areopagite and others.
54.	16.
	Acts 18. 1.	Passing to CORINTH (3), Paul lodges and works at tent-making with Aquila and Priscilla, Jews exiled from Rome by Claudius' decree. Again the Philippians aid him (2 Cor. 11. 9; Phil. 4. 15, 16). Silas and Timothy bring Paul news of the Macedonian churches; after a vain appeal to the Jews, Paul leaves the synagogue and preaches henoceforward to the Gentiles in the adjacent house of a proselyte, Justus, with great results. Encouraged by a special revelation, he stays 18 months, and meanwhile writes his 1st and 2nd Epistles to the Thessalonians .
	5.
55.	12.	The Corinthian Jews accuse Paul of heresy before Gallio, the new pro-consul, who (unlike Pilate) refuses to interfere; they thus indirectly strengthen Paul's position. 'A good while' after, Paul sails with Silas and Timothy for EPHESUS, where Aquila and Priscilla stop. Paul hastens by CESAREA to JERUSALEM for Pentecost, and returns to ANTIOCH.
[54.]	Jos. Ant. 20. 7.	Nero Emperor. Zealots and Sicarii (see Jewish Sects) infest Judaea. Felix uses them (4), but disperses 4000 Sicarii under an Egyptian (Acts 21. 38), a self-styled prophet and miracle worker.
55.	Acts 18. 24-28.	Apollos, an eloquent and learned Alexandrian Jew, a disciple of John the Baptist and a fervent missionary, arrives at Ephesus. Aquila and Priscilla instruct him further in Christianity (cp. ch. 18. 2-6.), and the Ephesian recommends him to the Corinthian church, where he sows the seed planted by Paul, proving the Messianism of Jesus from the Old Testament.
	Third Missionary Journey of St. Paul.
56.	Acts 18. 21.	Meanwhile, Paul again revisits PHRYGIA and GALATIA ('upper coasts' i.e. E. tablelands of the interior). At EPHESUS he instructs 12 disciples of John, on whom the Holy Ghost descends after baptism in Jesus' name. After 3 months, opposition forces him to leave the synagogue for Tyrannus' school; but during 3 years, God attests Paul's mission by extraordinary miracles, cp. by an evil spirit's confusion; and the practitioners of magic publicly confess and burn their books.
[54.]	Acts 19. 1.	During Paul's stay at Ephesus he pays a visit to Corinth, unrecorded in Acts (2 Cor. 13. 1), where he found much that was painful (2 Cor. 2. 1), and was compelled to deal sternly with transgressors (2 Cor. 13. 2, read, as when I was present the second time), but was humbled and made to mourn (2 Cor. 12. 21). Returning to Ephesus, (7) he addresses a letter to the Corinthians (now lost), warning them 'not to keep company with fornicators' (1 Cor. 5. 9). Apollos returns from Corinth to Ephesus at some time during the apostle's stay (1 Cor. 14. 17).
57.	1 Cor. 16. 9.
	Acts 19. 13.	Paul intending to pass through Macedonia and Achaea to Jerusalem, and thence visit Rome, the Gentile metropolis, sends into Macedonia Timothy and Erastus; Timothy to visit Corinth also if possible (Apollos declining, 1 Cor. 16. 10-12), and to recall Paul's teaching. Members of the house of Chloe arrive in Ephesus with intelligence from Corinth, while other messengers (Stephanas, etc.) bring a letter of enquiry from the Corinthian church, and take back the 1st Epistle to the Corinthians , in which Paul rebukes their party spirit (ch. 1. 11, 12), tolerance of sin (ch. 5), strifes and quarrels (ch. 6), abuses in celebrating the Lord's Supper (ch. 11), doubts as to the resurrection (ch. 15), and answers seriatim the questions they had proposed (ch. 7. 1, 2, etc.); he bids them collect for the saints at Jerusalem, and states his plans (ch. 16. 1-9)—Titus is sent to learn its result.
[57.]	15. 22-28.	Meanwhile, Demetrius, maker of silver models of the world-renowned temple of Diana (alleging Paul's successful attacks on idolatry), causes the Ephesian populace to seize Aristarchus and Gaius. The town clerk (5) defends them and appeases the mob, referring Demetrius &c. to the 2 Cor. 9. Gal. 1. 1-16.	Paul, surprised by news that 'false,' i.e. Judaising, 'brethren' were inducing the Galatian converts to subject themselves to the Mosaic Law and questioning his commission, writes his Epistle to the Galatians , in which, appealing to the converts' history and his own, and to the Old Testament itself, he indignantly condemns these intruders, and repeats that the Gentiles are saved by faith without conformity to the Law.

38.]	Acts 20. 2.	After evangelizing GREECE to the Adriatic (Ithyrium , Rom. 15. 19), Paul winters 3 months at CORINTH (cp. vs. 3, 6 with 1 Cor. 16. 6, 7 and the ref. to 'the city', Rom. 16. 23), and writes the Epistle to the Romans , 'his master-exposition of Christian doctrine' sent by Phoebe of Cenchreae (Rom. 16. 1). Regarding his work E. of the Adriatic as finished (1), he now purposes visiting the West, esp. Spain, via Rome—after carrying the collections of the Gentile churches to the poor believers in Jerusalem, and he asks the prayers of the Roman church for his deliverance from the unbelievers in Judaea.
	Rom. 15. 18-32.	The Jews conspiring to kill Paul, he returns through MACEDONIA; his companions sail direct to TROAS, where Paul joins them (through PHILIPPI, rejoined here by Luke) after the Passover, and raises Eutychus to life. Overtaking by land his companions' ship at ASSOS, Paul sails to MITYLENE, CHIOS, TROGYLLIUM, and MILETUS, whither he summons the elders of Ephesus, distant about 50 miles. By their memory of his unsparing and disinterested labours (vs. 18-24, 31), he warns and encourages them against future false teachers and persecutors, and bids them farewell. Paul so. sail by the islands COOS and RHODES, and change ships at PATARA in Lycia and at TYRE, where they seek the Christians and stay 7 days.
	Acts 20. 8. 13. 17-38.	Unhaken by prophetic warnings of imprisonment at Jerusalem and entreaties here, at PTOLEMAIS and CÆSAREA, Paul enters JERUSALEM with the collections from Macedonia, Achaia and Galatia (1 Cor. 16. 1; Acts 24. 17), being bound in the spirit to preach the gospel at all hazards (Acts 20. 22-24), and yearning for the salvation of his fellow Jews (Rom. 9. 1-5 & 10. 1-4 & 11. 14, etc.). But to reassure the Jewish converts, who understood that Paul taught the Jewish believers among the Gentiles to abandon Moses' law, Paul, by James' advice, undertakes for 4 persons under a Nazirite vow the expenses of its discharge; reputed by the Jews a meritorious act. During the week, Jews of proconsular Asia provoke a riot by asserting, as a proof of his anti-Mosaic teaching, that Paul had polluted the Temple by introducing uncircumcised Gentiles (Trophimus).
	Acts 21. 1. 4. 20. 27. 31.	Claudius Lysias, commander of the Roman garrison in Herod's citadel Antonia overlooking the Temple, descends to quell the riot, and saves Paul from summary execution, supposing him the Egyptian ringleader of Sicarii (murderers , A. V.) dispersed by Felix (34). Undeceived, he gives Paul the long desired opportunity of vindicating his own teaching and loyalty as a Jew.
	Acts 22. 1. 22. 24.	The mob interrupt Paul's narrative, at the statement of his mission to the Gentiles by revelation in the Temple, and renew the uproar. Lysias, unable to ascertain Paul's offence, takes him into the castle for examination by torture; stopped by Paul's assertion of Roman citizenship (which involved protection also), he brings him next day before the Sanhedrin. Paul, despairing of a fair trial, appeals to his brother Pharisees, asserting the teaching of their common tenet, the resurrection, to be his sole offence; Lysias removes Paul, lest he be torn in pieces between the contending Sadducees and Pharisees who incline to Paul (cp. ch. 5. 34, 39). That night, Paul is cheered by the revelation that his cherished wish to preach in Rome will be fulfilled.
38.]	Acts 23. 1. 6. 11.	The night following, Lysias, warned of the plot of 40 Jews to kill Paul, sends him to Felix at Cæsarea for trial; where (12 days after his arrival in Jerusalem) Ananias and the Sanhedrin accuse Paul through Tertullus (but, as Paul shews, wholly without evidence), of sedition against Rome, and claim his surrender to their jurisdiction as a profaner of their Temple.
	Acts 24. 2. 22.	St. Paul, prisoner of the Romans. —Felix, though convinced of Paul's innocence, (to please the Jews, now desperate under his cruel rule), keeps him in prison 2 years, hoping for a bribe; meanwhile, he and his adulteress-consort Drusilla (sister of H. Agrippa II., and wife of Azizus king of Emesa) feign an interest in Christianity. St. Luke was apparently St. Paul's constant companion during his imprisonments (Acts 27. 1; Col. 4. 14; 2 Tim. 4. 11). His Gospel (whether written now, during imprisonment at Rome, or after Jerusalem's destruction) breathes St. Paul's spirit.
	Jos. B. J. 2. 17. 9.	Ananias, deposed by Felix, is murdered by the Sicarii (cp. Acts 23. 3). Felix denounced to Nero, esp. for openly supporting the foreigners of Cæsarea in riots against the Jews, is recalled.
62. 50.]	Acts 25. 1. 12. Jos. Ant. 20. 5. 2. Acts 26. 1.	Festus, the new procurator, after unconsciously thwarting a plot against Paul's life, and practically acquitting him (ch. 25. 18, 19), proposes a fresh trial at Jerusalem to please the Jews: an unjust concession, which obliges Paul to claim to be tried before Nero himself. Festus, unacquainted with Jewish law, invites AGRIPPA II. (governor of the Temple, and king of Trachonitis and Abilene, A.D. 53) (2), during his congratulatory visit with his sister Bernice, to help him frame Paul's indictment. Before Agrippa, Paul recalls his notoriously zealous Pharisaism and persecution of Christians, declares that his conversion and missionary work among the Gentiles were by direct revelation, and that he taught only the outcome of the Law and Prophets, viz. Jesus, identified by His death and resurrection with the 'hope of Israel,' i.e. the long-promised Messiah, and deliverer of both Gentiles and Jews from Satan, sin, and death. Agrippa reports Paul innocent, but his appeal to Nero obliges his transfer to Rome.
	cp. Acts 25. 8. & 25. 11.
	Acts 27. 1.	St. Paul's Voyage to Rome. Paul, Luke, and Aristarchus sail, with the centurion Julius and other prisoners, in a coasting vessel of Adramyttium to SIDON, and against adverse winds to MYRA in Lycia; thence in an Encouraged by the revelation to Paul and by his example, the soldiers sacrifice the boat to keep the ship's crew. They fail to reach the shore on the Island of MELITA (Malta), but all (276 souls) are saved after shipwreck. The sailors ('barbarous' = not Greek) treat them kindly. Paul is unhurt by a viper's bite (cp. Mark 16. 7). While navigation is suspended (3 mths.), Paul cures the father of Publius the governor and the sick persons. In the spring, they sail in the Castor and Pollux by SYRACUSE and MELITAE to PUTEOLI (in Bay of Naples); thence reaching Rome by the Appian Way, escorted by Roman Christians from APPII FORUM (43 Rom. miles) and TRES TABERNAE = shops (cp. Mark 16. 7).

63. [61.]	22. 23. 24. 25. 26. 27. 28. 29. 30.	Paul is allowed to live by himself 'in his own hired house', but in charge of the Imperial Guard [possibly within the precincts of Nero's palace, Phil. 1. 13 (1)], and chained by one arm awaiting his accusers' arrival. Assembling the Jews, he explains his circumstances and says that Jesus was the Messiah of the Law and Prophets. Some are convinced; the others (cp. Acts 18. 6. 9) of others obliges him again to assert sadly (Rom. 9. 2 & cp. 10. 1) his conversion to the Gentiles. During 2 years, (Luke, Timothy, Epaphras, Aristarchus, John Mark, Tychicus and Demas sharing his imprisonment), Paul teaches undisturbed, with much success (Phil. 1. 12-18) even among the Imperial Guard and in the palace ('Nero's household'; (1) Phil. 1. 13). Meanwhile, he continues his 'care of all the churches' by the Epistle to the Colossians apparently caused by Epaphras' report, Col. 4. 12, 13), and the Epistle to the Ephesians sent by Tychicus, who reports between the Apostle and these churches (Col. 4. 7, 8). The letter may possibly have been a circular or 'encyclical' letter (2) to the churches of proconsular Asia including Laodicea (Col. 4. 16). Paul's convert, Onesimus, a runaway slave, whom he sends to Tychicus, bearing the reconciliatory Epistle to his master Philemon of Colossae . These letters show Paul expecting his release; and were probably followed (either now, or at a somewhat later period) by the Epistle to the Hebrews (3), written, if not by St. Paul himself, certainly under his influence, to the churches of Judaea (or, as some think, to Jewish converts generally) to give a full and final demonstration of the true relation of Judaism to Christianity, and to give a view of the judgments impending on the nation and Jerusalem.
	1 Pet. 1. 1. 1 Pet. 5. 12, 13.	Mark's proposed movements from Rome to Asia (Philem. 24; Col. 4. 10), his present testimony at Ephesus (2 Tim. 4. 11), and other evidence suggest that the 1st Epistle of Peter is testimony to the truth of the Gospel taught by Paul, was addressed to the churches in Asia Minor (founded chiefly by Paul), and was sent from Babylon by Silvanus about this time—Tychicus the '2 years' end, the Philippian church sends Paul a contribution by Epaphroditus who, after an illness due to devoted work, carries back the Epistle to the Philippians , which presents Paul in strict custody and some danger, expecting anxiously a speedy sentence, and facing death, but seeking their prayers for his earlier restoration to them, and expecting it.
	Phil. 2. 25-30. Phil. 1. 19-26.	Interregnum in Judaea between the Procuratorships of Festus and Albinus. ALBINUS, a priest, murders 'James the Lord's brother,' and the chief Christians in Jerusalem.
	The '2 years' of the Acts of the Apostles (ch. 28. 30) ends.
63.		Paul is apparently tried (Nero's justice being notorious) and liberated. Henceforward, with its traceable only by the Pastoral Epistles. He probably visited the churches of Macedonia and Asia Minor.—Philippi, Colossae, Laodicea, Hierapolis, and Ephesus, where he leaves Timothy.
65. [67.]	1 Tim. 1. 3. 1 Tim. 3. 4, 15.	Thence Paul starts for Macedonia, and during some detention writes the 1st Epistle to Timothy . He then visits Crete and Miletus, Ephesus (1 Tim. 4. 15; 2 Tim. 1. 18, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48, 49, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60, 61, 62, 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 71, 72, 73, 74, 75, 76, 77, 78, 79, 80, 81, 82, 83, 84, 85, 86, 87, 88, 89, 90, 91, 92, 93, 94, 95, 96, 97, 98, 99, 100).

There he seems to have been arrested, sent to Rome, and treated as a criminal. His Asia Minor except Onesiphorus, stand aloof. 'Only Luke is with him when, expecting death after his last examination, he writes the 2nd Epistle to Timothy , entreating him to come before whom to bring Mark, as if to comfort his last hours and to witness his martyrdom (cp. Phil. 2. 12).
	(cp. Rev. 1-3.)	A doubtful tradition says that St. Paul visited Spain in accordance with his purpose (cp. Rom. 15. 24 [58]); also that St. Paul was beheaded (as a Roman citizen) and St. Peter crucified in Rome in the Neronian persecution following the Great Fire. If so, the 2nd Epistle of Peter would have been written just before his journey to Rome (or thence) for St. Peter, expecting death shortly (by revelation, 2 Pet. 1. 14), to warn the Christians against the seductive false teachers when the Apostles should be no more, and to encourage them to hold fast to the doctrines of the holy prophets and Apostles—giving a final endorsement to St. Paul's Epistles.

The Roman armies are expelled.—Vespasian and his son Titus march into Galilee, and aided by Jewish dissensions, close upon and besiege Jerusalem. The Jewish body, profiting by Christ's warning (Mt. 24. 15-20, &c.), escapes to Pella beyond Jordan. After 5 months' siege, 1,100,000 Jews are said to have perished by famine, fire, and sword. Our Lord's words, Mk. 13. 19; Lk. 17. 37, the Temple and city are destroyed in spite of the efforts; 97,000 Jews are taken captive, and VESPASIAN, made Emperor by the army, returns by a triumph at Rome, the final obliteration of the Jewish 'Holy Place and Nation'.

Illustrations from English writers of the period of the Authorized Version in this Glossary are chosen, as much as possible, from authors of the Elizabethan and Jacobean times; but now and then, to indicate that a word is old, an example of it has been given from Chaucer, while on the contrary a few examples have been selected from Milton and Dryden when a word continued to be used in its Biblical sense to late date. With the exception of Spenser, Shakespeare, Milton, Burton (Tegg, 1857), and Dryden, the works mainly used for illustration are those published in (1) Mr. Arber's series of reprints; (2) the Fuller Worthies Library (Grosart); (3) the Old Shakespeare Society's volumes; and (4) the publications of the Parker Society.

Common abbreviations have been employed for the parts of speech and to indicate the languages with which each word is connected—erial symbols of abstract or spiritual ideas have become rational and familiar. It would be useless, if possible, to have a complete view of Scripture symbolism. Then, on the other hand, there are many specific types, as in the institutions of Jewish Law, and comparisons instituted for some special use, as in the Parables of our Lord, which it would be necessary formally to explain. But between these extremes, there is a large mass of imagery characteristic of Scripture, if peculiar to it, arising partly from Oriental modes of thought, partly from the emblems and symbols of Old Testament heathen poetry. It has been thought that many Bible readers could be helped by a connected view of the chief symbols employed, with a reference to some of the passages where they are to be found. To attempt an exhaustive summary of these would be to trespass on the province of a Concordance:

BOMINATION OF DESOLATION, words of the Roman army, Matt. 24.

BOMINATIONS, idols, Isa. 44: 19; idolatry, Rev. 17: 4; also generally, Isa. 66: 3.

BULLETRY, faithfulness to God. See ring. An adulterous generation, a hostile army, Matt. 23: 35.

BURN, truth, faithfulness; a title of Christ, Rev. 3: 14.

NGRI (beside its general meaning as a name or name of God, see Ps. 68: 17; Job. 29: 24), the animal or controlling force of anything, of the waters, Rev. 5: 5; of the church, Rev. 1: 20, etc. (but is understood by angels here, bishops).

NIMAL CREATION, or Living Creation, as under different heads. Generalized animal creation is used to symbolize the several forms or characteristics of the spiritual world.

N. M., power manifested, Ps. 80: 13; Isa. 41: 4. underneath, made bare (as if by lying up the loose sleeve in readiness for use), revealed, Isa. 51: 9; 62: 10; 53: 1.

KNOW, generally, equipment with human principles and graces, Eph. 6: 13.

KNOW'S, slanderous words, Ps. 64: 3; cions, Ezek. 6: 10; any means or instruments of strength or attack, Num. 24: 3; 127: 4.

SHES. See Dust.

ALANCE, scarcity, famine, Rev. 6: 5; cp. 8: 14.

ALDNESS, destruction, Jer. 47: 5.

APTISM, overwhelming sorrow, Matt. 23: 35; 12: 21; transition to a new life, 1 Cor. 12: 13.

EASTS, better, 'Living Ones'; the chain in animated form, Rev. 4: 6. See East.

EASTS, propensities of the natural man unsoftened, Isa. 11: 6-8; ignorant, brutish, 2 Pet. 2: 12; heathen kingdoms, Dan. 7: 7; 8: 9-10; antichrist, Rev. 18: 21; 20: 4; of bitterness, a depraved state of heart, 2 Cor. 13: 12.

ITERNNESS, oppression, misery, Amos 6: 1; Rev. 8: 11.—Root of bitterness, pernicious error, as the cause of evil, Heb. 12: 15; 12: 16; of bitterness, a depraved state of heart, 2 Cor. 13: 12.

LACKNESS, famine, Jer. 14: 2; Joel 2: 6.

LOOD, natural descent, Acts 17: 26; 17: 26; His sacrifice, Rom. 8: 3; Heb. 9: 12; Rev. 12: 11.—R., resisting to, serving even to martyrdom.

ODY, as organized and living system, the church, 1 Cor. 12: 12-27; Eph. 1: 23; 1: 23.

OOK, a register or enrolment, as of citizens, Ps. 67: 6; Dan. 12: 1; Luke 10: 20; 10: 20; the record of the living, naturally, 20: 33; Ps. 69: 26; spiritually, Rev. 3: 5; 3: 5.

OW, strength, Job. 29: 20; victory, Rev. 19: 15.

READ, livelihood generally; the human or portion, as of abundance, Ezek. 16: 16; of adversity, Isa. 30: 20; of tears, Ps. 60: 2; of wickedness, of deceit, of interest, denote evil ways of living, Prov. 4: 17; 20: 17; 31: 27. Christ the R. of Life; the support and sustenance of the soul, John 6: 50.

BRIDE and BRIDEGROOM, the Church and Christ, Eph. 5: 32; Rev. 19: 7-8. See Marriage.

BRIERS and THORNS, perverse, injurious persons, Ezek. 2: 6.

BRIMSTONE, utter destruction, Job 15: 18; Rev. 9: 17, 18.

BULLS, strong and furious foes, Ps. 22: 12.

CANDLESTICK. See Lamp.

CEDARS, great men, Zech. 11: 2-4. C. of Lebanon, kings and great men of Judah, Isa. 2: 13.—Top of its branches, princes and nobility, Ezek. 17: 4; goodness and strength of character, Ps. 22: 12.

CHAFF, worthless persons, Job 21: 18; Matt. 3: 12; cp. Ps. 1: 4; Jer. 23: 28.

CHAIN, bondage, affliction, Lam. 3: 7.

CHERUB, CHERUBIM, probably the angels, material or spiritual, by which God executes His will; the four faces or forms representing different aspects of the Divine working; the intelligence and sympathy of the man, the patience and verifiable strength of the ox, the majestic power of the lion, the sublimity and mystery of the eagle's flight. They are the bearers of God's chariot, Ezek. 1: 5-20; the supports of His throne, Rev. 4: 6-8. The cherubim upon the mercy seat signify the employment of all these powers in God's redeeming purpose, Heb. 9: 5; Ps. 18: 10.

CIRCUMCISION, readiness for God's service, Deut. 10: 6 (the contrast in Deut. 10: 6);—The C. of the Jewish people, Gal. 2: 3.—The true C. of Christians, Phil. 3: 3.

CITIES and COUNTRIES. See under Babylon, Jerusalem, &c.

CLOUD, a multitude or army, Isa. 60: 8; Rev. 19: 14.

COLUMN. See Pillar.

DOOR, OPEN, opportunity for free propagation of the Gospel, 1 Cor. 16: 9; Col. 4: 3; Rev. 3: 8.

DRAGON, an enemy in power, Ezek. 29: 3; the devil, Rev. 12: 7.

DRUNKENNESS, madness in sin, Isa. 28: 2; helplessness under Divine judgments, Isa. 51: 21.

DUST AND ASHES, human frailty, Job 13: 12.

EAGLE, leader of an army, Ezek. 17: 3, 7; the Roman force, Matt. 24: 28.—Eagle's Wings, Divine support, Ex. 19: 4; Rev. 12: 4. See Cherub.

EARTHQUAKE, political revolution, Joel 2: 10.

EGYPT, a wicked people, Rev. 11: 8; cp. Brigden, Sodom.

EYE, moral discernment, the affection, the desires; Matt. 6: 22; Eph. 1: 15; Prov. 22: 9; Ps. 25: 15.

EYES of the LORD, His watchful providence, Ps. 34: 15; Rev. 5: 6.

FACE, the SHINING of, prepossessing, Ps. 31: 16; 89: 15; Dan. 9: 17.

FIRE, God's wrath and its effects, Ps. 18: 8; Jer. 48: 43; Ezek. 22: 21; 22: 21; purification, Mal. 3: 2; discrimination, Matt. 3: 11; 1 Cor. 3: 13.

BY THE REV. T. K. CHEYNE, M.A., Fellow of Balliol College, Oxford, and Lecturer on Hebrew and the Old Testament.

A primary object of the following list is to promote a more correct pronunciation of the proper names in the Bible. Probably no educated person would be satisfied to pronounce the names which occur in French history as correctly as many pronounce those in the New and almost all those in the Old Testament. Strict accuracy is no doubt unattainable. In some cases (e.g. Moses, Aaron, Solomon, Isaac, Samuel, Jeremiah) the forms adopted by the Authorized Version are borrowed from the Septuagint through the medium of the Vulgate. Here the correct pronunciation would require an alteration of familiar names, which would be quite intolerable. But even where the present forms are derived from the Hebrew, a strictly accurate pronunciation would offend by introducing a dissonance into the rude but real harmony of our English speech. Besides, that quickness of ear which is necessary for producing foreign sounds is conspicuously wanting to most natives of England. Still the prevalent system of pronouncing Biblical names seems unnecessarily wide of the mark. There is no occasion to offend so gratuitously against the laws of Hebrew sound and composition as we do at present. Not a few of our mispronunciations of Hebrew names impede the comprehension of their meaning, especially in the case of names of religious significance, where the meaning is most fully fraught with instruction.

A working compromise between pedantic precision and persistent mispronunciation is surely feasible, and it is which has been attempted in the following pages. Special care has been given to those names which contain in them the proper name of God in Hebrew. In these the accent has, as a rule, been shifted so as to bring the religious significance of the name prominently before the reader. A second and hardly less important object, though requires a little thought to realize it, is the opening up of a fresh source of information as to the thoughts, feelings, and beliefs of the Israelites and their neighbours. It is true we have an authoritative record (or rather collection of records) of Jewish religion in the Old Testament, but it is one which for the most part relates to the higher classes and choicer spirits of Israel. The proper names, on the other hand, furnish us with contemporary and undesignated evidence as to the thoughts, convictions, and feelings of persons in all ranks of society. To a very large extent they contain statements respecting God and His attributes, or respecting the less spiritual forms of religion against which the long succession of prophets struggled in vain (Isa. xvii. 8; xxvii. 9; Jer. ix. 14; Amos v. 26, &c.). They also help us to understand how the truths of spiritual monotheism found so fervent an expression in Jewish prophecy. Again, the names related to the Jews, and especially the Assyrians and Babylonians (who early came into contact with the ancestors of the Israelites) seem to have possessed a leaven of something akin to spirituality which distinguishes them from other Gentiles. Even to readers who remember that it was from Padan Aram, the Piedmont beyond the Tigris (Stanley), that Abraham sought a wife for the Child of Promise, and Rebekah a wife for Jacob, the next heir to the promises, it will be a pleasing surprise to notice the similarity in the expression of religious faith between the Israelitish proper names and the few Assyrian and Babylonian preserved in the Old Testament.

The meanings of names not of a religious character may sometimes appear strange and unnatural; but it does not follow that their interpretation is fanciful or supported by insufficient evidence. The selection of a name was, and still is, in the East, often dictated by some accidental circumstances, as by a word spoken at the birth of a child, or by some object which chanced to meet the eye of the mother. So Rachel called her last-born Benoni, the son of my sorrow, while his father called him Benjamin. It would almost appear from Luke i. 60-62 that the mother was free to give a name, subject to correction by the father. None of the meanings here given are arbitrary, and yet they are by no means equally certain, (1) because the original form of the names has sometimes become modified, and (2) because the old Hebrew literature is so scanty in extent, and so far from embodying the entire word-store of the Israelites, that it is often necessary to call in the aid of the kindred dialects (especially Aramaic and Arabic) in explaining the proper names. This is a process in which different scholars will often come to different results; but the majority of the meanings here given have at least a high degree of probability. The most doubtful ones have the sign of interrogation attached.

The student of the Bible will be thankful that the explanations of names having reference to religion are among the most probable; many of them in fact are either certain, or all but certain, thanks to recent researches. In this last class of names and in this only, the author has aimed at something like completeness. To have given an exhaustive list of names of (presumably) a non-religious character and of uncertain meaning, would have occupied much space, with little profit, if any, to the Bible student, and perhaps diverted attention from those of greater importance. Names of difficult pronunciation have, however, as a rule been included.

It only remains to be added (1) that the reader will sometimes find a discrepancy between the meanings given in the margin of his Bible and those assigned in the present list. This arises from a peculiarity of the sacred writers, who by the conditions of their mission aimed at edification rather than historical information, and often attached significance to proper names which does not etymologically belong to them. The etymologies of the Old Testament, in which those given in the margin are based, are frequently parallel to some at least of the applications of the psalms and the prophecies which we find in the New Testament. The object of the sacred writers in such cases was clearly edification only. To invest the Old Testament writers with a critical character which they nowhere claim, would involve an unreasonable violation of the laws and analogies of language. Without disparaging the advantages of sanctified study, we must never forget that to the poor the Gospel was (first) preached. The Bible was written for "the simple," that it might become the property of the whole of mankind. (2) The author has retained the familiar rendering "The LORD" for the name of God, feeling that without a lengthened explanation the correct form could hardly be made palatable to ordinary students. The form Jehovah is unhesitatingly to be rejected, as due to a misunderstanding of comparatively modern origin.

It has not been thought worth while to translate all the Greek names cited from the New Testament, a historical interest being mostly wanting. That vivid consciousness of the significance of names which we find in the Old Testament does not seem to have existed among the Greek-speaking communities, at any rate in that period of decline providentially selected for the coming of Christ. It is extremely unlikely that the Greek-speaking converts to Christianity, whose names are given in Rom. xvi., attached any weight to the meanings of the names given to them in their heathen period. Why then should we investigate them, and so confound two essentially different classes of names? On the other hand, Isaiah, Zechariah, &c., could not help being reminded of a great truth every time their names were mentioned. Names of deep religious import such as these are worthy of careful study, and show how thoroughly the truths of religion entered into the everyday life of those who bore them. Priscilla, Aquila, Andronicus, &c., on the other hand, might, for ought we know, just as well have borne any other names. One name was equally convenient, and perhaps equally unmeaning with another.

Preliminary Note on the Pronunciation of Hebrew Names in the Bible.

Vowels.—a should always be pronounced as ah; i as ee; o as oh; u as oo.

Consonants.—c should always be pronounced as k; ch as kā; j as y.

N.B.—In the subjoined List pro. or pr. means pronounce.

The pronunciations indicated below are intended to bring the conventional pronunciation of Bible names more into harmony with their true pronunciation in Hebrew.

CONCORDANCE

TO THE OLD AND NEW TESTAMENTS.

PLAN OF THE WORK.—This Concordance (based on Cruden's) contains 40,000 refs., but being intended for use with the Queen's Printers' well-known Index of Bible Persons, Places, and Subjects, refs. in the latter are seldom repeated. Meanings of words and refs. of minor importance are stated first; the other refs. follow in the order of the Books. The inflections and derivatives of a word, and phrases in which it occurs, are grouped under it alphabetically; and are in the first instance set out in full in italic, but afterwards abbreviated, the phrases being represented by a dash ("—"), to avoid repetition and facilitate comparison.

List of Biblical Names,

WITH FIGURES AND LETTERS INDICATING THE SITUATION OF THE PLACES ON THE MAPS.

Note.—The first reference figure in each case represents the number of the map; thus, Antioch (in Syria) appears on the first map in the space 121 F, and on the sixth map in the corresponding space, 621 F. The names of places at present unidentified, also classical and modern names, are omitted from the Index, and where there are several places bearing the same name, but only one of these is mentioned in Scripture, the reference is given to the latter only, thus Neapolis appears on the maps in four different situations, viz., 419 M, 422 L, 606 C, 610 C; but it will be found in the Index only under the reference 610 C.
